Camps Burn Up

Logging Camps of R. E. White at Kelliher Destroyed by Fire

"The two big logging camps of R. E. White at Kelliher were totally destroyed by fire last Friday morning at 1 o'clock, together with the clothing, bedding, money and other effects of 150 men who were employed at the camps. The total loss will aggregate from $2,500 to $3,000. No insurance was carried.

"The origin of the fire is not positively know, but it is stated that a drunken woodsman was shooting at one of the camps and that one of the shots entered the building and struck a gasoline can, the contents of which ran over the floor. Some of the gasoline, it is stated, became ignited and the blaze rapidly spread all over the interior of the camp.

"The men were all asleep when the fire was discovered and a hasty exit was necessary for them to escape the flames. As a result, they were forced to leave a large share of their personal effects in the burning buildings and these were consumed. Many of the men had their earnings in their clothing and the money also went up in smoke.

"The camps were built by the Crookston Lumber company when the Kelliher spur was extended from Funkley. They were made of logs and were located on Bullhead lake, on the outskirts of the village of Kelliher.

"Mr. White is a contractor for the Crookston Lumber company and has occupied the camps since their erection."

Record Breaker

The Month of June, 1905, Was Cold and Damp

"The month of June, 1905, will go on record as the coldest June in years, according to the statistics of the various weather observers. It has attained a lower minimum temperature than in any June in years and in the number of cool days it attained, it is said to be a rival of October. The maximum for the month has been less than 90. In the matter of precipitation it was also a record-breaker and more rain has fallen than for the same month in the past ten years. No particular damage has resulted, however. The hay harvest will be late as a result and the growth of small grains and garden stuff has been somewhat retarded, but a few balmy days will right all this. Summer resorts in this section have suffered as a result of the cool weather and, taken all in all, it has more nearly approached October than the legendary month of bowers and balmy atmospheric perfection."

Does the tax abatement proposal meet our needs?

Thief River Falls city government is seeking support for a tax abatement proposal. According to the information it prepared, the proposal is based on a request from developers for relief in establishing new plats and new lot developments. In other words, local developers have not been able to participate in recent growth occurring in Tax Increment Financing (TIF) districts. The explanation we're given is that they are unable to participate in the construction opportunities is, more or less, because they are small for-profit operations as opposed to the "larger" Midwest Minnesota Community Development Corporation (MMCDC), which is a nonprofit corporation equipped with a staff that can fill out the large amount of paperwork required for TIF projects.

There's no question that Thief River Falls has been experiencing a new phenomenon - growth. Community Development Director Mike Moore has estimated that between 25 to 27 new homes are being built every year. In addition, Thief River Falls businesses, particularly larger industries, have been hiring more people. Moore expects this growth pattern to continue and that the next census will show a population growth of over 1,000.

Even with this growth, it seems housing is being built only in the city's TIF districts.

School Board Chairman Steve Young asked a question which seems to accurately reflect the divided opinion on this subject, "Is demand driving development or is development driving demand?"

Pennington County Board of Commissioners and School District 564 have been asked to approve a tax abatement proposal. The School Board is right to proceed cautiously. Last year, it asked for and received support from taxpayers to pay more for the operation of its schools. Why should it ask citizens to pay more now?

The tax abatement proposal would work as follows: Once the single-family home (note that it must be affixed to a permanent foundation) is occupied and taxes are set for the completed home, the property owner would submit his or her tax statement for verification and upon approval, pay his or her taxes. These taxes would then be returned to the property owner in the form of a rebate every year for three years.

One person might view this as giving a homebuilder all the benefits of being a citizen without having to pay for what it costs to be a citizen. And, of course, argue that they weren't given a break on their taxes when they built a home or moved to town.

Another person looking at the project might see the program as a three-year incentive that will bring long-term benefits. After all, once the three years are over, people aren't just going to pack up their house and leave. The home will be on the tax rolls for a long time. It also might mean more students for a school district that has been hurt by declining enrollment. The cost will be negligible as it will be spread out over the entire tax base.

The tax abatement issue is important to the business community, too. If, for example, potential employees don't like the community or can't find a place to live in the community, they will be less inclined to move here, if at all. And, if a business can't find employees, it might locate or relocate somewhere else.

Certainly, there are many other options to encouraging growth. I suspect Thief River Falls is one of the few communities in the region that doesn't have an incentive program. Drive up and down Highways 59, 75 or 32 and/or visit community Web sites, and you'll see advertisements offering things like free lots to individuals who promise to build and live in the community.

Is a tax abatement proposal the best answer? School Board officials are waiting for some questions to be answered, specifically, is there an end-date? In other words, at what point is the offer taken off the table? (The three-year abatement begins only after the home is occupied.) Is there a limit to how many homes may receive a tax abatement? And, it was its understanding too, that only two of the three primary taxing authorities - city, county and school district - were required to approve the program, but a recent statement from the city seems to indicate that approval from all three is required. These are all basic questions that need to be answered.

Of course, then local officials have to decide what side of the issue they fall on. It's a difficult decision and one which local citizens have a stake in. Let your representatives know how you feel on the subject.

Coleman supports plan to protect sugar

Minnesota Senator Norm Coleman and Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Saxby Chambliss (R-GA) reached an agreement with the White House on June 29 that will hold harmless U.S. sugar policy through the life of the 2002 Farm Bill, which expires December 31, 2007, by stopping any and all imports of sugar under CAFTA, NAFTA, and future trade agreements that would otherwise break the cap on total sugar imports set under the Farm Bill. Coleman had refused to back the Central American-Dominican Republic Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR) until the White House made this commitment.

"I firmly believe that the future of the U.S. sugar industry is tied to renewable fuels, just like corn and soybeans," said Coleman. "Not only are we stopping CAFTA, NAFTA, and future trade agreements from pushing sugar imports over the current limit set in the Farm Bill, but we are laying the ground work for the future of this industry which is so extremely important to our state. I've seen the Brazil model first-hand and how a sugar-to-ethanol program can fuel an entire country and I am absolutely committed to taking this three-year solution and expanding and extending it in the 2007 Farm Bill so, along with corn and soybeans, sugar can make the Brazil model a reality here at home."

"Although the issue right now is strictly CAFTA, my sugar beet farmers and cooperatives and I have been extremely worried that imports under CAFTA, NAFTA, and future trade agreements could sink the U.S. sugar program by pushing imports over the maximum import cap established under the Farm Bill," said Coleman. "Under today's agreement, the White House has committed in writing that our worries will never materialize as long as this Farm Bill is in place. That means not one teaspoon of sugar will be allowed into the United States – under CAFTA, NAFTA, or any other trade agreement – over the limit now set by this Farm Bill. I know my farmers wanted a permanent solution to a long-term problem and I do, too, but today I was able to secure an insurance policy that fully and totally protects them through the life of this Farm Bill and we need that insurance."

Under the agreement reached by Coleman, Chairman Chambliss and the White House, any sugar imports exceeding 1.532 million short tons (the cap on imports established by law under the Farm Bill) would be denied entry into the United States unless an equivalent amount of U.S. sugar is converted into ethanol or other non-food uses. The agreement specifies that if the 1.532 short ton limit is exceeded, an amount equal to the first 109,000 short tons over the cap must be converted into ethanol. Any amounts over that could also be converted to ethanol or non-food uses, or will otherwise be denied entry into the United States. In addition to the ethanol program, the agreement also requires a study on the long term promise of a sugar-to-ethanol program.

"I know that my farmers and cooperatives would have liked a more permanent solution as would I, but what I have bought for this critically important Minnesota industry is an insurance policy that will fully protect them for at least three years," said Coleman. "Consider this: Even if Congress does not pass a CAFTA or any other trade agreement between now and the end of this Farm Bill, some believe that NAFTA imports alone could reach 900,000 tons, blowing the roof clear off the cap set in the Farm Bill, but this agreement ends that threat to families from Roseau to Renville. We need that insurance policy."

"I have fought for more than two years for my sugar farmers and cooperatives on this issue and I value the friendships I have with Jim Horvath at American Crystal, David Roche at Minn-Dak, John Richmond at Southern Minnesota and all the farm families they represent so incredibly well," said Coleman. "I don't know what other commitments they can get in this process, but what I do know for sure is they have this three-year agreement and my long-term commitment and dedication to the future success of this industry to rely on. I'm with my sugar farmers for the long haul and I believe this is the best way to get to the goal we both so firmly share."

MFU pleased wth passage of energy bill

On June 28, the U.S. Senate passed a comprehensive energy bill by an overwhelming margin of 85-12. The legislation contains important provisions for agriculture. Highlights in the Senate's energy bill include an eight billion-gallon Renewable Fuel Standard (RFS), Renewable Portfolio Standards (RPS), and the extension of biodiesel tax credits.

The eight billion gallon RFS will require oil manufactures to use at least eight billion gallons of renewable fuels, most likely ethanol, annually by 2012. The Renewable Energy Standard (RPS) will mandate that 10 percent of the United States electrical generation be derived from renewable sources by the year 2020. Renewable energy includes energy produced from a wide range of sources such as wind, hydroelectric, solar and other agricultural crops and residues. This legislation also extends biodiesel tax incentives that were created in the 2004 American JOBS Creation Act to 2010.

"The renewable fuels standard will benefit national security and help to lower the U.S. trade deficit by reducing the nation's dependence on foreign oil. It will create jobs in rural America through renewable fuels production and strengthen the demand for agricultural commodities," said Al Christopherson, Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation president. "It will protect air quality, help to reduce auto emissions and boost farm income. And, it will provide flexibility to the nation's petroleum refiners in meeting the oxygenate requirement of the Clean Air Act."

"Farmers need this rural economic stimulus package, and they are ready and able to produce the commodities needed for fuel production," said Christopherson. "Farm Bureau applauds both the House and Senate for passing comprehensive energy bills, and encourages the energy conference committee to maintain high standards for renewable fuels."

"We thank Senators Coleman and Dayton for their support of the RFS, RPS and biodiesel tax credits. Minnesota's senators have represented their state's interest and proven the importance of renewable based fuels to the nation," said Christopherson. "We also applaud Congressmen Gil Gutknecht for introducing and Mark Kennedy and Collin Peterson for cosponsoring the eight billion gallon Renewable Fuels Act in the House. The House's Renewable Fuels Act of 2005 will help support the Senate's eight billion gallon RFS language in the conference committee."

With the House already having passed their version of an energy bill (H.R.6), a final comprehensive energy bill will be worked out in conference committee and is expected to reach President Bush's desk soon. Issues that will need to be worked out in the conference process include: the size of the Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS), the inclusion of some form of MTBE liability, the inclusion of tax credits for renewable energy, the inclusion of a seismic inventory of the Outer Continental Shelf and revenue relief for domestic oil and gas production.

MSGA praises Sen. Coleman for support

Sen. Norm Coleman's recent announcement that he will support the Dominican Republic – Central American Free Trade Agreement (DR-CAFTA) was welcome news to the Minnesota Soybean Growers Association (MSGA).

"Minnesota's soybean farmers have much to gain from DR-CAFTA," said Bob Worth, newly elected MSGA president. "Its ratification will result in the immediate elimination of tariffs on the exportation of soybeans, soybean meal and soybean flour. DR-CAFTA will also expand access for pork and poultry, the soybean farmer's largest consumer of domestic soybean meal."

The agreement is expected to expand a $2.4 billion two-way trade relationship in agricultural, food and fishery products. According to the MSGA, CAFTA will give U.S. agricultural exporters the same or better access to CAFTA consumers as competitors, providing new opportunities to a regional market where U.S. exports currently total nearly $1 billion.

"Senator Coleman's support provides soybean farmers with significant, real, and immediate benefits," said Worth. "We appreciate Senator Coleman's support."

Senators support Rural Renaissance

Senators Norm Coleman (R-MN) and Mark Pryor (D-AR) have announced the introduction of the bipartisan "Rural Renaissance II Act," which would establish a private-public partnership to provide low interest loans and grants to critical rural infrastructure projects. Rural Renaissance II, which is based on legislation the senators introduced earlier, would authorize the issuance of bonds to raise capital to provide for low interest loans and grants. Senators Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Mike DeWine (R-OH), and Bill Nelson (D-FL) joined Pryor and Coleman in this effort.

Under the legislation, low interest loans and grants would be made available to communities of 50,000 persons or fewer, including for water and waste facilities; affordable housing; community facilities, including hospitals, fire and police stations, and nursing and assisted living facilities; farmer owned value-added agriculture or renewable energy projects, including ethanol, biodiesel, and wind; distance learning and telemedicine; high-speed Internet access; and rural teleworks projects.

Rural Renaissance II modifies the original legislation by utilizing a private-public partnership with rural electric cooperatives, allowing them to issue bonds to raise the necessary capital to provide low interest loans for critical rural development projects, In turn, the cooperatives would contribute to a fund that would make grants for the same rural infrastructure purposes. It is estimated that for each $1 billion in bonds issued, $27 million in grants would be made available to rural communities in need of infrastructure projects.

"Every community across this country and certainly Minnesota will tell you how absolutely essential it is that they receive help with critical infrastructure funding if they are going to keep moms and dads working, living, and raising families in rural America," said Coleman. "If this bill were passed, we could more than double the amount of rural infrastructure grants now available under current federal programs in the first year alone, and far surpass that increase in low interest loans. I believe we are now situated to be able to move this bill forward, at least incrementally, through the legislative process."

"In Arkansas and throughout the country, families are leaving rural communities for cities with infrastructure already in place and a better standard of living," Pryor said. "This bill will help reverse this trend by infusing small rural communities with the resources necessary to meet basic infrastructure needs and attract new businesses."

The original Rural Renaissance Act established a Rural Renaissance Corporation to issue the bonds and make low interest loans and grants. This would have allowed the federal government to make rural infrastructure investments and spread the cost out over the life of the projects in order to leverage more dollars and fund more projects. When anachronistic federal budgeting rules slowed progress on federal bonding, senators developed a private-public partnership with rural electric cooperatives, which would issue the bonds, and in turn make low interest loans and grants. Bondholders would receive a federal tax credit instead of interest and the cost of the tax credit would be the only cost to the U.S. government. Rural electrics would access low cost money in order to make low interest loans to rural communities, and contribute to a fund in order to make grants for the same purposes.

"Investing in rural infrastructure is among my top priorities, and this bill holds the potential and hope that many of our communities desperately need," Pryor said. "I am particularly pleased that the new legislation incorporates the Delta Regional Authority, and I hope that this approach can target much needed capitol to the areas where it can be put to immediate use."

"Whether it's the energy bill as a vehicle for this kind of bonding to support wind, biodiesel and ethanol projects, or tax legislation down the road this year for other important projects like water and waste, I see opportunity for movement of this vital legislation for rural Minnesota," Coleman said.

Strandquist Community News

F. Myrtle Vagle • 436-2133

The weather in northwest Minnesota is back in the rainy season again. We had a couple of sunny days. One turned on a 90-plus degrees, coupled with humidity so high that even the weeds wilted. One man said, his glasses fogged over when he went outdoors from his air-cooled house! He must be cool headed to have such a reaction in summer. It is the opposite in winter or when I try to take some things out of the oven. This morning the rain gauge showed 2 full inches had fallen during last night's thunderstorm. I couldn't quite believe it, so I said nothing about it, thinking someone was playing a trick on me by pouring water in the gauge, until I heard they had received 3 inches in Stephen. My edelweiss, which is in full bloom, tipped over to the ground from the load of water on it.

I was watching a robin in the garden this morning acting as only a bird brain would. It continued for a long time, just pecking and scratching on itself around its neck and under its wings. I could only surmise that it had been attacked by mosquitoes and developed the itch or it was taking a spitbath. I know better than to scratch all these mosquito bites around my neck but catch myself rubbing the welts every once in awhile.

Sunday morning, I was prepared to go to Strathcona to gather with the Lorenson families for a reunion, when at my door was a great grandson and his wife and grandson from Kalispell, Mont. Gerald and Sherry Madsen and their grandson. Gerald is the son of the later Walter Madsen and Thelma Lorenson. They had been to the reunion on Saturday and came here to visit all of us. We gathered at my house for dinner and they visited at the churches and nursing home with all the friends around here. At 6 p.m., they returned to Don Lorenson's for a cookout. We expect they will be back here on Tuesday and then go back to Kalispell on Wednesday.

Eddie Severson of Thief River Falls visited Elsie Lofrooth on Tuesday. Eddie's daughter was going to Peyton, Colorado to visit her grandfather, Palmer Severson and her aunt Belinda Soon, so Elsie sent a quilt for Belinda. Palmer Severson's children, Danny, Belinda and Eddie Severson, stayed with Edwin and Elsie Lofrooth while Palmer was in the war.

Monday evening supper guests at Paul and Shirley Anderson's were Morris and Hazel Anderson, Buzz and Dorothy Chaffee of Wibaux, Mont., Chana Christiansen of Fargo, Joshua Britton, Ellen Johnson and the Janssens.

Tuesday evening, Paul and Shirley Anderson and David, Jenny, Bethany and Nathaniel Janssen enjoyed supper in Argyle for Shirley's birthday. Happy Birthday, Shirley!!! Paul and Shirley Anderson attended the American Crystal Union supper in Warsaw, N.Dak.

David, Jenny and Nathaniel Jansson went to New Ulm on Thursday and returned to the Anderson's on Sunday evening. Sunday, they met Kristopher and Konrick Anderson in Clearwater. Jenny and Nathaniel rode with Kristopher to Fargo. From there, Kristopher and Konrick proceeded to Saskatoon, Canada with their loads of produce from Florida.

On Monday, after the big storm, Judy Kleinvachter and Marie Steffen took a long drive to see the damage done the night before. They were as far as Noch, N. Dak., and to Pembina where they saw the damage done to Matt Hammer's place. Judy's visitors this week were Pat Larson, Betty Pietruszewski, June Kasprowicz and Kelly and Jessica Lefrooth. I'm looking for a change in this weather.

I received a whole page out of the "Florida Today" newspaper June 11, 2005, with the caption, "Oh, deer!!" Betsy Thompson hand delivered it to me from her sister in Florida. Thanks to you all. I know many of you enjoy those beautiful roses which in Florida deer's mind is candy! I have a deal now that has saved the roses so far and I will have to make extensions as they grow larger. I found the window screens that Roy had so carefully put up in the garage, placed a couple of saw horses over the plants, put storm windows up against them, shoved 8 metal fence posts into the ground and tied it all together with my lariat rope. It works and I think I would have to have a license to string out an electric fence.

Check your pressure canner before the canning season

by Debbie Botzek-Linn
University of Minnesota Extension Service

"I saw a pressure canner at a garage sale – do you think it's safe?" or "I got a good deal – how do I know if it's accurate?"

Surprisingly, if a pressure canner were well cared for and stored properly, it will can your food for decades. At a garage sale, you're taking the word of the seller. At an auction, often no one knows if it works. Look the pressure canner over carefully. There should be no cracks, no large pits and only minimal rust.

Be sure the bottom sits flat, the dial gauge can be clearly read and the weight is not cracked or chipped. Are all the parts present? Does the lid fit? What condition is the rubber gasket in? Is there an instruction book included?

Plan to have the dial gauge tested for accuracy – for free – by sending it to National Presto Industries, 3925 North Hastings Way, Eau Claire, WI 54703-3703. Its consumer line is 1-800-877-0441. Weighted gauges do not require testing, but should be kept clean and free from rust.

Before the canning season begins and after you've had the dial gauge tested, put two inches of water in the pressure canner. Place the cover on and bring it up to 10 pounds pressure to see that it is working properly.

Steam leaks around the cover mean that the gasket is worn or that the edges need cleaning, or both. Always replace a stiff or stretched gasket. Replace the rubber safety valve if you replace the gasket. A replacement rubber gasket and safety valve can be purchased at some hardware stores.

If you plan to home-can low acid vegetables this summer (examples are carrots, green beans, beets or meats), they must be processed in a pressure canner to reach a temperature of at least 240 degrees Fahrenheit to eliminate the risk of botulism. The only way to achieve this temperature is in a pressure canner.

Fresh Minnesota grown vegetables will soon be ready for preserving. Take the time now to insure the safety of your preserved low-acid foods by checking the accuracy of your pressure canner.

YOUR NEWSPAPER: TEXTBOOK TO THE WORLD

Differences in health exist between rural and metro residents

A new Minnesota report shows that geography may be a factor in health and well-being. In comparing rural and urban residents, the "Health and Well-Being of Rural Minnesotans: A Minnesota Rural Health Status Report" found some areas of greater health risk for rural residents.

Men in Greater Minnesota are more likely to smoke than urban residents. More rural residents are overweight and less likely to participate in physical activity. Greater Minnesota residents are also less likely to wear seat belts. Other areas, such as the prevalence for diabetes, show Greater Minnesotans are similar to metro residents.

"This report shows us that rural areas, with their distinctly different demographics and social and economic characteristics, present a unique set of health care challenges," said Linda Norlander of the Minnesota Department of Health's Office of Rural Health and Primary Care. "While the report doesn't explain why differences in health status between urban and rural residents exist, it does provide us with a starting point for discussion."

The report includes behavioral risks, disease and injury prevalence, birth outcomes and causes of death, such as:

- Men living in Greater Minnesota are more likely to smoke compared to men living in the metro area, 26.5 and 22.2 percent, respectively. There is very little difference in the smoking percentages among females living in Greater Minnesota and the metro area (19.5 to 19.3 percent).
- Forty-six percent of rural residents ages 65 and older report having lost six or more of their permanent teeth because of decay or gum disease, compared to only 32.3 percent of urban elderly.
- Middle and high school students living in Greater Minnesota are more physically active. Slightly more than 31 percent of sixth, ninth and 12th graders combined said they play sports on a school team six or more hours a week, compared to 24 percent of metro area school students.
- More than half of the firearm-related injuries in Greater Minnesota are self-inflicted (52.9 percent) while firearm injuries in the metro area are more frequently due to homicide or assault (55.1 percent).
- Teen birth rates in Greater Minnesota were lower compared to to the metro area from 1998 to 2002 (13.4 versus 17.2 per 1,000 females ages 15 to 17 years old).

The report is online at www.health.state.mn.us/divs/chs.rhperpts.htm.

Monitoring pasture systems boosts profits

by Gene Krause
University of Minnesota Extension Service

Farm financial records say that feed cost is the largest expense incurred in any livestock operation. Increased awareness as to nutrient requirements and commodity markets can help reduce this expense.

Grazing management is another way to reduce feed costs. It can reduce feed costs by as much as 50 percent, depending on the goals of the farm.

Unfortunately, simply improving or adding a grazing component to lower feed cost in itself may not be enough to highly impact farm profits. It's just not that simple! Good forage management is required for successful systems.

Adopting this strategy can also come at a cost. Therefore, it is essential to balance the benefits of this decision as to its effect on the entire farm operation. Achieving and maintaining animal productivity when using pasture for the primary forage source requires constant management. While a single daily decision may not be highly critical, the accumulation of daily decisions will affect pasture quality, quantity, production, and ultimately, the bottom line.

Several factors should be considered with grazing management, such as body condition scoring, paddock planning, forage sampling and analysis, and pasture topdressing. Decisions should be made in the context of a holistic forage feeding plan that provides alternative options in case the pasture is either in short supply or overabundant. Forage analysis will vary, depending on the height and maturity of plants grazed, and several other factors including climate, soil type, plant variety, soil fertility, plant health, and insect infestation.

Proper pasture and forage assessment is critical to the livestock operation. The main reasons for assessing pasture are to: 1) match animal requirements with pasture production, 2) achieve more precise supplementary feeding, 3) ensure accurate feed planning, 4) more effectively manipulate pasture production and composition, and 5) to ensure ground cover is sufficient to protect soil from rainwater run-off, and to encourage water infiltration into soil.

Therefore close monitoring of pasture and performance is essential to boost returns. Research from land grant universities has shown that producers can save several dollars per acre by more accurately measuring and budgeting pasture forage.

New resolution supports cancer awareness, research

Senator Norm Coleman (R-MN), along with Senator Joe Lieberman (D-CT), announced on Tuesday, June 28, the introduction of the Childhood Cancer Awareness Resolution. The purpose of this bipartisan resolution, coauthored by Senators Allen, Brownback, Landrieu, Lincoln, Mikulski, Reed and Salazar, is to raise awareness about childhood cancer and support children and their families who are suffering from this terrible and terminal disease.

"Sadly, cancer is the number one disease killer of children," said Coleman. "Every day, 43 children will be diagnosed with cancer and 10 of those children will not survive. With this resolution, we are making a commitment to continue to promote awareness for childhood cancer research, diagnosis and treatment so that a cure can be found."

In the United States alone, it is estimated that 12,400 children will be diagnosed with cancer, and 2,300 children will die from the disease this year. Two-thirds of cancer survivors are likely to experience at least one latent effect from treatment, many of which may be life-threatening. Furthermore, the incidence of cancer among children in the United States is rising by about one percent each year.

"An essential purpose of this resolution is to help curb the heartbreaking trends we see in these childhood cancer statistics," Coleman added. "Our goal is to raise awareness and ultimately help bring these numbers down. I am optimistic that my colleagues in the Senate will embrace this idea."

To meet this goal, the resolution language calls for Congressional support for childhood cancer research and efforts to raise awareness about childhood cancer. The resolution also would encourage medical personnel to enter the field of pediatric oncology and work on the development of more effective drugs for the treatment of children with cancer.

The Senate resolution was formally introduced on Tuesday. Congresswoman Deborah Pryce (R-OH) has introduced the same resolution in the Unites States House of Representatives.

DNR improving Upper Red Lake access with Tamarac River project

Following the July 4 holiday weekend, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources will temporarily close part of the Tamarac River water access site on Upper Red Lake so contractors can complete construction of an improved public water access, which will have a 78 vehicle-trailer space parking lot and double ramp.

The improvements are being made in preparation for the 2006 reopening of the walleye fishery on Upper Red Lake, which is expected to draw a large number of anglers to the area throughout the 2006 fishing season and beyond.

According to Tony Walzer, a development specialist with the DNR Division of Trails & Waterways, anglers will have somewhat limited public access to Upper Red Lake until mid-August, when the access construction is scheduled for completion. One ramp at the access site will remain open on the west side of Trunk Highway 72, according to Walzer, but boaters may have to wait in line for access to the lake.

Access to the lake will also be available at some area resorts or through the DNR campground adjacent to the public water access site. Water access at the campground will require a day-use permit, which can be purchased at the park office for $7.

Hunters urged to apply now for October, 2005, prairie chicken license

Hunters who wish to apply for one of 100 permits for the 2005 Minnesota prairie chicken season must do by July 29. Applications are available at more than 1,800 Electronic Licensing System terminals, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

The five-day prairie chicken season, which will begin Oct. 22, is open to Minnesota residents only. Hunters will be charged a $4 application fee and may apply individually or in groups up to four. Prairie chicken licenses cost $20.

The hunt will be held in seven prairie chicken quota areas in west-central Minnesota between Crookston in the north and Breckenridge in the south. Up to 20 percent of the permits in each area will be issued to landowners or tenants of 40 acres or more of prairie or grassland property within the permit area for which they applied.

The season bag limit is two prairie chickens per hunter. This year, licensed prairie chicken hunters will also be allowed to take sharp-tailed grouse while legally hunting prairie chickens. Sharptails and prairie chickens are similar looking species and the general closure on taking sharp-tailed grouse by small game hunters in this area is to protect prairie chickens. Licensed prairie chicken hunters who wish to take sharptails must meet all regulations and licensing requirements for taking sharp-tailed grouse.

Minnesota's prairie chicken population now stands at more than 3,000 breeding birds in the spring and more than double that number in the fall. Prairie restoration and protection programs have helped stabilize the bird's population in recent years. The restoration of a regulated prairie chicken hunting season has helped build awareness and support for protecting and enhancing prairie and grassland habitats, according to the DNR

DNR QUESTIONS

Q: It has been six years since storms caused serious damage to more than 400,000 acres of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness. Is there still a fire danger?

A: The fire danger still exists and will continue to be a concern until the blowdown wood is completely decomposed. Part of the problem is that many of the trees that were broken or knocked over rest off of the ground. This means normal decomposition is not occurring as fast as it would have if the downed trees were lying on the forest floor. Prescribed burns done since the blowdown have helped protect areas with large concentrations of people, such as the Gunflint Trail. These burns also reduce the availability of fuels, so that if a fire did ignite, it would not have a continuous fuel source, which was available immediately after the blowdown. Original estimates indicated that some fire danger would exist in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness for 10 to 15 years.

First bird tests positive for West Nile virus in 2005

A dead crow found in Dakota County on June 24 has tested positive for West Nile virus at the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) Public Health Laboratory.

"Confirmation of our first bird means that the virus is starting to circulate between birds and mosquitoes and soon there will be a heightened risk of infection in humans," said David Neitzel, a mosquito and tick-borne disease specialist with MDH. "If they are not doing so already, people now need to begin taking steps to protect themselves from mosquitoes so they do not become infected."

There have been no human cases of West Nile yet in Minnesota this year. The highest risk of West Nile infection for people is from mid-July to mid-September, with the peak in August. West Nile is transmitted through the bite of a mosquito that has picked up the virus while feeding on an infected bird. The illness is not spread person-to-person.

To reduce your risk of being bitten:

- While outside among mosquitoes, use a good mosquito repellent, such as those containing no more than 30 percent of the active ingredient DEET. Products containing the active ingredient picaridin are also now commercially available.
- Minimize outdoor activities at dusk or dawn, when mosquitoes are most actively feeding.
- Wear long-sleeve shirts and long pants if you have to spend time in an area where mosquitoes are biting.
- Eliminate mosquito breeding sites on and around your property – including items such as old tires, buckets, clogged rain gutters, cans and other containers and anything else that can hold a small amount of water. Change the water in birdbaths and horse troughs at least weekly.

Most humans infected by the West Nile virus show no symptoms. About 20 percent of infected people will have symptoms such as a fever and headache. Less than one percent become seriously ill. Symptoms typically occur within three to 15 days after the bite of an infected mosquito. The most serious symptoms of West Nile infections include high fever, muscle weakness, stiff neck, disorientation and convulsions. The highest risk for serious illness and death is among people over 65 years of age.

Mosquito surveillance programs were put in place many years ago by state and local public health officials, and expanded when West Nile appeared in the United States in 1999. Those programs involve the trapping and testing of mosquitoes, as well as testing a limited number of dead birds from around the state. Residents who spot crows or blue jays that have died without an obvious cause are asked to use the dead bird reporting form on the MDH Web site or call 612-676-5055.

More information on West Nile and other forms of mosquito-borne encephalitis are available on the MDH Web site, and on the Centers for Disease Control Web site. People who have general questions about West Nile virus can call MDH at 1-877-676-5414 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Area Watershed board responds to complaints

managers. Those rules prior to adoption, must be submitted to the board of review and comment, and the board must have 45 days from receipt of a proposed rule or amendment to comment." Also, according to the complaint, "the board must provide public notice and a hearing prior to adoption of a proposed rule."

According to the Lindquist & Vennum document, the MTSRWD board, at its April 2005 meeting, distributed a proposed rule to board members that prohibits oral public comment unless the board invites comment. "The proposed rule allows a person to appear before the board only if he or she provides a written form, five days prior to the meeting, identifying the topic to be discussed."

Anderson responded saying, "From our attorney's standpoint our procedure for conducting a meeting is well within compliance."

The Lindquist & Vennum document also pointed out that "the watershed was awarded a $1.5 million grant from the department of natural resources to be used for the Agassiz project. The grant required that MTSRWD submit invoices, monthly bank statements, a statement of monthly expenditures and evidence of project completion prior to obtaining the grant funds. Instead, the MTSRWD obtained the entire grant and allowed $1.5 million to sit in an interest-free account for two years. Further, the MTSRWD took $850,000 of the grant without submitting invoices or monthly bank statements to the state. The MTSRWD submitted monthly bank statements only after inquiries from one of the complainants, Jim Stengrim and an investigation by the Office of the Legislative Auditor."

Anderson responded, repeating a statement that appears in the report of the state auditor's office review of the independent audit, "Because these issues involve the admission of a grant by the DNR, any questions on the disbursement of state grant funds should be addressed by the Department of Natural Resources and the offices of the Legislative Auditor."

Like Anderson, Sorenson also responded to complaints made by the Lindquist and Vennum document. Sorenson said he agreed with the opinion of Marshall County Attorney Mike Williams, who on May 12 stated, "It is my opinion that there is no justification for the Marshall County Board of Commissioners to convene any hearing concerning charges of alleged wrong doing as outlined in the letter of Eric A. Bartsch."

The fate of arguably the most controversial complaint, stating that MTSRWD failed to comply with Minnesota Statute Chapter 103D by establishing a project that requires the condemnation of privately owned property for purposes not permitted under 103D was dismissed by the Ninth District Court of Appeals on June 28, according to Anderson. The complaint said MTSRWD managers ought to be removed because they knowingly established a project and ordered a condemnation of land for purposes outside of the district's statutory charter.

Chief Judge Edward Toussaint, and judges Terri J. Stoneburner and Natalie E. Hudson issued a statement dismissing the appeal (by Lindquist & Vennum) as it is taken from a non appealable order.

School District 564 approves budget...guess

School District 564 Board of Education considers adding "St. Hilaire" to the official name of the school district

by David Hill
Editor

School Board 564 approved its 2005-2006 budget Monday, June 27, despite the fact that the Minnesota State Legislature had not approved its budget.

Although lots of organizations and leaders believe there will be some sort of increase in aid, Harry Nelson, business manager for School District 564, said the budget numbers he presented to the Board of Education assumes no increase in aid from the Legislature.

No additional aid from the State would be unfortunate, as without an increase in aid, School District 564 would face a budget operating deficit of nearly $300,000.

Though he was unable to plug in any increases in revenue, Nelson believes he has a better handle on expenses. He said he budgeted for an increase in expenses to account for raises even though the District has not reached a settlement with teachers. He quickly added that the increase he plugged into the space did not reflect his endorsement of any particular amount.

In other words, the budget provided to the Board of Education was just a guess.

The Board of Education had not choice but to approve a budget at this time. They approved a tentative 2005-2006 revenue budget of $19,441,347, and a 2005-2006 expenditure budget of $19,847,085.

Nelson explained during discussion, that a one percent increase in aid from the State would provide the District with between $100,000 and $110,000.

Should the name of School District 564 - Thief River Falls, include the name of St. Hilaire?

During a point in the meeting when representatives on the Board of Education are invited to bring forth any issues they feel might be relevant for all members to discuss, School Superintendent Irv Peterson brought up the idea of adding St. Hilaire to the title of the School District.

Peterson said St. Hilaire is the only other community in this District. He said residents of the community are good supporters of the District. He explained that this was not being proposed for any political reasons. There are no ulterior motives for doing so at this time, and he said, he wasn't being pressured by anyone to do so. He said it just seemed that now was an appropriate time to bring up the subject.

The proposal was met with a number of questions. Representatives asked whether the combining of St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls represented a true consolidation, when it happened, and how many students are from that area.

The consolidation happened so long ago that no one on the present board of education knows what was discussed or decided when the consolidation took place.

Jon Lindgren, representative on the board of education, said he wouldn't mind receiving more information.

Steve Young, chairperson, added that there is certainly some value in recognizing the consolidation.

Orchestra Assistance

Derek Druse, director of the orchestra program in School District 564, presented a request for overload or part-time help.

Participation in the orchestra program in School District 564 has risen significantly in the past 10 years (since Druse took over the program). In fact, the orchestra at Lincoln High School in 2005 was larger than the two Grand Forks High Schools combined (56 vs. 52). In addition to the growth in the program, the program has accumulated numerous awards presented to groups, and to individuals. For example, the Lincoln High School Chamber Orchestra has received a superior rating at the state solo and ensemble contest for eight of the last 10 years, and the Lincoln High School Orchestra has had at least one All-State student in nine of the last 10 years.

Druse asked for assistance in solving scheduling conflicts that may prevent him or an assistant from providing orchestra in the elementary school. He believes students pick up music, and in particular, how to hold orchestra instruments, better at an earlier age. He believes starting later would hurt enrollment program numbers, too.

Druse presented a lengthy document that examines programs offered in other districts.

Present in the audience was Brianna Drevlow, an elementary school student. Drevlow performed a short piece on her half-size cello for the Board of Education.

Joe Drevlow, Brianna's father, noted the difficulties in performing the instrument - often requiring students to perform three things at the same time. He added that if the District were to start the program, any program for that matter, be it athletic and academic, two years later than it is now, the results would be predictable. He also added that since his children had started participating in the orchestra program, he had noticed an improvement in their test scores.

Young thanked Druse for his thorough report and for the progress in the orchestra program over the last 10 years. He also mentioned, as he has with all requests made for program increases, that the school board will be considering several of these proposals during its budget discussions and that their primary concern will be whether program increases can be sustained.

Red Lake Band receives grant

The Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota has been selected to receive a $275,000 No Child Left Behind grant.

"With these grants, we do more than ask for excellence, we provide the tools to create it," said Secretary Spellings.

The grant award is part of the Demonstration Grants for Indian Children program, which supports activities to prepare 3- and 4-year-old Indian children for entry into kindergarten and help secondary students achieve in core academic subjects, increase high school graduation rates and prepare students for college while preserving the native language and culture.

The grant will be used to increase high school graduation rates and support American Indian children making the transition from high school to college, consistent with tribal traditions, languages and culture.

As part of the grand finale of Monday night's fireworks display at Seven Clans Casino, Hotel and Waterpark, these fireworks were shining bright.

Red, white and purple? These flowers outside the Falls Developmental Achievement Center were just one color short of being as patriotic as a nearby U.S. flag.

County hears complaints about Watershed

$2,800 for the landscaping portion of the project. Once completed, the landscaping should divert water away from the loadout area.

The board granted approval for the solid waste committee to make a determination on which project, a gravel road leading to the existing gate, or driveway leading to the new gate adjacent to 130th Ave. NE.

• Person reported that the county will soon reinstate its glass recycling program. Using a recently purchased glass crusher, the county will now accept glass at its recycling drop off station located at the Pennington County Solid Waste Transfer Station. Glass will be crushed into approximately half-inch pieces that will likely be used for fill in road construction projects. Glass recycling will begin within the next two weeks.

Engineer's Items

• With Country Estates owner Dale Cloose present, Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagen presented an update about proceedings between Smiley Township and Country Estates residents.

Residents of Country Estates appeared at the Pennington County Board meeting on Tuesday, May 24, to continue discussions on how to alleviate drainage problems on public cross roads between 182nd and 184th Ave. N.E. The Smiley Township Board will hold its next meeting on July 21 at 7 p.m. Flaagen reported that the township will likely repair the two end roads, but currently not the crossroads. Commissioner Oliver "Skip" Swanson and Flaagen will attend the next township meeting to continue discussions.

• Anita Cardinal, Intercounty Nursing, presented a plan that would transport a portion of the old County Highway Department garage into storage space for Intercounty Nursing. Cardinal compared Intercounty Nursing's existing storage space to a bad Sam's Club.

Records will be stored in two secured 12- by 24-foot bays. A 16- by 24-foot non secured area is also included in the plans. A concrete floor will need to be poured before Intercounty Nursing can begin to store records. The project would use Sentence to Serve labor and would be funded by Intercounty Nursing.

The board carried a motion authorizing the Highway Committee to investigate and continue plans for converting the garage into storage.

• The board approved the purchase of a network sever up to $6,000 for the Highway Department office.

• Flaagen reported that the Highway Department had requested as much money as they legally could last week, $380,000, which is part of a $1 million state aid contract.

• The board agreed to contribute up to $4,000 toward the Pennington County Fair to be used for dirt used in grand stand events.

Sheriff's Items

• The board approved the purchase of new computer based recording equipment.

• Sheriff Hruby reported that the switch to the new communications tower will take place in August.

Other Items

• The board approved the Thief River Falls tax abatement proposal under the condition that the Thief River Falls School District must also approve it.

• A motion requesting the appearance of University of Minnesota Extension officials at the July 12 meeting was carried. It is the board's intention at that meeting to discuss the performance reviews of Extension employees who are funded through the county. Currently, Pennington County and Marshall County share the cost of Extension employees Van Swanson and Howard Person. It was brought to the board's attention that Swanson received a review that the board, after hearing it, felt it inaccurately portrayed the job he was doing.

What also upset commissioners is the fact that the board pays the salary of county extension employees, oversees their work throughout the year, but cannot be involved in the review process.

• The board approved 3 percent salary increases for elected officials. Updated salaries are: county attorney, $82,500; auditor, $68,500; sheriff, $66,500; recorder, $49,000; treasurer, $48,000; and commissioners, $16,500.

With one more color, these fireworks could have been patriotic Monday at Seven Clans Casino, Hotel and Waterpark's fireworks display

Hospital selects CEO

Northwest Medical Center selects Christine Harff

Christine Harff has been selected as the next chief executive officer of Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls.

Friday, July 7, a representative of Northwest Medical Association announced that the board of directors had selected Harff to be the chief executive officer for the medical center. The selection of Harff came after a complete selection process. She will begin her duties on Aug. 15, 2005.

Harff was raised on a dairy farm in Greenfield where her mother still lives today. She had planned to attend the University of Minnesota, but her father's unexpected heart attack changed her plans and Chris attended North Hennepin Community College, instead. This allowed her to tend to the family farm, and help in her father's recovery. It was during this time that she recognized her passion for healthcare. After her father's recovery, she transferred to the University of Minnesota where she obtained her bachelors of science in nursing. Her focus in nursing was mainly in intensive care. Later, Chris attended Carlson School of Business at the University of Minnesota and obtained her masters in business administrations.

Harff worked at St. Elizabeth's Hospital and Healthcare Center in Wabasha as the director of nursing, and at Hennepin County Medical Center as the transplant clinic manager. During that time she also attended law school at William Mitchell College of Law and obtained her law degree. She most recently held the position of chief operating officer at the Monticello-Big Lake Community Hospital district where she has been employed

Bikers Against Diabetes

▲ Around 130 motorcyclists participated in the A.B.A.T.E. (American Bikers for Awareness, Training and Education) Bikers Against Diabetes ride on Saturday, July 9. One stop on the ride was at Arctic Cat in Thief River Falls. The fun fundraising event raised over $8,200 for the American Diabetes Association's Camp Sioux, a camp for children with diabetes. The camp is located at the Park River Bible Camp in Park River, N.D.

◀ One of the potential beneficiaries of the A.B.A.T.E. (American Bikers for Awareness, Training and Education) Bikers Against Diabetes ride on Saturday, July 9, was Daniel Fluge of Crookston. Fluge was recently diagnosed with Type I diabetes. Money raised from the rally will be donated to the American Diabetes Association Camp Sioux, a camp located at the Park River Bible Camp in Park River, N.D. Last year's rally raised about $4,300. This year, the group raised around $8,200. One of the organizers for this year's event, Mary Langevin attributed this year's success to good advertising and more participants. Over 130 riders participated in this year's event. Fluge is pictured sitting on Kevin Helgeson's 2004 Harley Davidson Fat Boy.

London terror bombing

Bombing resonates with Northland Community Band

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

The London terror attacks Thursday morning hit a little close to home for several area residents. Traveling with the Northland Community Band, they were in London just a few days before the attacks.

"It's a little frightening now to think about it," said Thief River Falls resident Marilyn Wigness, who with her husband, Jerry, was among those traveling with the group.

The group was in London July 1 through 5 on a United Kingdom performance tour held June 26 until July 5. The Wignesses were among the "groupies," as Jerry Wigness called them, who also went on the tour. Including those in the band, 42 local residents went on the trip.

They left before terror struck London in the form of four bombs – three on the subway, or tube as it is called there, and one on a double-decker bus. According to the Washington Post, at least 49 people were killed and 700 were injured in the blasts. On Tuesday, Good Morning America reported that five homes were searched in West Yorkshire, England, in connection with the bombings. No arrests have been made.

Here in Thief River Falls, those who recently returned from England are glad to be back, especially since they escaped witnessing or being part of the carnage there. "I, for one, was glad we were out of there," said Marilyn Wigness. "It was maddening to me that it can happen over there."

"I was glad I was home," said band member Edie Brandli after returning home from London. Brandli, who plays percussion in the band, noted she could relate how close she and some of her fellow travelers had been to some of the bombed areas.

Brandli traveled on the tube several times while she was in London, so did the Wignesses.

Thief River Falls resident John Mattson also traveled on the tube while he was in London with the band. "I guess you aren't safe anywhere anymore," Mattson said.

Four explosions rocked London Thursday after terrorist attacks in that city. Three explosions occurred on the subway, or tube as it is called there, at the Edgware Road station, between the King's Cross and Russell Square stations, and 100 yards from the Liverpool Station. Another bomb exploded on a double-decker bus near Woburn Place and Tavistock Square. (Source of map: www.mulerne-gym.dk)

Senator's staff taken for a fly-by of the issues in TRF

by David Hill
Editor

Representatives of Senator Norm Coleman's office met with representatives of Thief River Falls City Council Thursday morning. It was an opportunity for local officials to discuss the Highway 59 corridor, services at the regional airport and other economic development issues with the senator's staff.

First item on the agenda, however, was Coleman's support of sugar protections he obtained before voting to support CAFTA. At the end of June, Coleman announced he had reached an agreement with the White House that would hold harmless U.S. sugar policy through the life of the 2002 Farm Bill, which expires Dec. 31, 2007. Senator Coleman had refused to back the Central American-Dominican Republic Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR) until the White House made this commitment.

Bill Huepenbecker, state director for Coleman and Tom Steward, communications director for Coleman, said they had met with American Crystal Sugar officials July 6. Steward said that they had a different point of view and wanted more protections.

Steward said the Senator worked hard on the Farm Bill agreement. He added that the agreement includes study on the long-term promise of a sugar-to-ethanol program.

In a news release issued prior to the Thursday meeting, Huepenbecker said, "It's important to know the unique needs and challenges of each community and the best way to do this is to meet face to face with city officials and

Unemployment claims in June show decline

Minnesota Dept. of Employment and Economic Development Commissioner Matt Kramer has announced that the number of initial claims for unemployment benefits filed in June dropped by 2,160 or 9.9 percent, on a seasonally unadjusted basis, from one year ago.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, the number of initial claims filed in June plunged by 19.4 percent over the prior month - a decrease of 5,084 over May. The 21,117 seasonally adjusted new claims filed in June mark the lowest monthly level since January 2001.

Only five of the 20 major industrial sectors experienced an increase in new claims over last year, and those gains were very slight (40 or less). The largest declines in initial claims occurred in the following industries: Manufacturing - down 635 or 14.5 percent; Construction - down 397 or 10.3 percent; Administrative and Support Services - down 218 or 13.5 percent; Educational Services - down 197 or 10.5 percent; Health Care and Social Services - down 191 or 12.7 percent; and Finance and Insurance - down 141 or 25.4 percent.

"The dramatic drop in unemployment Insurance claims is very encouraging," said Kramer. "It clearly demonstrates that the economy is making strong and positive improvements."

98th Marshall County Fair begins July 20

With lots of free entertainment, added auto racing thrills, fairgrounds improvements, a first-ever health fair, all the usual favorite attractions and a new feature called Farming at the Fair, the 2005 Marshall County Fair July 20-24 promises to be one of the best ever.

The free-gate Marshall County Fair, starting its 98th annual run at the fairgrounds in Warren Wednesday, July 20, offers many choices for family style fun and entertainment. With two big nights of fireworks, a demolition derby, exciting carnival rides for young and old, interesting exhibits, taste-tempting foods and more, the Marshall County is an obvious entertainment winner.

Loyal fans of the Marshall County Fair are probably wondering, what is new for the fair this year? A free teen dance Saturday night, Northern Outlaw Sprint racing at the Saturday evening auto races, a health fair with free blood pressure check and even a free health speaker Thursday afternoon, a monster truck ride attraction Saturday and Sunday and five days of Farming at the Fair activities are the high points of new adventures.

Those new features are just icing on the cake of perennial fair favorites, including the kickoff parade, Sunday afternoon demolition derby talent contest, carnival rides and attractions, food stands, KC bingo and fun at the nearby Settler's Square Museum.

Farming At The Fair

Vintage farm equipment, none newer than 1965 and much of it included in the kickoff parade Wednesday evening, will be on display on the south side of the fairgrounds. After Wednesday, there will be daily demonstrations of farm activities using some of the old equipment: cutting hay, baling, plowing. Each afternoon or evening (except Saturday), just before a major fair event, there will be a "fire up" procession of the farm equipment past the grandstand.

Health Fair

As a service for area residents and patrons of the fair, a health fair is being offered this year, sponsored by North Valley Home Health, an arm of North Valley Health Center of Warren. The health fair will be open at the Senior Citizens Building on the fairgrounds, starting at 1 p.m. Thursday, July 21. Free blood pressure checks will be given, and other tests or services can be provided for a small charge. Starting about 2:45 p.m., as the health fair wraps up, Michelle Stevens will give a short talk on the health benefits of sugar and answer questions on nutrition.

Downtown Parade

For the 10th year, the fair will get started with the kickoff parade at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. Parade entrants line up at the high school at 5:30 p.m., vying for first and second place cash awards in seven categories. The parade route is north on First Street and east on Johnson Avenue, passing the reviewing stand at the Cenex station. For registration packets, write Roger Hille at 31784 State Highway 1 NW, Warren, Minn. 56762, or call him at 218-745-4940.

Double-Barreled Fireworks

A favorite highlight of the fair is the free fireworks display, and this year the excitement and awe will be doubled. In addition to the usual show Friday night, there will be an encore performance Saturday, with both shows starting about 10:30 p.m. This choreographed music show, described as the best in northwestern Minnesota, is sponsored by Marshall County businesses, the fair board, K-Lite, KCNN and the RBS/Funland Carnival.

Free Shows

Once again, excellent free entertainment has been lined up for the first four days of the Marshall County Fair.

Magician Jeff Salveson, who has been performing his illusions and hilarious antics for audiences in the Dakotas and Minnesota for over 20 years, will be on stage under the tent from 8-8:45 p.m. Wednesday, right after the parade.

After Salveson's performance, Prairie Rose takes the stage, from 9-10 p.m. Wednesday. Featuring Mark and his two daughters, Katy (a high school senior) and Hannah (a ninth grader), Prairie Rose is a small band with a big sound. With Mark on guitar/vocals, Katy on violin/vocals and Hannah as lead singer, they play music ranging from bluegrass to country, rock to classic standards, and almost anything in between.

Tina and Lena, a comedy, singing variety duo, will keep their fair audiences in stitches with their clever style of backyard wit and wisdom. Tina and Lena will perform as part of the Senior Citizens Day program at 2 p.m. Thursday under the tent. Again that evening, at the 7 p.m talent show, they will join emcee Ray Burwell in keeping the show moving along at a rollicking pace.

Paul Christian is often compared to Chris Isaak and Roy Orbison. Paul has been playing off and on for years, first in bands, then going solo so he could have a more control over his touring schedule. His repertoire has grown to enable him to put on a great two-hour show. Paul will perform a free show at 7 p.m., Friday under the tent, preceded by a story performance by Heidi Hoks. He is again on stage under the tent at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Grand Entertainment

In addition to excellent free attractions, the Marshall County Fair brings an attractive choice of entertainment in the grandstand, led off by the Talent Contest at 7 p.m. Thursday. Ticket prices are $7 and, for children age 12 and younger, $4. Another fine show of talented performers from the area is being lined up. Add to that the antics of Tina and Lena, and it all adds up to a great family entertainment value.

Friday's grandstand show is the ATV Mud Run, with the mud to start flying at 7 p.m. Tickets are $6 and, for children age 12 and younger, $4. Registration for the straight-pit run (120 feet) starts at 4 p.m. Classes include 2- wheel drive, 4-wheel drive, stock as manufactured, modified, outlaw and specialty (3-wheelers, motorcycles, 6x6s, etc.) For information and forms, call David Gunderson, 218-437-6453, or Dwight Anderson, 218-745-5654.

The big Saturday grandstand show is Sprint Car races, starting at 6 p.m., with hot laps at 5:30 p.m. Northern Outlaw Sprints and 4-cylinder hobby class will be featured, and the NOPA racecars will be back. Tickets are $14, and $6 for kids age 12 and younger.

Sunday's grandstand show will be the ever-popular Demolition Derby at 2 p.m. Ticket prices are $10, and $6 for kids age 12 and under. The Demo will pay a $2,750 purse and award trophies. Three survivors of each qualifying heat win $25 each. Five cash prizes of $100-$500 are paid in the feature event; in the Grand Slam, five cash prizes of $50-$250 are paid.

The Demo Derby will also have one heat of pickups, with a payout of $150, $100 and $50. Entry forms are available at several businesses in the communities of Warren, Alvarado, Argyle, Oslo, Newfolden and Stephen. Entry blanks are to be mailed with the $25 entry fee to: Bob Kliner, 422 S. Pioneer, Warren, MN 56762.

Four Thief River Falls youth take part in Civil Air Patrol training camp

Four Civil Air Patrol (CAP) cadets from the Northwest Minnesota Composite Squadron returned Saturday from "The Seventh Cadet Training Group," the Minnesota Wing's version of summer camp.

The youth are C/2nd Lt. Amanda LeTourneau; C/SrA. Mitchell Martin; C/Amn. Daniel Molstad; and C/Amn. Brandon Widing

Cadet Lt. LeTourneau served as cadet public affairs officer at the camp, collecting many of the photos available at the Web site, composing the encampment newsletter called "The Gremilin," and preparing interoffice memos for HQ staff.

Martin, Molstad and Widing attended as first-time participants, or "basics."

Literally hundreds of photos are available of all the cadets and their activities on the encampment's Web site (www.mncap.org/cp/7ctg/).

The encampment significantly differs from other summer camps, not only in that it implements the customs and courtesies and strict discipline of military training camps, and is in fact held at a military base, but also in that it is completely run by other youth who are further along in their leadership training. This is the seventh year the encampment has been completely run by youth for youth, which explains its designation as "Seventh Cadet Training Group" (7thCTG).

Adults, or "senior members," are on hand, however, to mentor, guide, evaluate, and monitor the training.

The head supervisor for the week, Encampment Commander Maj. Chet Wilberg, said, "The encampment is a 'living leadership laboratory.' First year attendees, or basics, are instructed by cadets who usually have two or more years of encampment leadership training. If their applications are accepted next year, basics may return as staff development squadron participants, learning to become the flight sergeants, support staff, and even cadet commanders of future encampments.

During the weeklong activity, the youth not only attended leadership classes but participated in helicopter flights, the base obstacle course, and much more.

In short, encampment is a microcosm of the larger cadet program, which aims to produce well-rounded, confident young people equipped to meet the challenges of adulthood.

Civil Air Patrol's Cadet Program is designed to provide youth from sixth grade through age 20, with a safe, encouraging environment in which to learn, mature and explore opportunities, to help them reach their potential as adults. Cadets participate in a structured program through group and individual activities that include aerospace education, physical training, leadership, and moral and ethical values. The program encompasses 16 achievement levels that include study in these four areas.

Upon completion of each achievement, the cadet earns increased cadet rank, decorations, awards, eligibility for national and international special activities, and an opportunity for flight and academic scholarships. Successfully completing an encampment enables cadets many benefits such as promotion to cadet officer grades, eligibility for a wider number of activities and privileges both in CAP and in society. Cadets have opportunities for college scholarships or advanced placement if they should choose a military path after high school in the Air Force, Reserves or Guard.

Civil Air Patrol, the official U. S. Air Force Auxiliary, is a civilian, volunteer, nonprofit, service organization. The unpaid members perform more than 85 percent of inland search and rescue missions as tasked by the Air Force Rescue and Coordination Center. Volunteers also take a leading role in aerospace education and conduct one of America's finest youth programs through CAP Cadet Programs.

...How did this happen?

And so because his demons were too strong for him to control, and because he was molested as a child "so often and by so many different people that (he)...actually thought it was normal..." and because he was "scared, alone and confused" and he wanted revenge on society for punishing him, he chose to kill three people and kidnap two young children. As far as has been ascertained, he chose the family at random.

Six weeks after the carnage, he was found with one little girl, 8-year-old Shasta Groene. The body of her 9-year-old brother, Dylan, was finally found buried in western Montana. Their mother, older brother and the mother's boyfriend were tied up and beaten to death, perhaps in front of Shasta and Dylan. The dead were then abandoned and left for neighbors to find and the man fled with the two children, taking them to molest at his leisure.

Bear in mind that the man, Joseph Edward Duncan III, has not been convicted of the above crimes yet, so this is all speculation. But, for the sake of argument, let's assume that he is the one who committed the crimes.

What causes a person to do something like that? There is no answer to that question. Better people than I have pondered that question for a long time and there is still no answer.

How did this happen? There may be an answer to this question. Does the answer lie in Fargo, N.D., where Duncan was attending college and was a known to be a Level 3 sex offender? Does the answer lie in Washington, where the 16-year-old Duncan served nearly 20 years in prison for molesting and terrorizing a 14-year-old? Does the answer lie in Becker County, where Duncan was charged with molesting a 6-year-old child on a school playground last year and then set free on $15,000 bail? Or does the answer lie in the way state and federal governments have been handling such crimes?

Duncan served 14 years in prison in Washington for raping a 14-year-old boy at gunpoint in 1980. He burned the boy with a cigarette and terrorized him by pointing a gun at the victim's head and pulling the trigger, although the gun was not loaded. For this crime, Duncan was sentenced to 20 years in prison, but the time was suspended and he was committed to a sex offender treatment, during which he spoke of molesting several children from the time he was 12. After 22 months, officials said the treatment wasn't working because Duncan was not willing to "modify his sexually deviant behaviors" and was "a danger to the well-being of others." He was re-sentenced to prison in 1982 and finally released in July 2000.

Duncan moved to Fargo after completing his prison sentences in Washington. He was a student at North Dakota State University, majoring in computer science, and lived in an apartment house in a college neighborhood. He was registered as a Level 3 sex offender. His neighbors claimed he kept to himself with his two pet cats while living in Fargo. Several of them said they were not aware that he was a Level 3 offender, despite the fact that Duncan was one of the first high-risk sex offenders who was named at a community meeting to inform residents he was living in the Fargo area.

In July 2004, Duncan was accused of molesting a 6-year-old boy at a school playground in Detroit Lakes. After an inordinate length of time (nine months), Becker County court officials held a hearing for the offense. He was released on $15,000 bond at a hearing in April 2005. He was ordered to stay in touch with probation officers, which he did not do. It was later learned that he fled to Idaho shortly after the hearing, after stealing a vehicle in St. Paul. Becker county issued a warrant for his arrest the first week in May. The Groene family was murdered May 15.

At the hearing in Becker County, Assistant County Attorney Mike Fritz urged Judge Thomas Schroeder to set bail at $25,000, after choosing not to ask for an arrest warrant, which would have kept Duncan in jail. Following a private discussion between the judge and attorneys in the case, bail was set at $15,000. The judge issued no conditions or explanations for the low bail in court, and Schroeder, Fritz and County Attorney Joe Evans had no comment on the private discussion or the bail when contacted after the hearing.

Later, Schroeder claimed he didn't know that Duncan was a Level 3 offender at the time of the hearing, even though the Fargo Forum had reported Duncan's status three days prior to the hearing. He also said if he had known about the Level 3 status, he would have set the bail high enough so that Duncan would not have gone free. Also, during the hearing Duncan's attorney stated, "He (Duncan) is, of course, a registered sex offender."

Recently, Evans claimed that one reason higher bail was not requested was because Duncan had been out of prison for five years without reoffending, had held down a job during that time, and was on the dean's list at the university. He further said that Duncan would only have to serve about 13 months in prison if he were convicted of the molestation charge in Minnesota, despite his previous conviction in Washington. Evans stated, "Thirteen months of actual confinement would be a relatively low number. They get that for DWI almost, for a gross misdemeanor."

So how did this happen? More discussion next week.

Another member of the herd

You can save a lot of time, effort and money if you determine where the herd is going and just run the other way.

People who habitually go against the grain are contrarians. Contrarian investors, for example, buy stocks nobody else wants and wait for the tide to turn. It usually does.

In general, contrarians simply refuse to be taken in by this or that trend.

The retail industry relies on the gullible herd moving from one trend to the next. Retailers hope to be in the right place charging premium prices when the crowd turns in their direction. It is a tough game, but the rewards can be spectacular.

Cabbage Patch dolls. Beanie Babies. TickleMe Elmo. Krispy Kreme donuts. These are the most memorable examples of unexceptional products which the American public was - for one brief, shining moment - bamboozled into thinking they just had to have.

On a smaller scale, our herd instinct cons each of us every day to waste money everything from hot property in a trendy location to a tube of toothpaste, which the kids think is cool.

Contrarians see such trends and smell a skunk.

Everybody going to the lake because it is 94 degrees? Then stay home, turn on the fan, read a book, and you'll feel better than any of them come tomorrow morning.

Everybody lining up for the latest "must-see" movie? Then you can be sure it is a worthless piece of pop-culture scum. Stay home, stare at the wall and meditate upon the fact that your brain is not rotting. You'll be better off.

Everybody going to the coolest restaurant in town and waiting two hours for a table when they get there? Save time and money. Find the quiet steakhouse where the retired folks go and get seated right away.

People who live in the country are by definition contrarians. Every signal the media culture sends tells us that rural areas are for losers, rednecks and bigots - but yet we live here. Far from feeling deprived and inferior, we feel a smug and justified sense of superiority as we watch the suburbanites on television trample each other to get into Target the day after Thanksgiving.

Rural contrarians have other privileges. Have you ever noticed when you go to the Cities for the weekend how many cars are jammed up on the oncoming lanes trying to get out? Ever noticed how when you leave the Cities on Sunday evening, those same people are bumper-to-bumper trying to get back in?

Meanwhile, you cruise along at 70 miles per hour, luxuriating in the benefits of going against the grain.

Contrarians save money on clothes because they know that expensive fashions will fetch 50 cents at a rummage sale in two years. Contrarians get to eat all the mashed potatoes and pasta they want because they know this carb counting thing is just another stupid fad.

A contrarian would never spend $200 on scrapbooking workshops and supplies just because everybody else is doing it. A contrarian would never buy an ugly piece of furniture just because it showed up on HGTV.

Of course, it is easy to say that one is a contrarian. I like to think I am immune to all trends, but just when I get uppity about my nonconformity, it is exposed as a sham.

I recently chose some rich dark colors for my house walls. I have liked these colors for as long as I can remember and I plan to like them for many years to come - but two days after the paint went on, some people in the know told me my colors were "really in right now."

I about gagged. I almost ordered new paint. Could it be that I am as vulnerable to trends and advertising as anybody else?

Probably. I just looked around my house and saw New Balance sneakers, a Bose radio, an Apple computer, Irish Spring soap, Crest toothpaste, Old Spice deodorant, Cherrios, Kix, Folgers, and on and on.

Contrarian indeed.

Collect six clear-plastic liquid dishwashing bottles. Let your children help you to rinse the bottles and fill them with water. Then help them use food coloring to tint the water in each bottle a different rainbow color (red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple). Close the lids on the bottles and shake them to mix. Then have your children line up the plastic bottles in a row adjacent to a sunny window. What happens when the sun shines? (A rainbow of colors appears.) Ask your children to explain what they see. Can they see the reflected colors on a cloudy day? Why not?

PARENTING TIPS
Families on the Go

Today's families have a lifestyle that is much different than families had 20 and 30 years ago. Today's families are on the go! They go out to work, play and eat. They go shopping, to sporting events and traveling. In addition, about 25 percent move each year. Parents need to remember that children don't always travel as easily as adults. However, with some advance planning and preparation, children can enjoy outings as much as adults.

Here are some tips for outings of any kind (in or out of town):

- Whenever possible plan around your child's nap time.
- Keep a few disposable diapers in your car's glove compartment. To make cleanups easier, tuck a packaged towelette and a plastic bag inside of each diaper.
- Freeze a plastic container 1/3 to 1/2 full of water. When you are ready to go, fill the container with water for a long-lasting, cold thirst quencher. Water is healthy, quenches the thirst, and isn't messy if spilled.
- Always carry a change of clothes for young children.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk to your child about where you are going and what your child can expect.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: I want to know more about the new Medicare prescription drug plan that starts next year. Also, I understand that extra help is available to help pay for some of the costs. Tell me about it.

A: Beginning January 2006, Medicare will offer prescription drug plans. To learn about the Medicare prescription drug plans, call 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227) or visit www.medicare.gov. Specific plan coverage will not be available until about October but now is the time to see if you qualify for some extra financial help in paying monthly premiums, annual deductibles and prescription co-payments under the new program. Through mid-August, Social Security is mailing letters to nearly 19 million people who are potentially eligible for this extra help. The letter includes an application and a return-addressed, postage-paid envelope. It will explain the prescription drug program and tell you how to apply for the extra help. Nationally, those who qualify could save an average of $2,100 per year. To qualify for the extra help, an individual person or married couple living together must have limited income and resources. You can qualify as an individual if your total annual income is below $14,355 and your resources are valued below $10,000.

Limits for a married couple living together are higher: $19,245 in combined annual income and $20,000 in resources. Your resources can be an additional $1,500 higher per person if you will be using some of your money for burial expenses. Even with somewhat higher income, you still might get some help if, for example, you or your spouse financially support other family members living with you or if you have earnings from work. Some types of both income and resources do not count. For example, your home and cars are not counted as resources.

If you think you might be eligible, you should apply. It is important to note that some people will automatically qualify for the extra financial help. Anyone who has both Medicare and Medicaid, or Medicare and Supplemental Security Income (SSI), or anyone whose state pays his or her Medicare premiums will not need to complete an eligibility application. Even if you automatically qualify for extra help, you will still need to enroll in a Medicare-approved prescription drug plan to obtain both coverage and the extra help. See if you might qualify and apply online at the Social Security's Web site, www.socialsecurity.gov, or call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) for more information or to apply by telephone.

Local officials presented a number of economic development issues - from efforts to improve the Highway 59 corridor to seeking assistance for a general purpose airport hangar at the Regional Airport in Thief River Falls.

Officials requested assistance for the airport on a number of levels. One issue concerning local officials is a federal subsidy for passenger service. Prior to the recent announcement that funding had been granted for Mesaba flights to Thief River Falls, the community was served by 14 flights per week, 13 of which were subsidized. The new proposal cuts one subsidized flight.

The city would like to see more seats reserved for flights in and out of Thief River Falls, and more flights, too. Without more flights, Thief River Falls will never reach 10,000 enplanements. If the city ever reaches 10,000 enplanements, it would become eligible for $1 million in federal entitlements. Currently, the Bemidji airport gets $1 million in federal entitlements because it reaches that level of service and enplanements. In comparison, the city of Thief River Falls receives $150,000 per year. If Thief River Falls wants more funds for airport projects, it has to compete with all other airports for discretionary funds. And even with discretionary funds, the federal portion will only pay for a portion of a project's cost.

This issue is also tied closely to business growth and job retention in the community and region. Officials noted that Digi-Key is continuing to experience growth, but as in many markets, overnight shipping is a big concern. Because of Digi-Key, air freight at the airport has become a significant concern. Officials reported that UPS ships more parcels out of this airport than any place in the tri-state area, other than the Twin Cities. A carrier out of Canada is also providing service at the airport. One issue that is affecting how well these providers do their job is cold weather. Local officials and providers feel that a multiplane storage hangar would solve a lot of problems. However, the city of Thief River Falls does not have $800,000 in its budget to cover the cost of such a hangar.

Huepenbecker reported that officials from Red Lake Falls had also noted on how important Digi-Key was to their community.

Local officials also requested assistance in finding funding for improvements to Ditch 1. The ditch, which runs from the county and through the community of Thief River Falls has been causing problems for many individuals. Officials believe the total project cost could reach as high as $1.6 million, and that too, is not in their budget.

Huepenbecker asked for more information and then noted that the Senator had authored a Rural Renaissance Bill, which might be of assistance. (The "Rural Renaissance II Act" establishes a private-public partnership to provide low interest loans and grants to critical rural infrastructure projects.)

Local officials also discussed efforts to keep a local manufacturer from expanding outside of the community.

Steward's and Huepenbecker's visit to Thief River Falls was part of a tour that included stops in Moorhead, Ada, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, Hallock, Warren and East Grand Forks.

London terror bombing

Jonathan Kays, a Thief River Falls resident who plays percussion in the band, echoed Mattson's statement. "[The terror attacks] were kind of a realization that my parents had, too – nowhere is safe," said Kays, a recent Lincoln High School graduate.

Despite the terror attacks, both Kays and Mattson noted they would travel to London again and ride the tube. It's the fastest way to travel in London, Kays said.

For his part, Mattson said he would be a "little bit more leery" while traveling on the tube.

The other travelers interviewed for this story also said the terror attacks wouldn't stop them from traveling to London again. Brandli said she would be "a little bit more aware" while traveling on the tube if she were to return to London.

Brandli added, "It wouldn't necessarily keep me from going someplace, unless it was a highly terroristic area."

Harff states that she has a strong need to be a part of the community and she has regretfully submitted her resignation to the school board in Annandale. Her interest in the school board stemmed from her own experience of having a child with special needs, and she became a resource for other parents of children with similar challenges. Chris spends her free time with her family at hockey practice where she was the girls' 8 and Under team representative. Harff and her family also enjoy swimming, waterskiing, gymnastics and snowmobiling. The family is excited and is anticipating the new opportunities that will be found in Thief River Falls.

GREENBUSH RACE PARK

from Bob Hultgren

A hot summer night greeted drivers and fans Saturday as the Greenbush Race Park welcomed the Northern Outlaw Sprint Cars for their first visit of the season.

Dan Wiskow (Roseau) is still the driver to beat in the Mini-Sprints. Wiskow would go flag-to-flag for his fifth feature win of the season. Despite winning, Wiskow still trails in the points chase to Dennis Rantanen (Thief River Falls), who finished second.

NOPA Pure Stock feature produced another first-time winner as Justin Osowksi (Hallock) drove flawlessly and led the entire way. Justin Olson (Thief River Falls), who leads the points race, finished a solid second.

Super Stock feature was a caution-filled event. After a couple of restarts to get the first lap in, early race leader George Balcaen (Winnipeg, Man.) slowed and stopped on the back straightaway with a flat tire. Balcaen was sent from the track for bringing out an intentional caution. Once back underway, Gary Nelson Jr. (Blackduck) would take the lead and never surrender it. Scott Ripplinger (Warroad) made a last-lap pass of Bryon Berger (Badger) to finish second.

Nolan Olmstead (Badger) dominated the eight-car Modified field. Olmstead led all the way for the win. Rick Delaine finished second, with Aaron Holtan (Newfolden) in third. Olmstead and Delaine are locked in an early season battle for the points lead. The Modified feature, to the delight of race fans, saw the return to the track of popular driver Greg Ferris.

The 4-Cylinders provided another entertaining race. Three lead changes over 15 caution-free laps saw Kurt Smith (Greenbush) picking up the win as he passed Doug Krause (Winnipeg, Man.) on the final lap. Krause also surrendered second to Dustin Wahl (Greenbush).

Saturday's program came to an end with a burst of fireworks and the 25-lap NOSA Sprint Car feature. Mark Dobmier, starting from the second row, passed Casey Mack to take the lead on the opening lap. Wade Nygaard quickly gave chase, and both drivers were into lap traffic within six laps. Nygaard would close the gap, and make a serious challenge for the lead with just a couple of laps to run, but he got loose in traffic and lost ground to Dobmier, who led all the way for the win.

Greenbush Race Park will hold its Mid-Season Championship and Modified Special Saturday, July 16.

17th Annual Roseau Art in the Park held July 17

Looking for a place to spend an enjoyable day with friends or family alive with sights and activities for all ages? Anyone who enjoys live music, good food, the great outdoors, and original art from iron forged sculpture to watercolors, should come to the 17th Annual Art in the Park on Sunday July 17th from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Pioneer Farm and Village 2 and one-half miles west of Roseau, on Highway 11.

The Roseau Area Arts Association has pulled together a sparkling set of local and national artists, arranged activities for children, and will provide live music and relaxed hospitality in an historic setting.

Participants can listen to live music as they enjoy the day's activities and attractions. Jazz on Tap, the Grand Forks trio that has been performing around the Northwest area for more than ten years will set the mood. They are accompanied by the staff of Courtly at the Commons of Roseau, who will be providing food and refreshments.

This year's featured artist is Robert Kakaygeesick, a local artist renowned in the U.S. and Canada. The themes of his paintings are grounded in his Native American spiritual beliefs, and he often takes inspiration from the way his beliefs take shape in his dreams. "Spiritual Flight", this year's Art in the Park poster, is one of his paintings, and signed copies will be on sale.

Abigail McBride, another nationally renowned artist who paints plain air landscapes, still lifes, and portraits in the American Impressionist tradition, will also be on hand. Her paintings focus on color and light. She works with both a brush and a palette knife. http://www.mcbridegallery.com/abigail/bio.html

A sample of some other artists include Julie Elick, watercolor and oil; Karen Engevick, pottery; Katie Hammer, pottery; Frances Karlsson, watercolor; Joel Miller and Sue Suess, iron forging; Carole Wilson, weaving. Artists will be present to discuss their work most of the day. Demonstrations will include pottery and glass blowing. Artists will be selling their work.

What's in this for the kids? Pioneer Farm and Village is an agriculture museum that includes a log cabin, a barn, a store, a church, a school, a blacksmith shop, a print shop, a post office, a fellowship hall, a storage shed, a pioneer museum, an exhibit hall, and a trappers cabin. Creative arts activities will take place indoors for children who have finished exploring the village, and face painters will be available for children or adults who want to take a little personal art home with them. Although the Roseau area is now bug-free (mostly), it's good to know that an indoor environment is close at hand.

WELCOME TO:
BRANTL FIELD
Head Coach
1970-2003
Dedicated July 9th, 2005

The football home of Red Lake County Central will now be known as Brantl Field. A dedication ceremony was held Saturday, July 9, to honor the former Plummer and RLCC head football coach, Gary Brantl. Brantl was head coach for 34 seasons.

Brantl Field dedication held in Plummer...

Football field has new name

In a world where winning and doing whatever it takes to win are in vogue, Gary Brantl coached the Plummer Cardinals and later the Red Lake County Central Mustangs for 34 years, teaching his teams the importance of a positive attitude and class. During Brantl's 34 years on the Plummer and RLCC sidelines, his teams did their share of winning, both on and off the field.

On Saturday, July 9, 35 years after taking a chance on a brand new football coach and social studies teacher fresh out of Mayville State, the community and school of Plummer honored their former football coach by naming the football home of Red Lake County Central, Brantl Field.

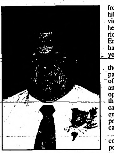
"I feel that this is a great honor," Brantl said. "It's hard to put into words. I'm thankful for all of the opportunities I've been given."

Brantl began his coaching career in 1970, with no coaching experience. He originally planned coaching in Plummer for only a few seasons, then he would move on. Instead the community grew on him.

"I never thought about staying for 35 years," Brantl said. "This quickly became home."

Under Brantl, an undefeated Plummer team won the North Tri-County Conference title in 1983 and later, also under Brantl, RLCC won both the 1997 and 1998 Section 7 Nine-Man championship. His teams also experienced the lows like an early playoff exit or the occasional losing streak. But, no matter the outcome, Brantl kept his comments and actions positive.

Said former team manager and later player Philip Zimpel, "It didn't matter if we were on the verge of winning a section championship or trying to break an eight game losing streak, the enthusiasm was the same."



Gary Brantl

Brantl taught his players and students about the importance of a good attitude, to have patience, to be respectful, to do the things you enjoy and have fun at what you do.

"No one wins everytime," Brantl said. "You strive to win, compete hard and if you lose, lose like a winner."

The Brantl Field dedication capped a full day of activities in Plummer. Earlier a flag football tournament and golf outing gave former players and students a chance to catch up with their former coach. Former player, Wade Grinde said, after talking with teammates, those old teams got better throughout the day. They were pretty good, almost unbeatable.

"How'd we ever lose," Grinde jokingly questioned, stating that the more previous seasons were discussed, the better the teams were. Looking at Brantl, Grinde said, "I'm pretty sure by the end of the night, you're going to be in the hall of fame."

"People like Gary Brantl may not be in the hall of fame, but he's in our hall of fame," Grinde said.

A highlight for former players, was an appearance by former assistant coach Bill Poole. Poole served as an assistant coach with Brantl from 1970-81. Poole said he hitchhiked to Plummer for a job interview that year. During the interview he was given a handful of extra curricular options to go along with his English teaching, including basketball, football, home economics, yearbook.

He had no real interest in any of them, especially basketball, comparing himself to the visual image of Joe Pesche dribbling a ball up and down the court. Among his options, only football was a sport that he had prior experience. His career began in sixth grade and ended in eighth after he missed one practice due to a fictitious weather cancellation.

He accepted the assistant football coaching position thinking, "This poor head coach. He doesn't know what he's in for."

At their first meeting, Poole told Brantl, that he had no prior coaching experience. Brantl, who was so young looking, that he was first mistaken by players as a transfer student, said neither did he.

The 1970 team included only a few experienced players who remained from a conference championship team. According to Poole, the duo quickly realized that they had a raw, but talented team. Poole and Brantl coached together for 12 seasons.

"There were times when I was a little more vocal than Gary," Poole said. "I never did hear him swear, so I picked up the slack there. I cannot think of anyone who has given more to his community, more to his players and more to his school."

Brantl's recognition ceremony included speaking appearances by RLCC teacher Melody Brusten; RLCC Superintendent James Guetter; RLCC Board Chairman Joseph McMullen; Plummer Mayor Anne Jaeger; former cheerleader Janel Walter; former players, Roger Walter, Tony Gerardy, Neil Huotari, Grinde, Lonnie Longtin, Zimpel and Randy Huie; former assistants Poole, Rick Koivisto; and daughter, Farrah Brantl McPhee.

TRF 18U team faces a tough tourney draw

Four losses came at the hands of an interesting group of opponents as the Thief River Falls 18U softball team played in the Red River Valley Classic Saturday and Sunday.

Three of the setbacks were to teams sponsored by Schmitty's of Winnipeg, Man. The first one was a 6-3 decision against Schmitty's 23U team; the second was an 11-2 contest against Schmitty's Old Pros (as the name suggests, a group of older women); and the third was a 2-0 verdict against Schmitty's Juniors, a younger, but still 23U age-group squad.

Thief River Falls also lost a 14-1 game to the Minneapolis Mudhens, a 23U Select squad.

"It was an eye-opening weekend," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Matt Okeson. "But it was a good experience. I thought the girls played really, really well."

Maybe the biggest adjustment, according to Okeson, was the amount of work his outfielders faced. Relatively few balls get out of the infield during the spring high school season, but the older, veteran players faced in the Fargo tournament featured hard-hitting line-ups that kept the outfielders on the move.

Three pool play games Saturday determined Sunday's bracket play position.

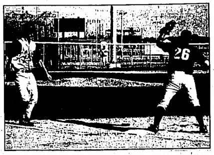
Bobcat Football Reunion planned July 23 in Oklee

Plans have been finalized for the Bobcat Football Reunion that will be held Saturday, July 23, in Oklee.

According to organizers, there has been a great response from former Oklee High School football players who were members of the Bobcats' teams from the 1940s, 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s and 90s.

Activities will be held at the Oklee City Hall. Registration begins at 3 p.m., followed by a short program at 5 o'clock. Supper will be served at approximately 5:30 p.m.

No formal invitations were sent, but organizers are encouraging people to tell friends, neighbors and family members about the event.



Thief River Falls first baseman Thomas Johanneck grabbed this head-high throw to put out a Perham base runner during the teams' Legion doubleheader at the Multi-Event Center Friday.

TRF Legion schedule has faced alterations

Schedule-wise, the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team is just 1-for-4 over the last week-and-a-half.

Post 117 split a Friday twinbill against Perham at the Multi-Events Center, winning 5-2 before absorbing a 16-3 second-game pounding.

That outing followed a June 30 rain-out at East Grand Forks and a July 7 scheduling mix-up that erased a Thief River Falls trip to Detroit Lakes.

The schedule took another hit Monday when rain washed out a doubleheader at Roseau.

Coach Courtney Skjerven's Thief River Falls ball club began the week with a 12-8 record – a week that included 6 p.m. home doubleheaders vs. Bemidji Tuesday and Crookston Thursday.

Post 2793 sweeps Crookston games

Thief River Falls swept a Thursday night VFW baseball doubleheader against Crookston at the Thief River Falls Multi-Events Center. Post 2793 claimed a 9-2 victory in Game 1 and was again victorious in the five-inning nightcap, 16-4.

With the victories, Thief River Falls improved its season record to 10-5. Coach Shane Zutz was pleased with the team's offensive performance, that included four triples and two brilliantly placed suicide squeeze bunts.

"I thought we played a pretty solid game overall," said Zutz. "I am very happy with how we executed at the plate, bunting and moving runners over."

Catcher Michael Benedict tripled in each of his first two at bats, one of which opened the door for a four-run third inning. Also in the third inning, Seth Schmitz, who plated Benedict with a sacrifice fly in the first inning, reached base with a single to right field, again scoring Benedict. Patrick Barry hit the team's third triple, scoring Schmitz. Barry scored from third on a suicide squeeze bunt by starting pitcher Spencer Johnson. Johnson reached on the bunt and advanced to third on a Crookston throwing error. And Ben Espeseth finished the scoring by again laying down the team's second successful suicide squeeze of the inning.

Thief River Falls continued its scoring in the fourth and fifth innings. With two outs in the fourth, Schmitz hit the team's third triple of the evening, off the right-center field fence and scored on a Crookston error. One inning later, Cody Bottem reached base on a lead off walk. Espseth reached on a misplayed ground ball to short, putting runners on first and second. Both runners moved up a base after Ben Carlson laid down a successful sacrifice bunt, moving the runners up a base. Bottem scored on a Cole Hunt ground-out to second.

Thief River Falls scored two insurance runs in the sixth inning. Schmitz reached base after being

VFW squad splits doubleheaders

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Thief River Falls VFW baseball team split a June 28 doubleheader at East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks was victorious in the opener, scoring two runs in the bottom half of the seventh inning for a 6-5 final.

Spencer Johnson pitched six innings in the contest, allowing four earned runs on four hits, walking four and striking out nine. Matt Nelson was credited with the loss, allowing two runs, on two hits and one walk, in one inning of work.

Thief River Falls bounced back in Game 2, scoring a 10-run rule, 15-5 victory. Pitcher Ben Espeseth was credited with the win in the six inning contest.

"We let the first game slip away," said Thief River Falls coach Shane Zutz. "We bounced by the second game."

Two days later Thief River Falls was victorious in a tightly-contested opening game at Moorhead. Barry and Benedict each scored runs in the second inning of Game 1. Barry reached base on a single and advanced to second as Benedict reached base via the free pass. Both runners moved up a base on a perfectly executed fake bunt and steal. Consecutive Moorhead errors plated both runs.

Thief River Falls increased its lead to 3-0 when Seth Schmitz doubled and scored from second base on another Moorhead error. Moorhead rallied for runs in the sixth and seventh, but fell short 3-2. Schmitz pitched his way to victory for Post 2793, tallying seven strikeouts, two hits and two base on balls in a complete game effort.

"This was a great baseball game," Zutz said. "We took some chances on the bases and were aggressive and it worked out to our advantage."

Like Game 1, the nightcap was competitive to the last out. Thief River Falls began the scoring with two runs in the second inning. Spencer Johnson reached base on a fielder's choice and along with Eric Blix, scored on consecutive singles by Blix, Cole Hunt and Benedict.

Meanwhile, Moorhead was blanked through the first three innings, by a no-hit effort from pitcher Eric Blix. Blix's no-hit bid fell short in the fourth inning, where he allowed four runs to to score.

Moorhead scored three more runs in the fifth inning, increasing its lead to 7-2. With the game slipping away, Thief River Falls rallied in the sixth inning. Blix and Hunt each singled with one out. A groundout by Alex Yaggie moved each runner up a base. Benedict plated both runners on a two out single. After stealing second, he too scored on a Schmitz single.

Thief River Falls continued its comeback in seventh, scoring one run on a triple to right center by Michael Blix. Blix scored on a single by Johnson, before the rally ended, with three consecutive Thief River Falls strikeouts.

"We got after it hard this game," Zutz said. "We played with great intensity, but just came up a little short. We had a lot of hits, but not the big ones needed to give us the win."

hit. He advanced to second after on a misplayed fly ball to left field that also allowed Barry to reach base. With runners on first and second, Bottem singled to left field, scoring Schmitz. Barry scored later in the inning on a Espeseth single to right field.

Game 2 began much like Game 1 ended for the winners. Thief River Falls scored three-first inning runs on two walks, two passed balls and a Crookston error. Benedict, Bottem and Barry each scored first inning runs.

Thief River Falls put another crooked number on the board in the second inning. Espeseth walked and stole second to start the inning. Benedict singled to score Espeseth. He too stole second and moved to third on an error off the bat of Bottem. Both Benedict and Bottem scored on a triple to right-center by Schmitz. Schmitz scored the fourth run of the inning on a single by Barry.

Crookston scored single runs in each of the first four innings, but failed to keep pace with Thief River Falls' potent hitting. The winners continued their high scoring ways, finishing off the visitors with three runs in the third inning and six runs in the fourth.

The three-run third inning included free passes to Daniel Nelson and Espeseth. Both runners scored on Benedict's third triple of the night. Benedict would also score, on a ground ball to second off the bat of Bottem.

Thief River Falls closed the door in the fourth with six more runs. Fourth inning hits were recorded by Espeseth, Bottem and Barry.

Deadline approaches for reporting crop acres

The Pennington County Farm Service Agency (FSA) Office reminds producers that they must report their acres to the FSA County Office in order to be eligible for benefits under most FSA programs. The deadline to timely file an acreage report for the 2005 crop year is July 15. There is a late field fee to report acres to FSA after the deadline.

Programs requiring an acreage report include the Crop Disaster Program, the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP), marketing assistance loans, the Direct and Countercyclical Program (DCP), Loan Deficiency Payments and the Conservation Reserve Program.

The Pennington County office has mailed maps to producers for the farm(s) the county office has them listed as operating for the 2005 crop year. A letter was attached to the maps informing the producer what needs to be recorded on the maps. If producers did not receive maps for all of the farms they are operating in 2005, they should contact the county office as soon as possible to request maps.

As in the past, the county office is taking acreage reports by appointment only. Producers should contact the county office to schedule appointments to report their acres after they have completely filled out their maps. Producers are reminded that the planting dates for all crops must now be included on each field on the maps.

Producers with questions concerning acreage reporting requirements should contact the Pennington County FSA Office at 681-1612, ext. 2 before July 15.

Timing POST herbicide applications in soybeans

by Lizabeth Stahl
University of Minnesota Extension Service

In a survey published by the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, it was reported that 84 percent of soybean acres in 2003 were treated with glyphosate. Although the glyphosate system has simplified weed control for many growers, proper timing of herbicide applications is still important in optimizing soybean yields.

Weeds and crops can coexist for a period of time before competition for light, water and nutrients leads to crop yield losses. The challenge is to time post-emergence (POST) herbicide applications before yield losses occur, while at the same time achieving optimal weed control.

The length of time that weeds can remain with the crop without affecting crop yields is defined as the critical period of weed control. Critical periods of weed control occur early in the season with early-emerging weeds, and later on in the season with late-emerging weeds.

The critical period of weed control early in the season for soybeans generally ranges from two to four weeks after planting, but can be shorter or longer depending on a number of factors. Weed population characteristics (i.e. species, density, emergence patterns), cropping practices (i.e. population, row spacing, tillage), and environmental conditions all influence the critical period of weed control.

Increased weed densities and weeds that emerge early in the season or with the crop shorten the critical period of weed control. A foxtail that emerges with the crop would be much more competitive than a foxtail that emerges four weeks after the crop, for example.

Weed species can also differ greatly in competitiveness. For example, research conducted by the University of Nebraska found that four foxtail plants were equal in competitiveness to one velvetleaf plant.

Cultural practices such as row spacing can also influence the critical period. In another study conducted by the University of Nebraska, the critical period in soybeans in 7.5-inch, 15-inch and 30-inch rows occurred at the V3, V2, and V1 soybean stages, respectively. Soybeans planted in narrow rows were more competitive with weeds than were soybeans planted in wider rows, and yield effects due to weed competition were not seen until later growth stages.

Weed height is a critical factor when making POST herbicide applications. Recommended glyphosate rates vary depending on weed height by species, so be sure to check the label based on your conditions. Weed height affects not only the level of control, but also influences potential yield impacts, with larger weeds being more competitive than smaller weeds. Just because glyphosate may give you a wide window of control for many weed species, doesn't mean you should necessarily take advantage of it if you want to prevent yield losses due to weed competition.

Many factors affect the critical period of weed control, but probably the most important factor is weed density. If your soybean field looks like a solid green carpet of weeds, you should target a POST application very soon. On the other hand, if you can easily see the crop rows and bare soil between them, you have more time to make a POST application, keeping in mind maximum weed heights at application as stated on the herbicide label.

It is very difficult, if not impossible, depending your weed population, to achieve optimal weed control and soybean yield with a weed management program consisting of one POST glyphosate application. Research conducted by the University of Minnesota in 2004 across six locations confirms this point. Optimal yields were obtained in a glyphosate system by using sequential applications or a pre-emergence herbicide followed by a POST application. Although not included in this study, a timely cultivation can also be effective in the quest for optimal yields and returns.

Food safety tips for summer

by Kathy Brandt
University of Minnesota Extension Service

Grilling, barbecuing and picnics are part of the festivities we enjoy. By following simple, safe food handling practices you'll reduce the risk of foodborne illness at your summer gatherings and throughout the year.

Here are basic tips for safe food handling and preparation:

- Food safety begins with hand-washing with hot, soapy water before and after handling food.
- Keep cold food cold. If refrigeration isn't available, place cold food in a cooler with ice or frozen gel packs, or place serving dishes directly on ice-filled containers. Cold food should be held at or below 40 degrees Fahrenheit.
- Marinate foods in the refrigerator, not on the counter or outdoors. If some of the marinade were to be used as a sauce on cooked food, reserve a portion before adding raw meat, poultry or seafood. Don't reuse marinade.
- If you partially cook food in the microwave, oven or stove to reduce grilling time, do so immediately before the food goes on the hot grill.
- When it's time to cook the food, cook it thoroughly. Use a food thermometer to be sure.
  - o Beef, veal and lamb steaks, and roasts – 145 degrees Fahrenheit for medium rare, 160 degrees Fahrenheit for medium and 170 degrees Fahrenheit for well done.
  - o Whole poultry (take temperature in the thigh) – 180 degrees Fahrenheit.
  - o Poultry breasts – 170 degrees Fahrenheit.
  - o Ground poultry – 165 degrees Fahrenheit.
  - o Pork, ground pork and ground beef – 160 degrees Fahrenheit.
  - o Fin fish – 145 degrees Fahrenheit or until the flesh is opaque and flakes easily with a fork.
  - o Shrimp, lobster and crab – the meat should be pearly and opaque.
  - o Clams, oysters and mussels – until the shells are open.
- Keep grilled food hot until serving by moving it to the side of the grill rack, away from the direct heat.
- Serve grilled food on a clean plate – not the same one that held raw meat, poultry or fish.
- Remember the two-hour rule. Never leave perishable food out of refrigeration or the cooler for more than two hours. When outdoor temperatures reach 90 degrees Fahrenheit and higher, food shouldn't be left out for more than one hour.

Roll out the red carpet for the Pennington Co. Fair

Roll out the red carpet.

Each year, thousands of residents and visitors attend the Pennington County Fair. Not only do these individuals pump a little extra income into the economy when they come to the fair, they form impressions of our community.

As all of us know, impressions are important. If something rubs us the wrong way, whether we're visiting a place for the first time or the 100th, if it doesn't look good, feel right, or the customer isn't treated right, we don't go back. That's why it's important to roll out the red carpet during the Pennington County Fair.

Each year, the Pennington County Fair seems to grow a little. It gets a little more exciting, and the fireworks a little brighter. That isn't possible without the contributions of many volunteers, businesses, organizations, and, of course, support from our visitors.

As the fair approaches, we need to recognize the contributions of the Pennington County Fair Board and everyone connected with the Pennington County Fair, its officers, directors and superintendents. They put in, or will put in, hundreds of hours of work for which there is little or no compensation. As columnist Tim Lyon mentions in last week's column, if you want a warm fuzzy, "...simply embrace the notion that you inhabit a chunk of the world that doesn't shuffle backward when asked to step forward." These individuals are true leaders.

We also need to alert you to a few changes. This year, there are a couple of new attractions - the Ralph Engelstad Arena will host an outdoor extravaganza, consisting of vendors displaying outdoor products and services; and, because of its growing popularity, the all-terrain vehicle mud run has been moved to the grandstand arena. Of course, there will be much more, and we look forward to the great acts, atmosphere and food that has become associated with the Pennington County Fair.

Minn. Legislators get the job done...eventually

Congratulations - kind of.

Seven weeks after the special session began and a partial shutdown of Minnesota state government offices, negotiators finally reached a budget deal. These have been trying times for many Minnesotans and they have a right to demand changes that will prevent these types of shutdowns from happening again.

There were many reasons for the shutdown - pledges to special interest groups, contrasting styles and strong political leanings, among the many. Certainly, the items on the table were things worth fighting for, but this is not the way government should work.

Changes should be made. Some are calling for "legislative accountability measures," which is a nice turnabout considering the fact that legislators have been calling on teachers and other leaders of local government and government agencies to be more accountable. Others believe the solution is to establish a new set of deadlines that would prevent shutdowns from happening altogether. Some have even suggested - go figure - working on the more difficult issues first.

Changes should be made that would prevent future shutdowns. These kinds of disagreements should not force our government to shut down.

Citizens should let their legislators know exactly how they feel, and what changes they think should be made; but hold on, legislators will vote on the agreement this week. Citizens of Minnesota should know by Wednesday or Thursday whether the "partial shutdown" of Minnesota will drag on into another week.

Here are the addresses of our legislators:

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, Room G-24, Capitol Building, St. Paul, MN 55155;

Sen. Rod Skoe, Room 124, Capitol Building, St. Paul, MN 55155;

Rep. Maxine Penas, 579 State Office Building, 100 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155;

Rep. Bernie Lieder, 323 State Office Building, 100 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155;

Rep. Brita Sailer, 327 State Office Building, 100 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155.

Special session produces win for MN families

Minnesota House Speaker Steve Sviggum hailed the landmark special session agreement as a win for Minnesota families, schools and job creators.

"Minnesota goes back to work," said House Speaker Steve Sviggum. "The Minnesota Legislature and Governor Pawlenty agreed to a solution that provides an appropriate balance of increased K-12 funding and needed health care reforms balanced with no tax increases that kill jobs."

The final agreement includes $401 million raised through the 75 cents Health Impact Fee, $273 million in net revenue increases from Pawlenty's March budget revenues, $57 million in abusive tax shelters, and $16 million in other corporate tax compliance.

"House Republicans fought to protect Minnesota taxpayers against income tax increases and tax increases that would kill jobs," Sviggum said. "We were successful in our efforts. The revenues raised will not hinder Minnesota's economic development and job growth."

K-12 education will receive an $800 million increase, including a 4 percent increase in each of the next two years on the per-pupil funding formula, $139.2 million in local levies and $10 million in aid for early childhood programs. The agreement also provides for education accountability through QComp, a program that rewards teachers by linking their salary to professional growth and development, student achievement, and rigorous evaluation and review.

"The final K-12 package features increased funding and greater accountability for our schools," said House Majority Leader Eirk Paulsen (R-Eden Prairie). "It is a fair and balanced package for suburban and Greater Minnesota school districts."

Minnesota's state-funded health care programs also received a $110 million increase from the governor's original budget. The final agreement maintains the current MinnesotaCare eligibility and repeals the MinnesotaCare cap. It also provides a Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) at 2.26 percent in 2006 and a 2.26 percent in 2007 for caregivers.

"We fought for and secured the COLA adjustment for those who provide care to our state's most vulnerable populations," said Sviggum. "The final agreement continues Minnesota's long-standing tradition of quality health care."

House Republicans protected taxpayers by defeating all job-killing tax increases proposed by the Senate DFL. The final tax agreement includes $86 million in new revenue and assumes health savings account conformity, single sales and gross premium tax reduction, plus other items including $45 million in local government aid.

The final agreement also includes $46 million for transit with $40 million allocated to metro transit and $6 million for rural transit.

"We took care of the state's priorities. We took care of Minnesota families. The package is overdue and the process was frustrating but it is a good, strong solution for moving Minnesota forward," Sviggum said.

Upon approval of the final agreement, the Minnesota Legislature passed a five-day continuing resolution that returns state employees to work. The K-12 Health and Human Services, and Tax Working Groups will complete work on the bills in the next few days, and vote on all final bills Wednesday and Thursday, July 13 (today) and 14.

Farm size debate still hurts Minnesota

by Gene Hugoson
Commissioner
MN Dept. of Agriculture

Young people growing up in Minnesota can choose from among a seemingly endless list of potential occupations: So why would anyone choose a career as demanding and uncertain as modern dairy farming?

Talk with some of Minnesota's young dairy farmers, and you find there are as many good answers as there are good farmers. These bright, enterprising people want to be their own boss. They want to avoid the stifling office environment. They love the beauty of the Minnesota landscape. They see an opportunity to raise their kids the way they were raised. Above all, they believe there are still ways to milk cows and support a family with a reasonably good income.

They back up this belief by citing a list of positive Minnesota assets including plentiful feed and water, (usually) temperate summer weather, and a strong dairy infrastructure.

Nonetheless, their optimism flies in the face of the conventional wisdom that Minnesota's dairy industry is in a death spiral. This negative view is now so ingrained in many people's minds that any discussion of dairy issues almost inevitably winds up focusing on the continued loss of dairy farms, cows and milk production.

It is important that public officials and the dairy community are aware of the industry trends and their root causes. However, if we're not careful this negative view may become a self fulfilling prophecy. Those of us who care about Minnesota's dairy sector need to realize that we still have plenty young farmers and we still have a chance to be a strong dairy state if we can hang onto the young men and women who want to farm.

But don't take my word for it. Listen to the young farmers themselves.

[illegible] McA[illegible] grew up on [illegible] the business as a worker on a large dairy in southern Minnesota. Today, he milks 80 cows in Dakota County. He says he looked at buying a farm outside Minnesota, but he preferred to stay here.

"My family and friends are here, and I like being close to the Twin Cities," McAndrews says. "I wouldn't want to be stuck out in the middle of nowhere."

McAndrews says lifestyle expectations have changed, and so must dairy farming.

"People in my generation don't want to work seven days a week," McAndrews says. "I want to get to the point where I'm not working 24 hours a day. To get there, you have to keep growing and adapting."

Greg Sabolik and his wife, Marisa, got into the dairy business five years ago, and today they milk 70 cows in Douglas County. Sabolik says he had a chance to try life off the farm, and it wasn't for him.

"I got a degree in engineering and a job right out of college, but I always knew I wanted to come back and farm," Sabolik says. "A lot of people feel trapped by dairying. That's the wrong attitude. I love what I do."

The importance of approaching the dairy challenges with a can-do attitude is a common theme among young farmers. Jason Maahs milks 110 cows in Meeker County, and he says Minnesota dairy farmers could benefit from the example set across the border.

"I think there's a lot of opportunity in Minnesota, but morale here needs to improve," Maahs said. "Attitudes are more upbeat in Wisconsin from what I've seen. We've got plenty of available feed and water, and we don't have to pay too much for shipping our milk. You can make a good living doing whatever you want to do. It's up to you to decide how to get there."

What about the argument that a good milk price is a prerequisite for good morale?

"Any small business is at the mercy of the consumer," Sabolik says. "If you're working too hard and not getting a decent price, try something new. I believe you can still make money in this business if you're a good manager."

All three young farmers agree that Minnesota must find a way to move past the bitter debate over farm size.

"I think herd size will continue to grow - mine included," Maahs says. "The problem we have in Minnesota is that one guy likes to fight the other guy. I wish we could get past that."

Budget deal will stop cuts at schools, and keep health care

by Rep. Bernie Lieder

Early Saturday morning, legislative leaders and the governor finally hammered out an agreement on the state's budget. The most common reaction across the state was, "It's about time."

Seven weeks into a special session and a week into a partial government shutdown, even those most closely involved in the negotiations were dismayed and frustrated the agreement took as long as it did. Like most of you, I share that frustration. One of my priorities going into next session will be figuring out a way to prevent this kind of gridlock from ever taking place again.

Now that an agreement is in place, the focus is going to shift on what was - and wasn't - accomplished with this budget.

Coming into the session, my top priority was securing adequate funding for our kids' education. More than anything, that issue struck to the very core of who we are and what our state is going to look like a year, two years and a decade from now.

Right now, every school district in the state is facing cuts. This budget will prevent most of those from happening.

The other big issue for me was addressing the rising cost of health care. Throughout most of the session and special session, the governor insisted on balancing the budget by kicking nearly 40,000 working Minnesotans off the MinnesotaCare health insurance, arguing that the move would save the state money.

I disagreed. I've long maintained that the investment we make in programs like MinnesotaCare, which provides affordable health insurance to around 150,000 working Minnesotans, actually reduces costs for all of us by reducing the amount of uncompensated care shouldered by the state's hospitals and clinics.

A report this spring by Families USA, a health care consumer group, bore that out. In its report, it estimated the cost of uncompensated care at over $900 per family in the U.S. However, because of innovative programs like MinnesotaCare, the cost for uncompensated care for the average Minnesota family is around $350.

I was happy to see that final budget agreement protected coverage for the nearly 40,000 Minnesotans whose coverage was threatened by the governor's health care proposal.

Still, the agreement was by no means perfect. The main reason negotiations took as long as they did is because the sides couldn't agree on a way to pay for the increased education spending. That was complicated by the governor's tax pledge. Although he long ago agreed to the education spending limits demanded by the Senate majority, he wanted to pay for the increases through a combination of property tax increases, new fees, accounting gimmicks and the creation of a Vegas-style casino in the Twin Cities.

In the end, the governor's insistence that property taxes be the main vehicle for revenue increases won out. I personally don't agree with that approach. I think homeowners, particularly rural homeowners, have shouldered too much of the burden for balancing the budget the past few years. However, the compromise was necessary to complete a budget agreement.

Hopefully, we can return to this issue next session. I'm also going to make it a priority that we figure out a way to avoid the gridlock of the past two sessions. The negotiating process we're currently using clearly isn't working.

I'd also like to take the time to thank the citizens of District 2B for all of your support and input during the session. It's an honor to represent all of you here in St. Paul

ST. HILAIRE, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA   JULY 15, 1905

News Items

"Bowery dance tonight.

"We have been having quite a nice line of summer weather the past week.

"The dogs don't seem to take kindly to this muzzle business and but few are seen on our streets.

"The Great Northern has made a round trip rate of $5.00 from here to Duluth for the 20th of this month, returning on the 24th.

"K. O. Gigstad had some trouble with a kerosene lamp at his residence last week and is wearing his left hand in a bandage, the result of a bad burn.

"Parties coming in from Rocksbury yesterday report having seen another mad dog out there, or at least one that was acting strange. People cannot be too careful these days and all dogs should be watched closely.

"Thief River Falls lost several small buildings by fire last Thursday. Only prompt action saved the whole block from going up in smoke.

"I. Dahlin stopped exterminating the mosquito crop long enough last Wednesday to come into town and tell us how good it is to be a reservation farmer.

"Sealed bids for the grubbing and cleaning of the school grounds will be considered by the school board on July 26. Parties wishing to get information about the work to be done, apply to J. B. O'Brien. -- K. O. Gigstad, Clerk.

"Swan Johnson, the Rocksbury farmer who was bitten by a mad dog three weeks ago, has written home from Chicago that he will finish his treatment this week and be home today or the first of the week. He has had no noticeable ill effect from the bite and the institute people claim that there will be none."

Band Social

"The ice cream social given at the bowery last Wednesday evening by the band was a pronounced success in every way. A large number availed themselves of the opportunity to hear the boys play and they took in nearly $35.00 during the evening. The evening was fine, the music good, and the refreshments all right, so the crowd were all well pleased. The boys should do it again."

Bridge Condemned

"The road and bridge committee of the village council held a meeting yesterday and condemned the north bridge as unsafe. Persons using it until fixed, do so at their own risk. Some of the heavy stringers and supports have become so rotten as to render the bridge very dangerous. Notices have been posted at both ends of the bridge and it will be repaired as soon as possible. The bridge is owned and controlled by the village and has been in its present position since 1896."

Population 911

"According to the returns of Census Enumerator A. F. Lang, St. Hilaire has a population of 911. While this is only a gain of 71 for the past five years, it is a fairly good showing considering that the sawmill has reduced its capacity fully one-half and not over one-half as many men are employed as five years ago.

"If the addition north of town was in the village it would bring the total up to about one thousand.

"The township of River Falls has a population of 346 people."

New Rural Route

"Rural Route Inspector H. Harland was here last Tuesday and went over the proposed rural free delivery route which Nels K. Anderson has been working on for several months past. The proposed route runs northwest from here and covers most of the township of Sanders and part of Rocksbury. It will reach about one hundred farmers. Inspector Harland was not communicative and it is not known what his report on the question will be. The route seems feasible however, and will probably be granted."

Another County Seat Chapter

"They have been having some more trouble down at Crookston this week before Judge Watts in the county seat matter. William Erb, who is supposed to be in favor of Red Lake Falls, asked the court for a mandamus compelling the county commissioners to act. It was presumed by Thief River Falls parties that this was only a blind to keep them from making the same move so they asked to be made a party to the suit. This was objected to by the county seat attorneys but Judge Watts granted the request.

"A motion was then made by the Red Lake Falls attorneys to dismiss the suit on the technical ground that County Auditor Ford was not made a party to the suit. This motion was denied by the court and it is said that the question will be carried to the [Minnesota] supreme court. The chances for a long drawn out legal battle lasting several years seems to be better every day."

Pennington County Votes 3,679 to 1,894 to Retain Dispensaries

"By a decisive, nearly two-to-one margin of 3,679 votes to 1,894, Pennington county citizens voted in a special election Monday to continue the sale of liquor through the three municipal dispensaries in the county. The 1,894 votes cast in favor of prohibition were seven less than the 1,901 persons who had signed the petitions earlier this year demanding a special election on the issue.

"A near-record total of 5,573 votes were cast Monday, 641 more than the total of 4,932 cast in 1947, when liquor sales were authorized again after Pennington county had been dry since the saloons were voted out in 1915.

"Compared to the 1947 elections when 18 townships voted against the sale of liquor to only three in favor, Monday's vote showed 12 townships supporting the sale of liquor and nine opposed."

School Board Buys Two Buses And Bleachers

"After considering bids opened Wednesday and Thursday evenings, the Thief River Falls board of education purchased equipment for the local schools costing more than $20,000.

"Among the major items were two 42 passenger school buses with International chassis, bought from C. Gustafson & Son, lowest of four bidders. Prices to be paid, after allowing for the trade-in of two 1947 model buses, are $4,531 for a chassis with a Superior body and $4,255.63 for a chassis with a Wayne body.

"Bought at the cost of $8,095 delivered in this city were bleachers for the new Lincoln high school athletic field, with a seating capacity of 1,080 to 1,200 persons."

Thief River Jaycees Are Getting Dunked At County Fair

"Large crowds are being attracted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce booth at the Pennington county fair, at which baseball tossers are given a chance to dunk Jaycees Phil Hess and Stan Gibson into a tank of cold water. (Who would wish for a nicer job these hot days?) Ormond Johnson, Jaycee president, explained the deal by saying that it is a fund-raising activity to support various Jaycee community activities throughout the year."

Court House Soon Ready To Be Occupied

"Plans for moving offices into the new court house, now in the final stages of construction, were discussed by the Pennington county board at its regular July meeting. The hope was expressed that the building will be available for occupancy sometime in August.

"Minor changes were approved in the contract with the Farnham company, covering furniture and equipment for the new structure."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THE NEWS, JOHN W. EASTMAN, PUBLISHER   JULY 13, 1905
THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

D., S. S. & A. Is Coming
Another Railroad to Be Built into Thief River Falls

"It has been an open secret for a year now that in the spring of 1906 work would be commenced of building a railroad from Duluth to Thief River Falls.

"The Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad, which is closely allied to the Soo (the Canadian Pacific being the parent road of both), is the one that will do the building.

"For the past few days settlers have been coming in from the eleven towns bring the report that a large surveying party working west towards Thief River Falls is in that country. As near as can be learned, the survey is about four miles north of the Red Lake river at Highlanding, but it is also said that a survey south of the river is being made.

"Sheriff Thomas Bailey of Beltrami stated to the News Monday that he met the surveying party north of Blackduck last week, but could gain no information from them further than the fact that their destination was Thief River Falls.

"It has been impossible to secure any positive information about the matter, but business men of Thief River Falls have had assurance time and again from people in a position to know that the Duluth and South Shore road would certainly build a line into Thief River Falls during the year 1906 and thus give the Canadian Northwest a direct line to Duluth.

"In this connection it may also be stated that the Soo will continue to build railroads in this section next year and is going to construct several branch lines from its Thief River Falls line to Kenmare. It is also quite possible that a branch will be extended from this city to the country northeast of here."

Will Be a Big Fair
Arrangements for County Fair Progressing in Fine Shape

"Considerable advertising matter for the Red Lake county fair to be held in Thief River Falls on August 9, 10 and 11, has been distributed about town during the past week. The fair this year is going to be a hummer, and will far eclipse all previous attempts. The association is upon a sound financial basis and can spend a great deal of money for attractions and amusement features. The T. I. Cash company will furnish most of the amusement features and that insures an excellent line. A large number of prominent horsemen from different parts of the country are corresponding with the secretary and signify a willingness to attend [referring to the horse racing feature of the fair]. Farmers should make it a point to exhibit at the fair."

May Build a Steamboat
Farmers Living Up Near Highlanding Considering the Matter

"Thomas Sullivan and P. Sullivan, two of the hustling settlers living up near Highlanding were in the city last week. They stated that the farmers living up in their neighborhood were thinking seriously of purchasing or building a steamboat to run between different points on the river and Thief River Falls. They were of the opinion that they could furnish plenty of employment for the boat and believe that it would prove a paying investment. A meeting of those interested has been called and the matter of cost and subscription of stock will be taken up."

No More Hired Players

"Manager LaBree on Tuesday released John Taylor and for the remaining part of the season Thief River Falls will not have any hired ball players. This does not mean, however, that the club will not be a strong one, as we have plenty of good talent right here at home and some good games will be played before the season is ended."

A Big Gain for Thief River Falls
Our Population Said to Have Doubled in Past Five Years

"Census Enumerator Alex Sweans last week completed the work of taking the census of Thief River Falls. No figures are as yet given out, but it is generally believed that our population has passed the 3,500 mark, although it did not reach 4,000 as many had believed that it would. This is about double what it was five years ago and if we do as well during the next five years, there will be no reason to complain.

"St. Hilaire, it is understood, has also made a substantial gain and has some 900. Red Lake Falls will have about 2,000. Next week we hope to be able to give the total population of the county."

Decided in Our Favor
County Seat Fight Up Before Judge Watts on Tuesday

"The county seat case came up before Judge Watts Tuesday, and, as was to be expected, it was decided in Thief River Falls' favor on all points. Judge Watts allowed the Thief River Falls attorneys to intervene, which was strongly objected to by the Red Lake Falls attorneys. Then the Thief River Falls attorneys submitted their complaint, and this too was objected to by the Red Lake Falls attorneys. Judge Watts again decided in favor of Thief River Falls and gave the Red Lake Falls attorneys twenty days in which to file an answer or take an appeal. Everything that Thief River Falls has contended for has been granted and it will be only a matter of time before an election is held."

Bills authored by Rep. Penas approved

Several bills authored by Rep. Maxine Penas (R-Badger) have been included into the Agriculture, Environment and Jobs Finance omnibus package that was approved by the Legislature during the special session.

"All of these create a benefit for Minnesotans," Penas said. "These programs work to improve the state's agricultural industry, and I'm glad they are going to be signed into law."

The first piece of legislation would extend the life of the Organic Advisory Task Force (HF2249).

The task force is designed to advise the commissioner of agriculture on policies and practices to improve organic agriculture in Minnesota. Current law says the task force must meet at least twice each year through June 30, 2005. This bill would extend that time frame until June 30, 2009. This provides services to those who wish to do organic farming. It does require additional funds to the Department of Agriculture.

A second piece of legislation was money appropriated for turf grass research. It would provide grants totaling $130,000 to the Northern Minnesota Forage-Turf Seed Advisory Committee for basic and applied research on the improved production of forage and turf seed related to new and improved varieties.

"Turf seed is important to our economy and its application goes beyond our state and country," Penas said. "We always need to keep working on new and improved varieties."

The third piece of legislation extends the expiration date for the Farmer-Lender Mediation program, which provides a unique opportunity for debtors and creditors to meet as a group to mediate financial issues. This program reduces the time and costs of agricultural conflicts, and allows the parties involved to resolve their own disagreements.

Overall, the bill's net General Fund target of $85,852,000 is $18,000 more than the governor's request, and provides funding for the production of ethanol for the next two years. The bill also establishes and implements a livestock equipment pilot loan program to help finance the first purchase of livestock-related equipment and make livestock facilities improvements.

It will provide $300,000 to the Department of Agriculture for statewide groundwater monitoring. Since groundwater monitoring is becoming a very "hot" topic, Penas said she is glad that a department with a farmer focus is also involved.

BSU awards transfer scholarships to former NCTC students

Korczak, Roppe and Hoffman transferred to BSU from Northland Community and Technical College, Thief River Falls.

The Transfer Scholarship is available to Minnesota community college transfer students who completed an associate degree with a grade point average of 3.5 or higher.

BSU will present more than $1.1 million in academic, talent, and leadership scholarships this year. The awards are made possible by donations to the BSU Foundation, the Alumni Association and other organizations that specify funds for such causes.

A double-stroller decorated with flags and garland was part of the annual Fourth of July parade put together by daycare provider Marsha Jensen. The 2005 version of the event was rescheduled to July 7 due to rain that postponed the outing June 31.

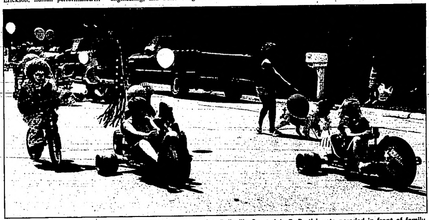
U.S. Energy Department awards $911,000 to Minnesota

Tuesday, Secretary of Energy Samuel W. Bodman announced that the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) is providing Minnesota with $911,000 in State Energy Program (SEP) grants for Fiscal Year 2005. SEP grants support and encourage state energy-saving and efficiency goals.

"These grants will help states improve energy efficiency in ways that meet their individual needs," said Bodman. "Increasing America's energy efficiency is a key component of President Bush's national energy policy."

State energy program funds have supported projects, such as California's "Energy Saving Traffic Lights;" Illinois' Small Business $mart Energy Program; Indiana's purchase of two compressed natural gas street sweepers; and Kentucky's biodiesel infrastructure program, connecting biodiesel customers with biodiesel distributors across the state. SEP projects are managed by state energy offices with support from DOE's six regional energy efficiency and renewable energy offices.

Every $1 invested by SEP is matched by $3.54 from state and local governments and the private sector, and saves the American people $7.23. SEP saves an average 41.35 million British thermal units per year, reducing energy bills by $256 million. DOE is distributing a total of $44 million in SEP grants this year to every state and U.S. territory, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.



Postponed a week due to rain, the annual Fourth of July parade staged by daycare provider Marsha Jensen marched down Belleville Court July 7. Participants paraded in front of family, friends and residents of the area.

Kiffmeyer seeks applicants for voter registration project

Secretary of State Mary Kiffmeyer is soliciting applicants to be considered for appointments to a Voter Registration Application Redesign Advisory Committee. The voter registration application is the form that people complete in order to be put on the roster of eligible voters.

It will be the aim of the advisory committee's deliberations to make the form more user-friendly for citizens to provide information and more practical for election administrators to capture required data.

"This is an opportunity for the people of Minnesota to be involved with a very practical aspect of the election process," said Kiffmeyer. "I look forward to meeting with the members of the committee and getting their advice."

The secretary of state's office will appoint members of the advisory committee, and applicants are being sought from the private sector, local government, the general public and the Legislature. People with expertise in graphic layout and election administration are especially encouraged to apply.

The advisory committee will meet three times – once in August and twice in September – in St. Paul.

People interested in being considered for service on the advisory committee should submit a cover letter and resume by Aug. 5 to Kathie Battle-Sayles, Election Administrator, Office of the Secretary of State, 174 State Office Building, 100 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55155, or e-mail her at kathie.battle-sayles@state.mn.us.

TRF sales tax exemption request hits another snag

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

It's the request that never dies, and apparently the request has hit a snag – again. The Minnesota House of Representatives would not accept the language of legislation that would enable the city of Thief River Falls to receive a sales tax exemption for the construction of Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA).

"It is dead at this moment," said Thief River Falls City Administrator Jodie Torkelson. "Whether LeRoy [Stumpf] wants to reintroduce it, I don't know."

Sen. LeRoy Stumpf said he plans to reintroduce the measure. He noted he had also talked to Sen. Larry Pogemiller, Senate Tax Committee chairperson, and Pogemiller had agreed to talk to the tax commissioner to comply with what the Legislature had intended to do with regard to the exemption.

"It's been frustrating, very frustrating," Stumpf said about the request for a sales tax exemption.

Since 2002, the city has attempted to receive a sales tax exemption for the construction of the arena. This was the fourth time it had attempted to receive the exemption. Torkelson estimated the sales tax at $356,000 for the construction of REA.

In 2004, the measure had passed in both houses of the Minnesota Legislature. However, the legislative session adjourned before a conference committee could meet to reconcile the bill between the Senate and House of Representatives. As a result, it was not made into law.

Even though the Legislature had intended to give the city the sales tax exemption, the Minnesota Department of Revenue refused to issue an exemption to the city.

About this latest attempt, Stumpf said, "It doesn't mean we can't get it."

Mayor Dale Wennberg seems to be less optimistic than Stumpf at this latest turn of events. "I think we're back farther than square one, I really do," he said.

Wennberg did look at the brighter side of it all. About Ralph and Betty Engelstad's gift of an arena, he said, "We still got a great gift."

Another spectacular ending to the 2005 Pennington County Fair. Fireworks lit up the skies over Rogers Brothers Shows midway in Thief River Falls. The event was sponsored by Rogers Brothers and the Pennington County Fair Board.

Bullride thrills crowds in TRF

Some of the best bullriders in the circuit were in Thief River Falls last week for the Thunder on Hooves Bullride. The event, which coincided with the 2005 Pennington County Fair, had a total payout of $37,622.

Riders were challenged by the tough stock string of Jerry Nelson. In fact, only two riders accumulated a score for two rides in one night. Nevertheless, it made for some memorable and exciting bullriding moments.

This year's winner of the Thunder on Hooves was Edgard Oliveria of Keller, Texas. Oliveria won $9,932.21 with a total of 174.5 points. As of July 7, rankings put Oliveria in 44th overall, so his points and winnings in Thief River Falls will likely boost him up in the rankings.

Second place went to Helton Barbosa of Douradina, P.R., finished in second place with 174 points and takes home $6,922.45.

Third place went to Chad Denton of Berry Creek, California. Denton had a 90-point ride on Friday, which was good enough for third place overall, and an additional bonus of having the highest point ride in the Long Go, which is the first ride of the night. For third place overall, he won $3,912.69. For having the highest point-total for a single ride, he won $3,009.76.

Many of the next five riders also won bonus dollars for the point totals they accumulated in their first rides, and placed in the top 10 overall.

Reuben Gelenynse of Winchester, Ontario, Canada, won $2,708.78 for fourth place overall, and $2,257.32 for the second highest point total ride.

Curtis Seamans of Ranenden, Ark., won fifth place overall and $1,805.86.

Edgard Oliveria of Keller, Texas, was the overall winner at the 2005 Thunder on Hooves PBR Bullride in Thief River Falls last week. Oliveria accumulated a total of 174.5 points on his two rides.

For a moment, the crowd looked on in horror as a bull appeared to get the best of this cowboy. The cowboy emerged from the encounter with a cut to his head.

Commissioners ponder fate of nursing home

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Definite changes are needed at Oakland Park Nursing Home, according to a facility assessment of the nursing home that was presented to the Pennington County Board of Commissioners, during the board's July 12 meeting.

A facility assessment was compiled by Ecumen Consulting Services of Shorview, a nursing home management company with 23 nursing home clients. The assessment was conducted over a five week period and was presented to the board by Ecumen's director of consulting services, Sue Schwartz Nelson. She said it is evident that the facility is operated with a sense of pride, adding that the curb appeal is great.

Written assessments and recommendations were made by Ecumen employees, John Korzendorfer, senior director of campus operations - operations; Nelson RN/C, and Cheryl Simpson, RN - clinical; Sandra Weston, Ecumen Finance Team - financial function; Ecumen Human Resources office - HR; and Rebecca Ziesmer, Ecumen Information System team - IS.

Nelson noted that Korzendorfer

Greenwood Street bridge timing is questioned

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

With references to putting the chicken before the egg and so forth, the Thief River Falls City Council discussed, at its July 12 meeting, the future Greenwood Street bridge and a potential railroad crossing.

For many years, city leaders have planned to construct a Greenwood Street bridge and also connect Greenwood Street to Pennington Avenue. If Greenwood Street intersected Pennington Avenue, a railroad crossing may be needed east of that intersection. That railroad crossing may be in the form of an underpass. Council members have already agreed to proceed with the bridge construction and seemed to have agreed to pursue the railroad crossing after the bridge is built.

Towards the end of the July 12 meeting, during the portion in which council members are asked if they wish to make any comments, Mayor Dale Wennberg noted he thought city leaders needed to think about having the railroad crossing before the bridge.

The council has already committed to constructing the bridge, council member Harriet Worker noted. She added that the city cannot do both projects at the same time.

Council member Glen Kajewski agreed with Wennberg. "We'll be a city that's bridge rich and underpass poor."

Matt Langland donates his graduation gifts to Historical Society

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Possibly the Pennington County Historical Society's youngest benefactor, Matt Langland, 19, made a significant donation to the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village earlier this year. Langland, a 2005 graduate of Lincoln High School, donated every penny of his graduation gift money to the Pennington County Historical Society and its Pioneer Village.

Langland chose not to specify the amount of the donation, only stating that it was enough to purchase a flagpole, flag and base, and a portion of a scanner that will be used to digitally preserve history. Many high-school grads would struggle with the decision to donate all of their gift money. That was not the case for Langland.

"I know that this place needs the money," Langland said. "This place needs the money more than I do. It can use the money better than I can."

Langland's efforts to better the Pennington County Historical Society and Pioneer Village are nothing new. He began volunteering there in 1998, was employed for a short time, and now continues to volunteer his services to the village as often as possible.

Langland's family has also been a consistent supporter of the Pioneer Village. Their continued support led to Langland providing voluntary help at the age of 11. Since then, he has lent at least a few hours of his time to the Village each week.

Caryl Bugge, Pennington County Historical Society director, said Langland started volunteering for the Historical Society shortly after she accepted the position of director.

"He knows as much about what goes on here as I do," Bugge said, adding that Langland occasionally leads tours of the village.

When Langland announced his gift in May, he designated that funds be used toward the purchase of a flagpole and flag for the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village. He also designated any remaining funds toward the purchase of a photo/document scanner.

The flagpole base was poured on Tuesday, July 12, with the first flag raising on July 13.

Matt Langland, 19, prepares the U.S. flag for display at the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village. The flag, flagpole and base were purchased using money donated by Langland.

Crop Disaster Program deadline announced

Producers who suffered crop loss from damaging weather in 2003 and 2004 are eligible for assistance. The Farm Service Agency announced that eligible producers may sign up for the Crop Disaster Program (CDP) until the close of business on Sept. 9 for the 2003 and 2004 crop years.

"We are pleased to be able to provide these benefits to producers as quickly as possible," said JoDell Poolman, Marshall County executive director. "Drought, floods and hurricanes are unpredictable weather events that put farmers and ranchers at risk in producing a dependable and affordable national food supply. Sign-up for this program opened on March 14 of this year."

Producers suffering a greater than 35 percent production loss and/or more than a 20 percent quality loss are eligible. The payment rate for CDP has been increased to 65 percent of the established commodity price for insured crops and noninsured crops, and 60 percent of the price for uninsured commodities. Previous disaster assistance provided payments of 50 percent of the established commodity price for insured and non-insurable crops and 45 percent for uninsured crops.

Producers may apply for the CDP for any crops that are eligible for coverage under the Federal Crop Insurance or the Noninsured Assistance Program.

Attention parents: A special day is coming your way

Did you know there is a National Parents' Day?

This national day of observance was created in 1994 when President Bill Clinton signed into law and adopted the fourth Sunday of every July as Parents' Day. According to the congressional resolution, Parents' Day was established for "recognizing, uplifting and supporting the role of parents in the rearing of children."

"There is probably no greater vocation more sacred than parenting," said John Manz, counselor with Lutheran Social Service. "Parenting plays such a powerful and important role in shaping our children and what we become as a society in future generations."

While there are a variety of resources available for parents, here are a few tips from Manz to help parents become the best they can be for their children:

- Create reasonable rules. Rules are a way of providing security and showing your child that you care. They help keep children safe, and provide an environment where children can blossom and flourish. Be sure to share clear expectations of your children, offer them healthy choices, be a good listener, and keep lines of communication open.
- Parent together. Be unified as co-parents in your decisions about parenting. If you disagree, talk together before approaching your child with a decision or consequence. Be ready to say, "I support your mother in her decision." Even if parents are no longer married or together, children are better served when their parents are supportive of one another in their roles as parents.
- Be a positive role model. Actions speak louder than words. Show your child the kind of behavior you would like to see in him or her.
- Nurture family values. Love your child unconditionally, and tend to your family well.
- Provide good structure. Kids thrive on routine. Have regular waking times and bedtimes. Sit down together as a family at dinner to talk about your day.
- Stay in charge. Be playful with your spouse and parental with your child. One of the best gifts that we can give our children is a healthy, loving relationship with our spouses. We can be playful with our children, too, but out primary role is not to be our child's buddy, but a parent.

Minnesota cathode ray tube disposal ban delayed

Gov. Tim Pawlenty has signed legislation that delays the implementation of the disposal ban for cathode-ray-tube-containing products such as televisions and computer monitors. The revised disposal ban will go into effect July 1, 2006.

The ban was delayed by one year in order to consider management strategies for waste electronics and to address concerns from local governments regarding the costs to establish comprehensive electronics recycling programs.

The legislation also established a Waste Management Task Force to examine potential statewide systems to manage electronic waste among other issues. The task force, to be composed of legislators, will develop findings and recommendations and report to the House and Senate environment committees by Jan. 15, 2006.

Minnesota residents and businesses are encouraged to visit the Minnesota Office of Environmental Assistance Web site at www.moea.state.mn.us to learn about existing opportunities for recycling waste electronics in Minnesota.

PARENTING TIPS
Eat Right - Stay Healthy

The Food Guide Pyramid was developed to help everyone choose the proper amounts and types of food to eat for better health. The Food Guide Pyramid suggests a range of servings in each major group.

*Meat, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs and nut group: 2-3 servings
*Milk, yogurt and cheese group: 2-3 servings
*Vegetable group: 3-5 servings
*Fruit group: 2-4 servings
*Bread, cereal, rice and pasta group: 6-11 servings.

The number of servings right for each individual depends on his/her age, sex, size and amount of activity. Almost everyone (including children) should have at least the lowest number of servings in the range. However, the size of a serving should vary with age. For example, an adult serving of bread is one slice or one half cup of rice. For a child, a serving would be one half slice of bread or one fourth cup of rice. Also remember that a helping and a serving are not the same. A large helping of macaroni may actually be several servings.

Use this food guide to plan your family meals. Are they eating enough from each food group? Do you need to include more from some of the groups? Do you need to include less from some of the groups? If children see and taste a variety of foods when they are young they will be more likely to continue to eat them as they grow older.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Name the different foods that you are serving. Talk about the size, shape and color of these foods.

The challenges in agriculture

FBM instructor, Fergus Falls

This growing season has been a lot of things. Early last spring, with few early rains, there was talk about the drought moving east. Since then, parts of the region have had a tough growing season. The small grains went in without a hitch and then the spring rains began, and it has been a fight ever since in parts of the region to plant, spray and cultivate. The recent warm weather has given the row crops a chance to catch up and those that haven't been standing too long in water are beginning to look good. While certain parts of the region are battling excess moisture, other parts of the state are enjoying much deserved great looking crops and ample forages after surviving some dry years.

In agriculture, each year brings it own weather-related challenges and rewards as well as other challenges like fluctuating market prices, hail, the Central American Free Trade Agreement, disease and the current farm program.

Income is a result of yield or pounds produced, and prices, which seem to be the biggest year-to-year variables. Expenses climb a few percent each year but these can be calculated. Farm operations that prepared a cash flow early in the year should bring them up to date and recalculate yields and prices to anticipate, with their lenders, what to expect as the growing season progresses.

Farmers manage operations that have been around for many years and have grown through good and bad years. Many of this and other years' successes and failures are a result of factors beyond the farm family's control. In a profitable year, remember to build working capital for those years when it is needed. If the present year is not looking as expected, monitor your cash flow and make needed changes with your lender to get ready for next year.

Sunday, June 26, 2005

This morning started out at about 2:45 a.m. when I started getting ready to leave. We got ready, picked up Philip and then went to the college where we met the other band members, roadies, groupies and triangle players! Around 4:20 a.m. or so, we took off for the Cities. We stopped once in Frazee at the rest stop and then again in St. Cloud at McDonald's before we got to the airport.

We then proceeded to check in and wait for our plane. Our first stop was in Atlanta, Ga., which was then followed by another stop, almost eight hours later, in Shannon, Ireland. We finally pulled into the Dublin airport around 9:30 a.m. [illegible] The plane was [illegible] and [illegible] which we were [illegible] but at least we were almost there!

We began our journey on June 26 when our group traveled by bus to the Minneapolis-St. Paul airport. From there we flew to Atlanta, changed planes and went on to Shannon, Ireland. Some passengers got off here, but our group stayed on the plane and went on to the Dublin airport arriving at approximately 10 a.m. on Monday.

Monday, June 27, 2005

We finally made it into Dublin around 9:30 a.m. Gosh, that was a long flight! As soon as we got off the plane, we went immediately to the charter bus that would be carting us around for the entire trip. I think it's the most colorful/festive bus ever! The seats were maroon with colorful squiggles and the curtains were bright orange!

Anyway, we loaded the bus and went straight to Dublin Castle. This tour was full of colorful rooms, old ancient steps and a lot of walking. By that time, though, a lot of us were tired and just wanted to get to the hotel to change.

After that, we ate lunch and then proceeded to Trinity College, where they keep the Book of Kells. Trinity also has rights to one free copy of every book published in Ireland/England. After visiting Trinity, we went to Christ Church Cathedral, which was really impressive from the outside. It looked like a gothic castle, with pointed tops and lots of intricate designs.

Finally, after the Cathedral, we got to go to our hotel, Chief O'Neill's Hotel, where we checked in and had about an hour break before we went to Farrington's for supper. It felt so good to shower, get into clean clothes and rest a little. We were all so much happier after that!

We walked to Farrington's from our hotel, which was about one half mile to [illegible] mile away. There we had [illegible] like an [illegible] Irish stew and cheesecake. After that we went back to the hotel and went to bed!

[illegible] and took us on a small city tour on the way to Dublin Castle. We arrived at the castle at 11:30 a.m. This castle was designed to house King John of England's treasures and taxes and to establish the English base in Ireland in 1204. For our 45-minute lunch break, I went to the Duke and had a sandwich and "a pint."

After lunch we were off to Trinity College where we saw the Book of Kells and the Long Room of the Old Library. Christ's Church Cathedral built in 1186 was our next stop. There we took photographs in the crypt and outside of the cathedral. We then drove around city central for about 30 minutes and were then dropped off at Chief O'Neill's Hotel. We were given one hour to change and then it was off to Farrington's Restaurant in the Temple Bar area for dinner at 7 p.m. Following dinner, we went out to another pub for some live music entertainment. We then headed back to our hotel and called it a night.

Tuesday, June 28, 2005

This morning, we had an authentic Irish breakfast with eggs, sausage, ham, potatoes, pudding, toast and juice. It was absolutely wonderful! After breakfast we loaded our band equipment into the bus, and then Karl, Adam, Tom and I went wandering.

We went north of the Liffey, then to O'Connolly Bridge, followed by a run down Grafton Street to lead us to St. Stephen's Green, where we had our first concert. There were actually a lot of people who listened and watched us. It was so much fun!

After that, we went to the Guiness Storehouse, attempted to go to St. Patrick's, and then went on the Dart to Howth. That was a lot of fun! In Howth, we ate at a little restaurant where I had scampi and the boys had fish and chips. Oh, and Karl, Adam and I had chocolate mousse while Tom had ice cream afterward. Yummy!

After supper, we went on the pier where we had a wonderful view of the Irish Sea, the peninsula coming out of Howth and the island a little ways off the shore. We also got to see some of the people there attempting to catch some sort of fish. That's about the time it started to rain too; and oops, I sort of took out Tom's umbrella before we left because I was sick of hauling all of that stuff around! All three of the guys gave me grief about that! Wow! So, I just shook all the water from my umbrella off onto Karl and Tom to get back at them!!

After we were done at the pier, we went to a little shop called Ann's where we were able to escape from the rain for awhile. Once we were done there, we found a church/castle thing, but by that time we were getting so wet, that we didn't really stay that long. Then we headed back to the Dart where we were able to get back to Dublin.

We went back to the hotel for awhile so that Karl could change. From there we proceeded to Temple Bar and another pub that had Irish music playing. Temple Bar was so crowded that we just saw the band that was playing and then left again. And, after all that work with getting our passports out to show IDs!

The second pub we went to also had Irish music, but they started packing up just as we came in! So, from there we just took the Luas back to our hotel and then went to bed! Oh, I forgot, while we were waiting for the Luas between the hotel and the Temple Bar, we had a fairly interesting conversation about Karl's leprechaun.

Tuesday we rose and had a great breakfast of very good bacon, eggs, hash browns and toast at Chief O'Neill's. We then loaded the instruments on the bus, boarded and drove to the city center at Merrion Square. Mike Gilbertson and I walked over to the statue of Oscar Wilde and took photographs. We then ventured on to the National Gallery of Ireland and saw Rembrandt's "Flight to Egypt" painting. We also saw several Renoir's and Cezanne's. Surprisingly, admission was free.

St. Patrick's Cathedral was next and following a short tour there, Mike headed to St. Stephen's Green (a square city block park) for practice prior to their 1 p.m. performance. I took the time to stop at a grocery store with a deli, enjoyed a submarine sandwich, and headed over to the park to enjoy our group's performance for about 45-minutes. I then headed back toward the hotel; and on the way stopped at the city's Visitor Center and also took a photograph of Molly Malone's statue. I stopped at the Hard Rock Cafe in the Temple Bar area and bought a t-shirt and then walked over the O'Connell Bridge and took a photograph of the Daniel O'Connell tribute statue.

I headed back to the hotel and met up with our group and rode the Luas (light rail train) over to a big terminal and switched on to the DART train (Dublin Area Rapid Transit) and rode it out to Howth, a harbor town about 10-12 miles from Dublin. There we saw the Howth Harbor and had dinner at a Fisherman's Restaurant. A small group of us went exploring and saw St. Mary's Anglican Church, the Lawrence Castle dating back to the Norman's 11th century, and the Deer River Golf Course where we had a beverage. There we tried to find the pro shop, but they really did not sell any merchandise to speak of. We then headed down to the train, but about three blocks away from the restaurant I discovered I had left my backpack on the seat next to where I was sitting. I ran back and it was still there, thank goodness, as my passport, ticket information and credit cards were in the pack.

We returned to Dublin and walked over to the Arlington Hotel where we enjoyed a beverage and listened to live Irish music and watched Irish river dancing. At the end of our evening, we stopped at the Cobblestone Bar for a nightcap and then headed back to our hotel for the night.

Wednesday, June 29, 2005

We got up this morning at 5 a.m. so we could have breakfast at 6 a.m. and load the bus at 6:30 a.m. After everything was packed, we proceeded to the coast of Ireland where we boarded the ferry (bus and all) that would take us to the coast of Wales. The ferry itself was huge! It had a few restaurants, a gift shop, an arcade and movie rooms. There was also a place where we could stand outside and wach, but it was so foggy that there wasn't that much to see.

Once we got to the coast of Wales, it was almost noon. We drove and drove, and drove, and drove some more. The view of the mountains was incredible! There were also lots of sheep, goats, cows and horses along the way – fields and fields of them! Oh, and our bus driver is absolutely crazy! Wow! We almost didn't make it through a bridge that we had to cross. There was about an inch of leeway on each side of the bus. But the view was awesome! Finally, we arrived at Coventry around 6:45 p.m. (which ended up being a five to six hour drive).

We checked into the Brittania Hotel, which had a wonderful view of Coventry Cathedral and then went out wandering – it was so much fun!

We had a 5:30 a.m. wake-up call on Wednesday, had breakfast at 6:30 a.m. and left the hotel at 7 a.m. to drive to Stena Line Ferry to go from Dublin, Ireland to Holyhead, Wales across the Irish Sea. We were lucky the sea was calm. It was about 70 miles across the water and took us about 3-1/4 hours to make the journey.

After exiting the ferry, we drove through Wales to Coventry, England. The area of Wales we drove through was called Snowdonia and was beautiful. There were huge hills they called mountains, with green valleys and lots of sheep. It is a big tourist area with people doing a lot of hiking and rock climbing.

We arrived at our hotel, The Britannia, in Coventry at approximately 6:40 p.m. We went to our rooms to freshen up and then we had a nice dinner at 7:30 p.m. We had some free time before settling in for the evening, so I took the opportunity to walk around the area and stop at a few local pubs.

Thursday, June 30, 2005

This morning after breakfast we got on the coach and went to Stratford to see Anne Hathaway's cottage and Shakespeare's birthplace. In between those two stops, we had another concert in the gazebo in the park. There weren't quite as many people at this concert as the previous one, but it was still fun. And I'm sure the geese and swans enjoyed it, too!

The cottage was just postcard-perfect. There were flowers and trees all around it and the house itself was beautiful! Shakespeare's birthplace was also very neat! It was old, in the middle of Stratford and also surrounded by flowers. After Shakespeare's birthplace, Tom and I wandered around and took a boat ride down the canal/river with Reg, Russ, Mike and Allianna. After that, we found a place to eat and then went back to Coventry.

Once we got into Coventry, Linda, Reg, Cathy, Karl, Adam, Tom and I went out walking and wandering until we were too tired to walk anymore.

We were late getting up because our wake-up call was missed. We rushed to get ready, had a quick breakfast and loaded the bus. We went to Stratford-Upon-Avon and stopped at Anne Hathaway's cottage, a beautiful 400-year-old structure. Hathaway was William Shakespeare's wife. She grew up in the country with her parents who were farmers who raised sheep. They were quite well to do. Shakespeare was 18 years old when he married Hathaway, then 26. She was three months pregnant at the time, which was fairly common even then, we were told.

Our band set up in the band shell and practiced some before their 12:30 p.m. performance. I walked to the Holy Trinity Church where Shakespeare is buried and then stopped at the Royal Shakespeare Theater for a snack before heading back to the park to attend the band concert. Following the performance, we broke for lunch and then toured the house and grounds of Shakespeare's birthplace. Shakespeare's father made fine gloves and traded wool and was quite well to do. After touring the home and gardens, I went to the Red Lion Restaurant and Pub for lunch. I had a brief chance to work on the Internet, as they wanted to close the office at 6 p.m. All the time I received was 10 minutes.

We met at the bus and drove back to Coventry, about 20 miles. We checked out a couple of pubs in the area; the last of which was called Jumping Jax where we had quite a bit of fun. They played some of our requests and we were announced as the band from Minnesota.

Friday, July 1, 2005

Today started out with a self-guided tour of Coventry Cathedral – the new one and the old one. We climbed 180-some steps to the top of the bell tower – wow! But the view was well worth the climb! Then we took off for Warwick Castle which ended up being absolutely incredible. There were tons of towers, dungeons, wax figures and picture perfect scenes. We also saw the engine room, the rose gardens and a "birds of prey" show!

Following our tour, we took off for London. When we arrived there, we checked into our hotel and went to the musical, "Fame," which was wonderful.

We rose, had breakfast, boarded the bus and toured the Coventry Cathedral, also called St. Michael's Cathedral. St. Michael's had been fire-bombed in 1940 by the Germans. All of the outer walls and floor are still there, but nothing from the roof or anything else made of wood is there. They built a new cathedral next to the old one and completed the project in 1962.

We went on to Warwick Castle where we toured the area for three hours. This castle was sold by the Earl of Greville (David Greville) in 1978 to The Tussauds Group which is the same company that owns the wax museums. The castle was impressive, one of the best in all of England.

We drove 2-1/2 hours to our hotel in London in the Hammersmith District. Groups of us rode "the tube," an underground railroad to Covent Garden and purchased theater tickets for that evening. Entertainment for the evening included: "The Rat Pack", "Les Miserables" and "Fame." I attended "The Rat Pack," which was a performance of Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., and Dean Martin at "The Sands" casino in Las Vegas. The performance was quite good. After the theater, we returned to our hotel.

USDA to extend CRP contracts

John Monson, Minnesota executive director for USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA), announced Monday that farmers and ranchers with certain Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) contracts expiring this year may extend their contracts for next year.

"The expiration affects approximately 15,443 acres now protected by the CRP in Minnesota," said Monson. "Extending certain existing contracts will ensure that CRP's environmental benefits are preserved."

The extension option applies to CRP participants with contracts scheduled to expire Sept. 30 and whose original contract with the extension will not exceed 15 years. Letters from FSA county offices will notify eligible CRP participants of their options to modify and extend their CRP contracts. About 500 Minnesota contracts are affected. The application deadline for this extension is Sept. 2.

The extension will not change participants' rental rates. All or a portion of the acreage under contract may be included in an extension, but no new acreage may be added. Obligations and responsibilities under the original contract continue to apply to contracts that are modified and extended.

USDA is not planning to offer a general CRP sign-up in fiscal year 2005. USDA has decided that extending contracts and conducting one more general CRP sign-up under the 2002 Farm Bill will be more efficient and cost-effective than conducting two general sign-ups. However, producers may continue to enroll relatively small, highly-desirable acreage, such as filter strips and riparian buffers, in the continuous CRP at any time at their local FSA offices.

For more information, contact a local FSA office or log onto the FSA Web site, which is available at www.fsa.usda.gov/dafp/cepd/crp.htm.

Extension seeks help finding new emblem for 4-H

The 4-H Youth Development organization in Minnesota loves the green clover, the emblem of the national 4-H organization. Yet, Minnesota 4-H has its own identity too, part clover, but distinctly Minnesota.

The organization meets modern aspirations of young people, and it is asking the people of Minnesota to help choose an image that matches who they are today.

"We wanted our logo to say 'Minnesota 4-H' a little louder," said Cara Miller, the executive director of the Minnesota 4-H Foundation. The five bold logo options are displayed on an online survey. Adults and youth alike are invited to take the survey and choose which logo best fits an exciting and enriching youth organization.

The survey can be accessed through the Minnesota 4-H Web site at www.MN4H.org, and respondents can even win prizes. Miller wants opinions of people who have never participated in 4-H, as well as those who can't imagine life without the organization.

Dorothy Freeman, the state 4-H program leader, says "You've got to believe in your brand. But beyond the new logo, the survey asks, 'What can we do to get you involved in 4-H?'"

"We want to reach more young people, so we need opinions from people who aren't already into it. This wonderful organization is open to all kids, and 4-H needs all kinds of volunteers. We have to ensure that our image is appealing to new audiences."

Minnesota 4-H youth development has volunteer-led 4-H Clubs that meet regularly, where kids "learn by doing" and take on leadership roles that help them gain confidence. There are also 4-H Adventures, short-term, fun learning experiences.

Minnesota 4-H is a part of the University of Minnesota Extension Service, so programming is based on knowledge of how youth best learn and grow in the hours when they're not in school. More than 100 project areas, ranging from the sciences and performance arts to leadership, serve more than 150,000 young people each year, with the help of over 11,000 adult volunteers.

Lack of cast members postpones "Carousel"

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

A lack of cast members has led to the postponement of "Carousel," which was to be produced this summer by the Thief River Falls Community Arts Council. The play may be produced in summer 2006.

"Carousel" was set to be performed the last week of this month. The Thief River Falls Community Arts Council has postponed it and believes it may be held in summer 2006, noted Duane Morey, council treasurer. As a result, "Beauty and the Beast" is the only show being performed this summer.

"It's no one's fault or failure, but we all learn from it," said Jane Anderson, who would have been the show's director. "I should have gotten more concerned when so few people showed up for auditions. They were well publicized, using the same type of advertising as 'Beauty and the Beast.' I also think that we learned that the theater community in this town isn't large enough to host two large shows (B and B had a cast of around 60, I think) in such a short period of time."

Although she was disappointed about the show being postponed, Anderson thought this year was a standout year for the council.

"I believe the community of Thief River Falls will remember 'Beauty and the Beast' as being one of the greatest shows put to stage in this town, so I think the theater community won't 'suffer' because of only one show this summer," said Anderson. "If anything, I believe it will stand out as being a banner year for actors and audience members alike."

Regarding the postponement of "Carousel," Anderson noted she originally planned to cast 35 to 40 actors. "I could even have lived with 30 if the quality of the chorus was fairly good," she said.

At the two evenings of auditions, Anderson said, a total of 21 people auditioned. "Generally, when a show like this is planned, one could expect conservatively 50 to 60 people to show up," she added. "I thought I'd get less than usual, but I had recruited some people to audition, and I wasn't worried. Even after auditions, I was optimistic."

Anderson said she cast all of the 21 people who auditioned. "Three of them called and backed out, so I was trying to recruit 50 percent of my cast," she said.

No one auditioned for any of the three leading female adult characters. Anderson was later able to recruit two actresses to play two of those roles. However, the main female lead was still open when the council made the decision to postpone.

"I was also running out of time – my goal was to get the show cast in May, begin individual and small group (leading role) work and music," said Anderson. "Until 'Beauty and the Beast' was over, I did not have access to the stage nor the accompanist, so I was also recruiting a fill-in rehearsal accompanist and finding rehearsal space. This didn't leave me time to actually work on the script, blocking, etc."

When the council is able to finally able to produce "Carousel," it hopes it will receive as much support from the public as it did when it produced "Beauty and the Beast."

For more information about the council or to participate in future productions, contact Ralph Cox at 681-0754.

Elaine Thompson • 874-7945

On Wednesday the 13th, Curt and Elaine Thompson drove to Thief River Falls to hear the Brazilian youth group who were returning from the A.F.L.C. Annual Convention in Colorado. It was so good to see Missionaries John and Ruby Able and Conely Dyrud again. They are also in Brazil. They had a very good service of sharing and singing in their language. Our Savior's Free Lutheran Church of Thief River Falls hosted them. They were excellent. Also, the Thompson's had a nice visit with friends they haven't seen in awhile.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: I noticed that a person can file for Social Security benefits online. If I use that option, does someone review the application?

A: Yes. When you complete your application for Social Security retirement online an internal computer alert is sent to a local SSA office based on your address. A SSA representative there will then bring your online application into the Social Security case processing system and review it from beginning to end.

Once that is done the representative will contact you to discuss supporting evidence needed, such as your birth certificate, and to resolve any questions. At that point the SSA representative can answer additional questions and might also suggest other types of Social Security benefits that you could apply for. Since some supporting evidence is almost always needed, the online application is not fully automated.

Online applications are not yet available for all benefits. Applications for retirement, benefits as a spouse, and disability are available but you can not yet apply for survivor benefits or the separate Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program online. Although the SSI application is not online, a medical background form used for it and SSA disability is online. For more information about filing an application for Social Security benefits online, go to the agency Web page at www.socialsecurity.gov. In the center column you will see a link to online applications.

Q: My aunt recently died. She received Social Security benefits for her adult disabled son, my cousin, so now what happens to his checks?

A: Whoever will be his new legal guardian should contact their local SSA office and file application to be representative payee for your cousin. His checks will be suspended unless a new payee is appointed quickly. Representative payees are people or organizations appointed by SSA to receive monthly benefits for someone who cannot manage or direct the use of his/her money. Acting on behalf of the beneficiary, a payee is responsible for everything related to benefits that a capable person would do for themselves. SSA does not recognize power of attorney for this purpose. More information about serving as a representative payee is found on the SSA website at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/payee

Time for annual picnics

Summer is the time for gatherings. Class reunions, family reunions, annual picnics - every group in existence finds an excuse to haul out the plastic plates and bins of potato salad and have a picnic.

The food is the highlight of all summer gatherings. Thank goodness for the energetic souls who dice up the potatoes and barbeque the pigs and bake the beans and butter the buns and cut up the watermelon and devil the eggs and mix the canned tangerines with whipped cream and marshmallows.

Not a week has gone by this summer when I haven't found myself at some point standing in line in a garage fanning myself with a plastic plate, waiting to get at those bins of food that somebody else has made.

You never go away hungry from a summer picnic. If they run out of meat or beans, you can always fill yourself up on the potato salad, for there's never a shortage of that.

Picnics are the one time it is acceptable for the traditional beer-gutted male to get involved with cooking without compromising his manhood. Grilling is an outdoor activity that involves fire and gadgets that produce fire, so it is a natural for men.

The gender division is symbolized by the sliding door on the deck. The raw meat, already spiced and tenderized to the point where no male playing with fire could screw it up, is passed from the kitchen to the deck through the sliding door.

The only male who can legally flip the meat is the head of the household where the picnic is held. Visiting males are obligated to stand and watch, beer in hand, make a comment or two about the computerized grill, and generally stay out of the way.

The most a visiting male can do by way of help is reach into the cooler to retrieve a dripping wet beverage.

When the meat is adequately charred, the household's alpha male transfers it back on to a plate. If he's really smart, it's a different plate than the bloody one which held the raw meat — and passes it back through the sliding door, where the females doll it up a bit before it goes on the folding table out in the garage.

Meanwhile, back in the kitchen, the females all pitch in to help finish the fruit salad and to stretch Saran wrap over the Tupperware containers before taking them out to the garage.

On the periphery of the adult food activity are the kids, chasing balls, splashing in little pools with grass clippings floating on top, throwing Frisbees at windows, scraping knees, and occasionally bothering the adults with a dispute that requires outside mediation.

The adults do their best to ignore the screaming kids, at least until somebody needs stitches or gets a concussion.

Eventually, it is time to eat. Unlike winter holiday gatherings, summer picnics have loose rules about saying grace. It is simply too difficult to get everybody organized and quiet. Just when you get all the kids in off the street and out of the pool, some bachelor who has no kids to worry about has started digging into the baked beans. Too late for grace then.

Picnic etiquette dictates that all dishes, cups, utensils and table cloths be made of paper or plastic. Anything that could shatter or even make a racket when dropped on a garage floor is out of bounds.

After going through the line, the main struggle is to find a place to sit without compromising your dignity by getting stuck straddling a picnic table bench or falling over backwards in a lawn chair.

It is acceptable picnic table etiquette to ask younger, more nimble people to run back and get you a napkin or a plastic knife rather than struggling to escape the picnic table yourself.

After cleaning one's plate, picnic etiquette demands that guests place their plastic plates and utensils in the summer dishwasher - a 30-gallon garbage bin set off to the side so the flies can have it to themselves.

...Slipped Through the Cracks

In a discussion on monsters, Joseph Duncan III, in particular, leads us to the way the state and federal governments are handling sexual offenders. The Fargo police department was not aware of the 2004 Minnesota molestation charge against Duncan until April, 2005. (Slipped through the cracks.) In 1990, Washington State passed a law authorizing involuntary commitment of violent sexual predators after their prison sentence is served. Janelle Guthrie, spokesperson for the attorney general's office, claimed that the Duncan case was never referred to that office. (Slipped through the cracks.)

Duncan had a blog site on the Internet in which he claimed to be pursued by demons that urged him to "harm society as much as I can and then die." Actually, Duncan had 18 or more Web sites, some of which were pornographic. Despite the fact that law enforcement agents were monitoring at least one of Duncan's sites, they were unable to learn where he was posting. The 2001 USA Patriot Act says that a federal judge may issue a court order for an Internet trace from anywhere in the country and it will bind in any jurisdiction. Duncan did not stop blogging on his main site until May 13, two days before the murders. And why wasn't a court order sought? And why didn't some of those people reading Duncan's insane blog statements report them to authorities? (Slipped through the cracks.)

Kootenai county (Idaho) sheriff's captain Ben Wolfinger said his department was not aware that Duncan was in its jurisdiction until after he was found with Shasta and that the department did not know of Duncan's weblog. (Slipped through the cracks.) The FBI has determined that Duncan spent seven weeks camping with the two children in northwest Montana. Didn't anyone see them or hear them? Pictures of the children had been plastered all around the northwest U.S. since the abductions. (Slipped through the cracks.)

On television we saw a video of Duncan and Shasta at a convenience store and gas station in Kellogg, Idaho. We saw a police car drive by the bright red Jeep Cherokee that Duncan had parked there with Duncan standing outside of the vehicle. The vehicle had been listed as stolen in St. Paul, after Duncan failed to return it on a rental. Why didn't the police notice? (Slipped through the cracks.) And we saw little Shasta wandering through the aisles at the convenience store while Duncan perused a newspaper and drank cups of coffee. The sales clerk said the little girl looked "familiar," and other shoppers appeared not to even notice the little girl. (Slipped through the cracks.)

It has been reported that a former Fargo pediatrician lent Duncan $6,500 for attorney's fees and that a prominent area businessman gave Duncan $15,000 to make bail at his child molestation hearing. Could this be what the secretive "private hearing" with the attorneys and Judge Schroeder was about?

Dr. Richard Wacksman, who now lives in New Port Richey, Fla., was Duncan's friend. Wacksman told police that the two met when Wacksman lived in Florida, but he lied. According to a memo from the Washington State Parole Board, they met in a San Francisco coffee house in 1997, when Duncan was on a brief parole between prison sentences. In that memo, it was stated that Wacksman claimed to be bisexual. He lived in Harwood, N.D., at that time and asked that Washington parole Duncan to his home there, where he lived with his wife and two children, ages 8 and 11. Wacksman's Harwood neighbors remember having a neighborhood meeting about the proposal. They rejected his proposal, as did the Washington State Parole Board.

Another of Duncan's friends who provided him with money is Joe Crary of Fargo. He and his cousin, Chuck, are founders of TerraMarc Industries, which has become big business since its inception as a two-man operation in a steel building in 1979. The Crary name is well-known in area philanthropy, public works and community events.

Joe Crary, in his July 11, 2005, letter to the Fargo Forum, stated that he met Duncan on a bike trail in Fargo and the two became acquaintances from that time. Crary said that when he learned Duncan was having financial problems, he helped him "get things straightened out, just like I have tried to help many others over the years." As far as the loan of $15,000, Crary said Duncan called him after writing a check to post bail in Becker County and asked for a loan to cover the check. "He assured me he was innocent of the charges...," Crary said. "So, in the end, I borrowed him the $15,000."

Duncan was obviously talented at impressing people. Some of the people he impressed used words like intelligent, honest, polite, sincere, clean-cut, articulate. Some of his acquaintances, professed friends, and/or lovers included a King County (Wash.) revenue officer, a Tacoma street minister, a prison teacher, and at least two mothers of young children, as well as those Fargo men mentioned previously.

In a psychological report on Duncan done two months before his July, 2000, release from prison, Dr. Carla van Dam wrote that Duncan was "likely to engage in acts of sexual violence," and needed additional testing and ongoing supervision. But Duncan did not qualify for these because he had served the full sentence for the rape of the Tacoma boy in 1980. In her assessment, van Dam stated that Duncan had been evaluated 14 times since his conviction at the age of 17, and that 87 percent of offenders with scores similar to his had reoffended within six years. Stating Duncan's inconsistencies in his statements were "cause for concern, as they reveal an individual who is quite skilled at lying," she noted Duncan was capable of cultivating "skilled and powerful allies who had expended a great deal of effort on his behalf."

Yes, slipped through the cracks, indeed!

School News & Views

Irv Peterson, Superintendent, School District 564

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch.

As you know, the state legislature has passed an education bill including a revenue increase for the upcoming biennium. We have received some early information on the highlights of the bill as I write this, but have not been able to examine all the specific areas of the new bill yet. The Minnesota Department of Education should have all the information for us during the week of the 18th, so we will be able to continue with planning for the upcoming year.

This will be the largest revenue increase that Minnesota public schools have received for a number of years so many school districts, including ISD # 564, will be on a much more stable basis after several years of program reductions. We will not be able to make many additions to our programs for 2005-2006, but we hope in our district to be able to make minor adjustments and additions to help students. Our planning process will be a methodical, calculated process over time to examine our ability to add and sustain programs over the long haul. With the new revenue also come some mandates of how and where to spend the dollars, so to a degree our decision-making is difficult.

The list of proposals for new or expanded programs in our school district will continue to receive consideration and discussion at the administrative and school board levels, but as I have said many times, there is a better chance of some additions in the second year of the biennium than in the upcoming school year.

A major piece of this education bill is an alternative quality compensation bill, called Q-Comp, that will allow school districts to negotiate methods to increase staff development, staff education and training in new teaching strategies and research, help fund teaching mentors, and base educational decisions on research and student assessments. These student assessments would include, but not be solely restricted to, the results of the state MCA tests or our NWEA tests in reading, math, and science. Once again, we only have knowledge of the basic framework of this piece of the new law. We need to fully understand it prior to developing our plan or applying it in our system. The Minnesota Department of Education has information and training sessions planned for school leaders in August.

With the Pennington County Fair coming to a close, we are only a few weeks away from school starting - and of course sports practices start in mid August. Soon the schools will be buzzing again with activities of all the students and teachers. Currently there are cleaning and repairing activities in all the schools, so in another sense, there is already much buzzing in the schools. We have also had classes in Challenger this summer with our revived Targeted Services Program and our usual summer schedule of classes at the ALC.

Test results are starting to trickle in from state tests. By the end of July we should have all the results from this past spring's round of Minnesota Comprehensive Assessments. The MDE is still planning on having all the results ready for Minnesota residents at the Minnesota State Fair in late August.

Training will start August first for some of our staff and school leaders on the new student information system, PowerSchool, that is being installed. As reported this past year, MacSchool, which has been our student accounting system for the past ten years, was obsolete and we needed a new system for state reporting purposes. Although this will be operational for office workers and other school employees this fall, it likely will be a full year before total implementation is accomplished.

July 18 is the date of the Education Foundation's annual Lowell Swenson Golf Fundraiser. This is a wonderful event supported by many local businesses and individuals, each to help the Foundation provide supplementary equipment and programs for our schools and students. In addition to the school's Education Foundation, many other foundations, businesses, and individuals support the work of our schools every year. Examples are the renovated auditorium, the refinished gymnasium floor at LHS, new scoreboards in LHS and FMS, tennis court and outdoor basketball court improvements and additions. We also have computer labs, science labs, a greenhouse at FMS, and so many more facilities and pieces of classroom and music equipment and curriculum due to the generosity of our community. We truly are blessed to have such tremendous support for all the young people in our community. Our daycares, our early childhood programs, the K-12 system, the private schools and the college all provide quality programs for our children and young people in this community. On behalf of our school system, and the children, thank you everyone. We'll soon have updates and information on all the activities of the new school year. Enjoy the rest of the summer. God Bless.

Valley Home receives $3.5 million loan

On July 12, Sen. Norm Coleman announced that Valley Home Assisted Living, located in Thief River Falls, has received a $3.5 million guaranteed loan through the United States Department of Agriculture's Rural Development Program. This loan, guaranteed by USDA and financed by Northern State Bank in Thief River Falls, will provide funding for a new 24-unit assisted living facility focused on people with memory impairment, such as Alzheimer's disease.

"I am pleased that Valley Home Assisted Living has received this loan," said Coleman. "Over the years, Valley Home has continually shown their commitment to those in need. Providing assisted living and health services to those in need is truly an honorable endeavor. I applaud both the USDA and Northern State Bank for recognizing the importance of Valley Home."

"Valley Home Assisted Living is very excited that our dream of constructing a memory loss assisted living unit for Thief River Falls and the surrounding communities has come true," said Valley Home Administrator Lynn Geller. "It will provide the opportunity for people who need assistance due to memory loss stay in a homelike environment, close to home, rather than having to go into a nursing facility."

Valley Home is a nonprofit organization that was originally formed in 1956 to provide care as a board and lodging facility. The entire facility was recently converted to assisted living and currently houses 65 residents.

Greenwood Street bridge timing is questioned

Referring to what she believes is a need for the Greenwood Street bridge, Worker said, "There's a lot of southern development."

Kajewski countered that most of the southern development is near Oakland Park Road.

Council member Ken Schmalz, who also serves as the Pennington County recorder, replied that the next development is planned south of Challenger Elementary School.

"I know it's a struggle," said Public Works Director Ron Lindberg in reference to which project should be completed first. He noted the Greenwood Street bridge may alleviate downtown traffic congestion.

The railroad may be having the same conversation about not having a railroad crossing at that location, Lindberg added. He noted railroad officials may be saying the city hasn't constructed the Greenwood Street bridge yet. However, Lindberg said the city "could pursue fast-track discussions with the railroad."

Community Development Director Mike Moore notified the council that Wanzak Construction of Fargo, N.D., has been named as the general contractor for the future Wal-Mart store. Among the subcontractors are Thygeson Construction and Lee Plumbing and Heating, both of Thief River Falls. Thygeson Construction expected it would install erosion control measures this week at the future Wal-Mart site, located near Highway 59 Southeast. It also expected to begin digging at the site during the first week of August.

The council meeting did not include a public discussion of the progress regarding Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA) management. Currently, Wennberg is serving as the interim REA general manager. Under his current contract, he is not able to work more than 1,000 hours. Council members approved hiring him after Tom Goddard resigned from the position in April.

In addition, there was not a public discussion about the REA management agreement between the city and REA Events Inc. That agreement is expected to expire July 21 since both sides had previously agreed to sever ties.

City Council approved REA Imperial Room and Dakota Clinic Hospitality Room (DCHR) fee schedules.

Given his employment as interim REA manager, Wennberg stepped down as chairperson for this portion of the meeting. Vice Mayor Dave Carlson took over as chairperson.

For the following fee schedules, a full day spans four to eight hours, and a half-day is up to four hours. The fees that were added are listed below:

- Full day/half of the Imperial Room – $300
- Half day/half of the Imperial Room – $180
- Deposit for the Imperial Room – 50 percent is due upon signing the contract, and the other 50 percent is due 30 days before the event
- Public service and not-for-profit events in the DCHR – Free on Mondays through Fridays when the building is open and staff are on the premises
- Public service and not-for-profit events in the DCHR – $25 per hour during hours when the building is not typically open and staff will have to work after their normally scheduled hours

The current fees will continue, including:

- Full day/entire Imperial Room – $500
- Half day/entire Imperial Room – $300
- Use of kitchen with outside caterer – $50 (Council members added the word "dishes" with this usage of the Imperial Room.)
- Full-day commercial and for-profit events in the DCHR – $100
- Half-day commercial and for-profit events in the DCHR – $60

The council approved the expansion of the Swenson House parking lot with 100 percent of the costs paid by Northland Community and Technical College (NCTC). By Lindberg's estimation, the new parking lot would provide space for an additional 28 cars north of the current parking lot. The current parking lot provides space for 26 cars.

As a result of the lack of parking in that area, many Swenson House visitors have parked on Centennial Drive. Police Chief Kim Murphy noted that the department was called out for "every large event" held at the Swenson House due to people parking in that area.

With the size of the current parking lot and use at the Swenson House, Carlson noted there was "no question" something needed to be done.

Despite that, Carlson seemed concerned with the number of non-NCTC events held at the Swenson House and its influence on private businesses. "I'm just uncomfortable with how it all turned out," Carlson said.

The council approved an Aug. 9 hearing date for a public hearing related to the construction of a Wal-Mart store. The public hearing will be held at 4:55 p.m. at City Hall. The public hearing will cover a recommendation for the city to vacate the frontage road adjacent to Barnick's First Addition.

The next council meeting is scheduled July 26 at 5 p.m. at City Hall. A Tax Increment Financing public hearing will be held prior to the meeting at 4:45 p.m.

Matt Langland raises the new flagpole at the Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village. Langland donated money to the Pennington County Historical Society that was used to purchase a flagpole, flag and concrete base.

School Board reviews evaluations

by David Hill
Editor

Three of his four children received help from the Area Learning Center (ALC) in Thief River Falls. Monday, July 12, he appeared before the Board of Education for School District 564 in Thief River Falls to thank them and to encourage them to continue their support of the ALC.

The area man (name withheld) said he had enrolled a son in the ALC. He began getting lower grades, he explained. The boy, he said, needed more one-on-one help. In an emotional explanation, he said his daughter got "off track" and had to enter a treatment center. When she completed her treatment, he said he called Mary (Forney) again at the ALC and enrolled his daughter. She's back on track to graduation, he said, thanks to the ALC.

"It has been a huge help to me," he said. "I'm sure we're in the minority," he added, "but everyone is important."

Mary Forney, director of the ALC, described this parent as a very dedicated parent.

Information presented by Forney indicated, however, that he must not be too unusual - more than 76 percent of parents of full-time ALC students attended parent-teacher conferences last year.

Forney strongly believes in parent involvement.

The ALC provides instruction to at-risk students. Forney has made numerous changes in the program, including the addition of stringent requirements. Students at the ALC, for example, must have goals and objectives and sign a contract. These students are also required to take MCAs, BSTs and NWEA exams. Nevertheless, programs and courses are customized to the needs of these at-risk students. She explained that they have different delivery systems and concepts, and classes have different names.

"What we've learned," said Superintendent Irv Peterson, "is that one size does not fit all."

Enrollment in the ALC, which has satellite classes in Roseau and Clearbrook-Gonvick, has continued to increase over the past few years. Forney noted that hours have also increased. For the 2004-2005 year, there were 202 students, and they completed 76,003 hours.

This also marked the one-year anniversary of the satellite office at Clearbrook-Gonvick. Forney reported that 30 students were enrolled in the program. She said there were some things "they need to tweak," but it was a positive experience. She said the superintendent said it was beneficial and wanted to continue the satellite office.

Program costs are borne by the Clearbrook-Gonvick School District.

Later, the Board of Education approved a resolution renewing the agreement with Clearbrook-Gonvick that provides them with an ALC site.

Evaluations

Monday night was a night for evaluations. At the June 27 meeting, representatives on the board of education completed a school board evaluation that looked at whether, for instance, the majority of the board meeting time is spent on issues of student achievement rather than budget/support services; and, whether appropriate roles of the board and superintendent are in written policy.

At the July 11 meeting, the board of education reviewed the evaluations and focused their discussions on the results that showed a wide separation of agreement. In all, the Board of Education reviewed 11 questions and discussed whether the differences were due to a misunderstanding, the need for more information, or a true disagreement. They then agreed on an action plan for each of those problem areas.

Representatives believe discussing these matters will lead to a better understanding and performance.

Monday, time was set aside for the annual review of the School District 564 Superintendent, Irv Peterson, as well. The review includes incentives for completing specific goals and objectives.

Peterson was complimented on his communication and leadership skills, and given high marks by the Board of Education.

Peterson thanked them for a positive review. He said he was trying to use the talents he's been given to the best of his ability. He said he also gives credit to the many people he works with. He added that he feels he has thrived here.

The Board of Education approved an incentive payment of $3,000 to Peterson.

During his report to the Board of Education, Peterson reported that he had received a letter from Barbara B. Leary, Ph.D. The letter complimented the District staff - Carol Ihle, Patrick Marolt, Mike Wienen, Tony Greene, and Superintendent Peterson. Marolt, Wienen and Greene gave a presentation at the Northwest Evaluation Association User's Seminar in Portland, Ore. on the District's success. "I felt compelled to write to you to let you know what a great job your staff did. They are a credit to the Thief River Falls Public Schools and the high academic standard that other states have come to expect of Minnesota," said Leary.

Leary was one of four NWEA facilitators who trained the staff to use the NWEA data.

The next regular meeting of the board of Education is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 8, at 6:30 p.m. in the conference room of the District Service Center.

Commissioners ponder fate of nursing home

visited the facility on May 26, 2005. He found Oakland Park to be a typical county owned facility, supporting county benefit levels that are well beyond industry reimbursement norms. Under operations recommendations, Korzendorfer said, "The major thrust of the site visit was to measure the attitude and readiness of change. The facility must undergo basic, but challenging changes in order to position its operations to be self-supporting."

Nelson and Simpson conducted their assessment of the nursing home's clinical areas on June 28. Among the areas evaluated during Nelson and Simpson's visit were the home's nursing department organizational structure; reimbursement maximization; regulatory compliance; documentation; budgeting in the nursing department and purchasing. Nelson and Simpson recommended the elimination of the assistant director of nursing position, siting that the position is mostly clerical and could be completed by a clerical - medical records person. Also, RNs would be responsible for a specific number of residents and staff.

Nelson also pointed out the the facility is losing out on reimbursement, because of improper documentation. Her recommendations include intense staff training on capturing the right information for reimbursement and restructuring the nursing department into a more efficient model.

Financially, Nelson reported that occupancy is consistently high and per patient day (PPD) expenses are consistent or below the average Ecumen PPD expenses. Weaknesses include too many department heads and the cost of employee benefits exceeds 30 percent of salaries and wages.

When prompted by board chairman Charles Naplin, Nelson said that Ecumen is confident that if contracted for management and given the necessary time, it would be able to make the necessary changes to make Oakland Park Nursing Home profitable.

"If we felt there was no chance we could help, we'd be honest," Nelson said.

According to Nelson, the management agreement would be written over a short time period, approximately six weeks. The nursing home administrator (Angela Malone) would become an Ecumen employee and would be a part of management meetings. For a short time period, the Oakland Park Facility will be operated by Korzendorfer, Ecumen operations manager.

[illegible] Nelson leaving the meeting. The board requested a copy of a typical Ecumen management agreement, citing the need for the Pennington County attorney, and the Pennington County and Oakland Park Nursing Home boards to review it, before action could be taken.

Discussion continued after Nelson left the meeting. One idea, introduced by Commissioner Oliver "Skip" Swanson, was to use the Ecumen assessment as a guideline for strategies to improve the Oakland Park Nursing Home and its operations. He added that the nursing home's administration would have to make the same tough decisions that were outlined by Ecumen.

Commissioners Arden "Bud" Comstock and Bob Carlson presented different opinions. Comstock said he feels that a management agreement makes perfect sense. Carlson agreed, saying that a management contract presents a way out of a bad financial situation.

A motion to table discussion to next week's Oakland Park Nursing Home Board meeting was carried.

Extension representative explain's salary adjustment procedure to board. Nathan Johnson, Extension regional director, appeared at the July 12 Pennington County Board meeting at the request of commissioners who felt that Minnesota Extension inaccurately portrayed the performance of Pennington County 4-H Program Coordinator Van Swanson.

According to Johnson, Swanson was evaluated in several performance areas on a rating scale of one to nine, with nine being the highest. Swanson, like most 4-H program coordinators, scored between five and seven in the performance categories. He said that Swanson, according to evaluations is meeting expectations.

"I don't want you to think they were disappointed in Van's work," Johnson said. "I don't want you to think that they are treating Van unfairly."

As for the board's other complaint, about Swanson receiving less than a three percent increase, the amount Pennington County's contribution to Extension increased by in 2005, Johnson said salary adjustments were made based on salary equity. An example, according to Johnson, would be an employee who was hired 20 years ago at much less than an employee hired today, would have his/her salary adjusted to accurately reflect their seniority. Essentially older employees were making less money than some who just started.

"Are we subsidizing someone [illegible]," asked Commissioner Don Jensen.

Johnson answered, with this contract we won't take in enough money to pay for the more expensive educators.

"Yes," Jensen responded

Johnson also explained that each department, such as Ag-Food-Environment or 4-H, has its own fund dispursment. That is why Howard Person, also an Extension employee working in the county office, was given a different salary adjustment than Swanson.

The board thanked Johnson for taking the time to discuss Swanson's review. No further action was taken.

Sheriff reports need to hire juvenile community STS supervisor. According to Pennington County Sheriff Mike Hruby, a problem is looming over the department regarding juvenile community service. Too many hours of juvenile community service are scheduled and the sheriff's department does not have proper staffing to handle this summer's workload.

Hruby reported that the Extended Juvenile Jurisdiction (EJJ) grant has been extended. The grant would allocate up to $5,000 to hire a community service coordinator.

Hruby said the 30-hour-per-week position would exist through the summer months. Hruby gave an example of one juvenile, who was given the task of washing a squad car. The juvenile, on three occasions said he had completed the task, but upon deputy review had either missed portions or hadn't rinsed the car properly. In total it took three hours for the juvenile to wash the car.

A motion to use EJJ money up to $5,000 to hire a part-time juvenile community STS supervisor.

Engineer's Items

- The board accepted three ditch cleaning petitions for County Ditch 34, CD 35 and CD 41.
- The board approved the installation of a boat landing at the Neptune Bridge. The Gonvick Sportsman Club and the Minnesota DNR sought Pennington County approval because the landing would be on Pennington County property.
- The possibility for a joint ditch meeting for CD 30 was discussed.

Other items

- Pennington County Auditor Ken Olson reported that K-Mart Corp. has withdrawn its 2005 tax appeal
- Olson reported that Marshall County Commissioners again determined that there is not enough reason to hold a hearing regarding the MTSRWD Board and alleged wrong doings.

Will play in hockey's Under-18 Junior World Cup...

Michael Forney on Team USA

Thief River Falls' Michael Forney was informed by USA Hockey officials this week that he has been named to the United States roster for the 2005 Under-18 Junior World Cup that will be played Aug. 9-14 in Breclav, Czech Republic.

Forney, who will be a senior at Lincoln High School in 2005-06, was the leading scorer during the USA Hockey Select 17 Festival July 9-15 at the National Hockey Center on the St. Cloud State University Campus.

Two-hundred forty of the nation's top 17-year-old hockey players were in St. Cloud for six days of practice and games. Twenty of the Festival participants received invitations to represent the United States at the international level.

As many as 200 hockey scouts from the professional, college and junior ranks were expected to watch the Festival – the final leg of a long process that determines USA Hockey's international age-level teams.

Players on one of the 12 Festival team rosters practiced each morning. Games were played in the afternoon and evening. Forney's Gold team went 3-2-1. He had two goals and 9 assists for 11 points in the six games to lead all scorers.

Forney will leave Aug. 3 for Washington, D.C. to join his new teammates before heading to Europe.

USA Hockey is the national governing body for the sport in the United States.

Forney is a multi-sport athlete for the Prowlers. In addition to his hockey talents, he has attracted interest of college football recruiters as a quarterback and has been a state-qualifier in tennis.

Statewide opening date for Minnesota's fall high school sports practice is Monday, Aug. 15.

Boys golf banquet includes scramble

Senior Paul Sjoberg was named the most valuable player on the 2005 Thief River Falls boys high school golf team during the Prowlers' banquet Thursday at the Thief River Golf Club.

The Section 8AA individual runner-up this spring, Sjoberg was also introduced as an all-state golfer and as a member of the academic all-state team.

Special recognition also went to Prowlers who were medalists in 2005: Sjoberg, Brady Stanley and Lee Peterson.

In addition, Kyle Lunke, Matt Nordhagen, Corey LaSalle and Travis Jung were medal winners this spring when the Prowlers won four meets and were named academic state champions.

Golf was also part of the Prowlers' banquet activities as they took part in a team scramble tournament and special games.

First place group in the scramble were Kevin Lunke, Robby Philipp, Peterson and Stanley. They came in at 7-under par.

Second place Kasey Trontvet, Kyle Lunke, Sjoberg and Nordhagen finished at 5-under.

At 4-under, the third place team included Wes Pederson, Kyle Safranski and Andy Rook.

Kyle Lunke and Stanley finished 1-2, respectively, in a putting contest.

Special hole winners were Andy Rook, longest drive on No. 7; Campbell Thompson, closest to the pin on No. 4; and Zach Pederson, longest putt on No. 9.

Elliot Baker Memorial race is held

from Bob Hultgren

Mid-Season Championships and Elliot Baker Memorial Cup were awarded Saturday at the Greenbush Race Park.

With all that on the line, it quickly became an evening of action that was hard on the cars. A couple of roll-overs, blown engines and a car that went into the front guard rail highlighted the night.

In the Mini-Sprints, Dan Wiskow (Roseau) has been the man to beat in the feature race. He led the first three laps before Dennis Rantanen (Thief River Falls) slid by to take over the top spot and lead the rest of the way for the win. Clay Sorteberg (Greenbush) finished second, with Wiskow third. A Lap 5 rollover by Troy Peterson was the only stoppage in the race. Peterson was uninjured in the incident.

Randy Jawaski (Kindred N.D.) took the lead on Lap 3 of the Pure Stock feature and never looked back. While Jawaski raced to the checkered flag all the action was behind him. Dan Beckman (Mahnomen) took his car hard into the front retaining wall, and Justin Osowski (Hallock), who was running second and closing on the leader, had a flat tire on Lap 8 and was forced to leave the track. Mike Peterson (Lancaster) ran strong up front to finish second.

A strong competitive field of Streets took to the track for the Mid-Season title race. The 18-car feature went 11 caution-free, dicey laps, before an incident on the front stretch brought out a yellow for debris. Steffan Snare (Hallock) went flag-to-flag for the feature win while Phillip Hougard and Jamen Foss battled for second. With just a couple of laps to go, Foss was charged with spinning Hougard, ending Jamen's chase for the win. Hougard finished second, with Tony Groenhoff (Salol) third.

NOPA 4-Cylinder feature offered an early-race highlight. On the second lap, Tabitha Wasylyk's (Winnipeg, Man.) car was forced from the track in Turn 2 and rolled over onto its roof. Wasylyk remained in the car as it was tipped back on its wheels. The car restarted and she returned to the feature race. Not only did she return, but she ran a very solid race to finish second behind Dustin Wahl (Greenbush), who led all the way for the win. While Wahl won by a good margin, Wasylyk held off numerous challenges from third place finisher Doug Krause.

A small but competitive Super Stock race saw Gary Nelson Jr. (Blackduck) taking the early lead from the pole. But Nelson spun in Turn 4, causing the rest of the line-up to check up and that in turn caused a whole lot of sheet metal damage. When everything was straightened out, Nelson restarted at the tail end, and John Halvorson (Warren) took the lead. Halvorson appeared ready to run away with the mid-season title, but with about five laps to go smoke started trailing from his car. The smoke got progressively worse until his car finally broke on the final lap. Rod Peterson (Thief River Falls) shot by for the win. With Nelson ran second and Halvorson was able to coast his car across the line for a third.

The evening finale was the eighth running of the Elliot Baker Memorial race, named in memory of the long-time racer and race supporter. The Modified class has struggled with car numbers all season long, and Saturday was no different, with a small but strong line-up on hand. Manitoba racer Rick Delaine would quickly move to the lead and race for the win. Nolan Olmstead (Badger) was stuck to Delaine's bumper all the way and finished second. Defending Baker Cup winner Kevin Sexton was third.

Greenbush Race Park will take a regularly-scheduled week break with no races at the track July 23. Next scheduled race is Saturday, July 30, when the track will host a NOPA Super Truck Special. Hot Laps start at 7 p.m., with racing at 7:30 p.m.

The Race Park is located one-half mile north of Greenbush on County Road 7.

Rocket Speedway hosts NOPA Super Trucks on Sunday

from Bob Hultgren

Racers and fans alike enjoyed a beautiful Sunday evening as the Rocket Speedway hosted the July 17 NOPA Super Truck Special. The Hallock area received a mid-afternoon shower, but the skies cleared for the early evening racing program.

In feature racing, Jamen Foss (Greenbush) made a last lap pass to overtake Steffan Snare (Hallock) and win the Street final. Snare led all but the last lap and finished second, with Philip Hougard (Karlstad) a solid third.

In the WISSOTA Super Stocks, Manitoba racer Mike McCaughan led flag-to-flag for the win. The small five-car field was spread around the track and fell in line for [illegible] John Halvorson

Rocket Speedway races

(Warren) finished second, with George Balcaen (Winnipeg, Man.) third.

Nine NOPA Super Trucks were on hand for the evening's 'Special' feature. Dave Buffie (Winnipeg) led all the way for the win. Rick Johnson (Badger) held the second spot while Rick Weiss (Winnipeg), who started seventh, was third.

The two most entertaining races of the evenings involved the NOPA 4-Cylinder and NOPA Pure Stocks.

Three different drivers led the 4-Cylinder feature. Dustin Wahl (Greenbush) led the first four laps before surrendering the lead to Jerome Guyot, who would lead the next couple of laps before being passed by Lee McRae. It was McRae who went on to the win, with Guyot and Wahl finishing second and third, respectively.

In the Pure Stock feature, there were four lead changes between three different drivers. Jon Cole, Ed Lehrke and Randy Jawaski all shared the lead at times, but it was Jawaski (Kindred, N.D.) who led the final five laps for the win. Mike Peterson (Lancaster) had an impressive outing after starting 13th in the line-up and working his way to a second place finish. Lehrke (Hallock) completed the top three.

There was a lot of passing, dicing and jockeying for position throughout the entire field in both the 4-cylinder and Pure Stock finals.

Next race for the Rocket Speedway is scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 14. Hot laps start at 4:30 p.m. and racing begins at 5. The Rocket Speedway is located on the Kittson County Fairgrounds in Hallock.

Larder beetles have been invading homes

by Jeffrey Hahn
Assist. Extension Entomologist
University of Minnesota

Larder beetles have been commonly reported in homes this year. An adult is an oval shaped insect, about one-third inch long. It is blackish with a yellowish or brownish saddle-shaped band across its wing covers. A larva is dark brown, cylindrical, hairy, and possesses a pair of curved horns at the tip of its abdomen.

These beetles "overwinter" outdoors as adults. Once the weather warms during spring, they search for a food source to lay eggs. If you find just one or two larder beetles in your home during spring, that usually doesn't mean you have a problem. However, as the season progresses and you find persistent numbers of adults or you find larvae, that is evidence there is an infestation in the building.

Larder beetles feed on foods that are high in protein, such as meats, cheeses, dry pet food, hides, feathers and dead insects. The abundance of larder beetles this year has been associated with lady beetles entering homes, then dying in walls, attics and other inaccessible areas. These dead insects then become a food source for larder beetles.

The first step in larder beetle control is to try to determine the source of the infestation and remove it. Look particularly in areas where you see the most larder beetles. If it turns out to be something straight forward, like spilled pet food forgotten in a corner, it will be an easy matter to eliminate these pests.

However, it usually isn't that simple. If the food source is suspected to be dead insects or dead animals in the walls or somewhere inaccessible, then control is much more challenging. As long as a food source remains, larder beetles will continue to be a problem. If an infestation is associated with dead insects or dead animals in wall voids or similar areas, short of tearing open the walls to get rid of the food source, the best you can do is to physically remove larder beetles (e.g. with a vacuum) as you see them. Insecticides sprayed indoors will have little lasting effect on larder beetles as long as food is available.

If you have had a problem with overwintering insects, such as lady beetles, you can reduce the number that get into your home by treating them in the fall before they get inside. Their management is a two-step process. First, seal as many cracks and spaces around your home that may allow insects entry. Second, apply a residual insecticide around the exterior of your building. For more detailed information on controlling lady beetles, see the following fact sheet, http://www.extension.umn.edu/distribution/housingandclothing/M1176.html.

Report shows decline in number of MN abortions

The number of abortions performed in Minnesota declined in 2004, according to the Minnesota Department of Health's annual legislative report on abortions published recently. The report shows that 13,788 abortions were performed in Minnesota in 2004, compared to 14,174 in 2003.

Minnesota has experienced an overall downward trend in the number of abortions performed in the state since MDH began collecting and reporting data on abortions in the 1970s. The number of abortions performed in Minnesota peaked at 19,028 in 1980 and dropped below 14,000 in 2004. This is the first time the number of abortions has been below 14,000 since 1975. A similar downward trend has been occurring nationally.

"We're pleased to see the number of abortions in Minnesota continue to drop," said Minnesota Health Commissioner Dianne Mandernach. "We hope the numbers will continue to drop in the years to come."

This year's report is the first to document information provided to women under the Women's Right to Know Act enacted in 2003. This law requires health care providers to make certain information available to women who are considering an abortion at least 24 hours before the abortion would be performed. Included in this information are materials developed by MDH on fetal development and state resources available to pregnant women. The department's report shows that the information was provided to women 15,876 times in 2004.

The department's report, "Induced Abortions in Minnesota, January-December 2004" is available on the MDH Web site (ww.health.state.mn.us/divs/chs/abrpt/abrpt.htm).

We need to turn off the TV and open our eyes to the world around us

I turned the TV off the other day. Because world events become more violent and confusing, I find that I quickly tire of it.

I prefer the quiet safety of my air-conditioned home, in Thief River Falls, far, far away from the confusing upheavals and violence in other countries.

Every once in awhile, however, residents of Thief River Falls, which is far away from almost everything, are forced to come face-to-face with the turmoil of world events. And as some area residents remarked recently, it forces us to realize that "nowhere is safe."

No sooner had musicians of Northland Community Band and its "groupies" settled down in their homes from a trip to the United Kingdom, when they learned of the bombings in London - places they may have passed, or walked by only a few days before.

As Marilyn Wigness, who was on the trip, stated, "It's a little frightening now to think about."

Kate Levinson of Thief River Falls recently shared her experience in Uganda. Levinson's experience brought her face to face with "children who live in mud huts and make soccer balls from shreds of plastic bags tied together with banana leaves." These children "eat what is usually their only meal of the day from large sacks printed with GIFT OF THE USA, and by the end of the month, even that is gone. They contract malaria because they cannot afford mosquito nets and trudge through the mud barefoot because they do not have shoes."

Dr. Judith Campbell of Thief River Falls shared with us that nearly everyone she saw in Ecuador was suffering from parasitic worms. Doctors on the mission trip also treated patients for pneumonia, rashes, skin infections, ear infections, removed a skin tag, helped a child with a cleft palate, helped a man with a bullet wound, and educated patients about washing their hands and brushing their teeth.

Why can't we turn these images off? What more can we do? Maybe we shouldn't try to turn off these images. Maybe we should try to do something about it. "We need to stop turning our backs on what is important in exchange for what is easy, convenient and comfortable. Instead, we have to stare the world in the face - recognizing the good, using it to make the bad better," said Levinson.

In our armchairs in far, far away Minnesota, it may seem the gap between us is too far to bridge. There are things, however, that we can do. As Levinson suggests, we can give our money, primarily, and our time.

There are other things we can do, as well, such as writing letters to senators and congressmen supporting policies that improve the well-being of citizens in third world countries.

As many area youngsters have shown us over the past several years, we can also give of our strength by using our hands and muscles to help build roads, hospitals, schools and churches.

But, what else?

We can share our knowledge and resources.

Campbell said it was a wonderful experience because of the good works that they could do and the resources they could share with them.

We can encourage and teach tolerance.

We can be steadfast in our convictions and not let terror and fear keep us from our paths.

But it seems, the most important bit of advice we can conclude from these images is that we must keep our eyes open to the threats and problems that seem to surround us. Only then will the ugly images go away.

Fair exhibitors are tremendously talented

The 2005 Pennington County Fair concluded on Sunday, July 17. As always, I come away from the fair impressed by, and admittedly jealous of, the talent and skill of the many exhibitors who displayed their crafts, and skills. In addition to being tremendously talented, it is obvious that these individuals have put in a great deal of time and effort on their individual projects.

As we have for many years, staff at The Times spent a great deal of time at the fair taking pictures of the grand champions. These pictures will appear in a special section of the next edition of The Times. We hope you enjoy it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Attorney General: Cannot ignore the law

To the Editor:

I recently reviewed an editorial written by Rep. Maxine Penas concerning the Job Opportunity Building Zone (JOBZ) legislation. In the JOBZ program businesses who locate to certain zones will not have to pay property taxes, income taxes, sales taxes or corporate taxes for 12 years. The law also provides, however, that any business receiving such governmental support must also agree to pay wages that represent the market rate for that area.

Penas argues that businesses that receive such massive tax subsidies should not have to pay a wage which equals the market rate for the community. She points out that the State of Wisconsin enacted a similar law but specifically excluded wage equity in its statutes.

In response to a request from the Administration, I confirmed that the Minnesota law does require that businesses that receive such tax subsidies must pay a wage that represents the market rate. Penas argues that my opinion is a "roadblock." I suggest to Penas that if she wants to eliminate the "prevailing wage" requirement, she needs to amend the law.

As attorney general, I cannot ignore the law just to meet the whims of a local legislator.

Very truly yours,
Mike Hatch
Attorney General
State of Minnesota

Find out how your school district spends

To the Editor:

There are few public policy topics in Minnesota that interest average citizens more than education spending. Because so many Minnesotans have children enrolled in public schools and because education is such a significant part of the state budget, it seems just about everyone is concerned about how school districts are spending taxpayer dollars.

The actual ins and outs of education spending can be very confusing. Trying to understand the extremely complex funding formulas is enough to give you a headache.

Citizens are in need of a reference tool that you don't need a degree in finance to understand. That is why I have made it a priority to release annual reports on education spending. The most recent report was released last month.

The report includes a variety of information on statewide education revenues and expenditures as well as demographic information. The information is presented over the last five years so that trends can be easily identified.

In addition to the full-report on education spending, we have prepared an online tool that allows citizens to access valuable information on their individual school district. The tool allows users to view rankings, comparing districts in a number of revenue, expenditure and demographic categories.

For example, citizens can see how much their district spends on administration, instruction, special education, transportation and several other categories. They can also see the ways in which their district receives revenue. Other information such as average teacher salary and average class size is also available.

Most importantly, per pupil rankings add meaning to the raw numbers. Now citizens can see how their district compares to state averages and other similar districts around the state.

I am writing today to encourage citizens interested in education spending to use the tool and search for information on their school district. Comparison can be a valuable tool for citizens interested in holding their elected officials accountable.

I have received a great deal of positive feedback about the tool and I encourage interested citizens to use it. We hope it continues to be a destination for citizens interested in how school districts spend taxpayer dollars.

The report and the online tool can be accessed at www.auditor.state.mn.us.

Sincerely,
Pat Anderson
Minnesota State Auditor

Worldwide polio vaccine program needed

from the National Immunization Program of CDC

Whatever happened to polio? Today, 50 years after the introduction of the first polio vaccine, polio has been removed from our national consciousness and parents in the United States rarely give a thought to a disease that was once an obsession. However, we must not forget that before the vaccine became available, we used to have, on average, more than 16,000 cases of paralytic polio each year in the U.S.

"Safe, effective, and potent" - these words, on April 12, 1955, announced to the world that the Salk polio vaccine was up to 90 percent effective in preventing polio. The development of the vaccine by Dr. Jonas Salk and his colleagues was an accomplishment that ended an era of global fear of a dreaded contagious disease and, in the process, reshaped the conduct of science, the funding of science, and the public's role in the support of science. These efforts forever changed the way that public health was administered, and advanced the general understanding of ways basic scientific research benefited humanity through collaboration between academic, philanthropic [illegible] and government institutions.

The fight against polio brought [illegible] communities [illegible] in a national [illegible] time was [illegible] effort [illegible] up to [illegible] children in [illegible] United [illegible] trials as America's "Polio Pioneers." These "Pioneers" proved that a vaccine could prevent the paralyzing disease. Thousands of healthcare workers and lay people volunteered their time to assist with the vaccine field trials. Millions of Americans participated by raising funds in their communities to support the larger research effort and a single goal: victory over polio.

Polio was eliminated in the United States because protecting the public's health was perceived as a simple necessity, and every effort was made to see that the vaccine would be freely distributed and polio would be eradicated. We have made great progress in a very short time. We now have the means to protect our nation's children against terrible diseases, such as polio, that in the past caused great suffering, disability, and premature death in the U.S.; yet polio still exists in Asia and Africa. In a continually shrinking world, polio and other vaccine-preventable diseases are only a plane ride away.

Vaccines have been one of the most important health gains in the past century. Infants and young children are particularly vulnerable to infectious diseases; that is why it is critical that they are protected through immunization. The benefits of vaccination far outweigh the risks. Children who are not immunized increase the chance that others will get the disease. Since this effort 50 years ago, we can now protect children from more than 12 vaccine-preventable diseases, and disease rates have been reduced by 99 percent in the United States. Immunizations are extremely safe thanks to advancements in medical research and ongoing review by doctors, researchers, and public officials; yet without diligent efforts to maintain immunization programs here and strengthen worldwide, the diseases seen 50 years ago remain a threat to our children.

Bridge funding approved

Legislation that would allow state transportation funds to be used for the design and preliminary engineering of bridges on city streets in smaller communities has been signed into law. The bill, authored by Rep. Maxine Penas (R-Badger), was included in the Legislature's transportation package.

"This is an important piece of legislation for Minnesota's smaller communities," said Penas. "Bridges throughout Greater Minnesota need to be replaced, and these cities can't afford to do it. I'm glad this bill was included because it's definitely a public safety concern."

This would allow the state's transportation commissioner to award grants to cities with populations of 5,000 or less, and a net tax capacity of less than $200,000 for the design and preliminary engineering of bridges on city streets. The total grant amount per cities cannot exceed $200,000.

Budget reflects our priorities

by Rep. Bernie Lieder

Last week, the Legislature completed work on the state budget for 2006-2007. Although much of the focus recently has been on the special session and the difficult negotiations, I hope the residents of our area will also take time to focus on what's really important - the final outcome.

At the beginning of the session, I wrote that my priorities for the legislative session would be to:

- Find a way to adequately fund K-12 education to prevent area schools from further increases in class sizes and cuts to staffing and programs.
- Protect the health care of working families and individuals.
- Help move our economy forward.

We accomplished all of these things during the session. With the final education budget, public schools in our area will receive a 4 percent increase in the base per pupil funding formula in each of the next two years, as well as additional resources. That translates into over $5 million in additional funding the school districts in our area.

That's good news for our schools and, more importantly, our kids.

Additional Funding Over Base

|---|---|
| Climax | $166,036 |
| Crookston | $1.16 mil. |
| E.Grand Forks | $1.33 mil. |
| Fisher | $315,553 |
| Oklee | $221,989 |
| Plummer | $154,484 |
| Red Lake Falls | $352,883 |
| Stephen-Argyle | $363,760 |
| Warren-Alvarado | $484,195 |
| Win-E-Mac | $491,364 |

The final Health and Human Services bill protected the health insurance of over 30,000 working Minnesotans whose coverage was threatened. It also provided a long-overdue cost of living increase to the men and women who work in our nursing homes and facilities that care for our disabled.

On the economic front, we passed a $1 hourly increase to the minimum wage, a move that will make it easier for thousands of Minnesotans to get ahead. We also passed a significant Capital Investment Bill that is expected to create 10,000 good-paying construction jobs in the state.

I realize the 2005 budget negotiations were sometimes difficult to watch. However, sometimes gridlock is a sign that the system is working, that both sides are standing up for what they believe in. I know that the thousands of Minnesotans who will be able to stay on MinnesotaCare, and the children, teachers and parents who will benefit from replenished school budgets will agree that these things were worth fighting for.

Peterson named to energy bill committee

Congressman Collin C. Peterson (D-7th District) has been chosen to be a member of the conference committee that will work out details of the Energy Bill.

Peterson, who serves as ranking member of the House Agriculture Committee, was named, along with Agriculture Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte (R-VA), and Agriculture subcommittee Chairman Frank Lucas (R-OK), to address agriculture issues as they relate to the energy bill.

"This is an important debate for our nation's farmers," Peterson said. "Energy costs are a critical concern for farm operations these days, especially as they affect the cost of fuel and fertilizer."

Renewable fuels will also be on the agenda for discussion in the conference committee. "In the wake of rising energy costs nationwide, I look forward to continuing the discussion on expanding incentives and tax credits for those involved in ethanol, biodiesel and wind production, and that address new technologies using agricultural by-products that lower our dependence on fossil fuels."

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR

ST. HILAIRE, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA JULY 22, 1905

News Items

"Saturday morning the passenger train was two hours late, caused by a washout at Red Lake Falls.

"An ice cream social will be held at the farm of A. S. Anderson, five miles southeast of St. Hilaire, on Sunday, July 23, commencing at 3:00 p.m.

"The young ladies of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church gave an ice cream social Thursday evening. The affair was a financial success which speaks much for the young ladies.

"I. Dahlin took leave of the mosquitoes, flies and high water Tuesday and came into town [from his homestead claim on the former reservation lands, east of here]. He says there is no place to live like St. Hilaire, even though Uncle Sam says a claim is the right thing for a man to possess.

"Myrtle Blaine was bitten by a dog Friday evening. The canine was quickly dispatched and Myrtle is getting along nicely. The dog was of a vicious nature and had threatened to do officious business before, but never again.

"The new firm of Bjerk and Dahlin opened their doors to the public Tuesday p.m. and began to attend to the wants of the thirsty. The new firm is a popular one and undoubtedly will get their share of the business at the old stand.

"The firemen are going to give a dance in their bowery Saturday evening, if the weather man permits. The laddies were disappointed last Saturday evening but expect better treatment this time. Everybody should turn out and give the occasion all the patronage possible.

"John Brady of Red Lake Falls came up Friday to examine the north bridge. He reported the bridge as unsafe and suggested temporary repairing to prevent the structure from falling into the river. The street commissioner was instructed to do the temporary work.

"Daly's 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' company with their elegant concert band and orchestra will exhibit here under canvas on Tuesday evening, July 25. The Daly company presents the great temperance drama in its entirety, with special scenery and stage effects. Every effort is made to please the public by a first class entertainment. Prof. Pitcher's superb orchestra will entertain during the evening with a choice musical program consisting of standard overtures and up to date melodies, making an enjoyable evening of mirth, music and melo-drama. Open air band concerts at noon and night. Don't forget to attend and bring the little ones. One night only, Tuesday, July 25th."

Heavy Rains

"The heavy rains Friday night and Saturday are only another indication that our farmers should go more extensively into the stock business. From reports coming in, the grain is bound to suffer from excessive moisture and the intense heat of Sunday and Monday is likely to cause rust. On the other hand, the grass is doing nicely and an abundant crop of hay, especially tame grass, is assured. Having the advantage of a first class creamery as is here, the time is surely ripe for extensive stock raising."

"The present crowded condition of the store will be relieved by the remodeling of the basement to provide added sales room facilities. Other improvements will include the installation of new floors and ceiling, rewiring and new light fixtures, and new merchandise display fixtures throughout the store.

"In the meantime, Johnson Bros. stated, a sale will be conducted to close out their stocks of merchandise and features previous to moving into new quarters in the downtown district, the location of which will be announced later.

"High readings: Thursday, 88; Friday, 84; Saturday, 84; Sunday, 85; Monday, 88; and Tuesday, 90.

"The high temperatures are serving to hasten the ripening of grain fields in the area, and there is some concern as to whether the late-seeded grain will fill properly."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

Thief River Falls Fair August 9-10-11
It Will Be the Biggest and Best Fair Ever Held in the Northern Part of the State

"The Red Lake county fair to be held in Thief River Falls on August 9, 10 and 11 this year promises to far eclipse any previous attempts. The growth and development of Thief River Falls and the surrounding country will be fittingly portrayed by the fair, and it will be one of the greatest events Northern Minnesota has ever seen. Nothing will be left undone. The managers of the fair are working night and day, and have every reason to believe that their efforts will be appreciated by the people living in Thief River Falls and vicinity.

"While an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged, the fair is in no way a money-making proposition. It is supported by the business men of Thief River Falls who have made large cash subscriptions and entertainment provided will be worth many times the price of admission. There will be a number of side shows in tents that will also charge a small admission fee.

"Purses, amounting in a total to $1,200, have been hung up for trotting and running races, and everything indicates that there will be a large number of horsemen here to compete for these prizes, a number having already signified their intention of being here by paying their entrance fee. Thief River Falls will have some local horses that will enter into the fastest of the races and this will add a great deal of vim to the occasion.

"The success or failure of the livestock and agricultural exhibit is one that rests entirely with the farmers of Red Lake and Marshall counties. The business men of this city are certainly doing their share and they sincerely trust that the farmers will do likewise. Liberal prizes are offered for all exhibits and there is hardly a farmer in this section but what could exhibit something if he so desired. In the past too few farmers have had exhibits and it is to be hoped that all will take a more lively interest this year.

"In the way of amusements, a small sized circus has been secured. A contract has been made with the T. I. Cash Balloon and Attraction company for the appearance of some sixty performers, who will give free exhibits daily. The attractions will include balloon ascensions, trick cottage acts, flying Dutchmen, high dives, tightrope walking, trapeze performing, acrobatic acts, and other things too numerous to mention.

"Remember the dates, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 9, 10 and 11, and be sure to come."

City Official Has Narrow Escape

"Red Lake Falls, July 17: Sunday night a fierce electrical storm hung over this city and vicinity for about five hours. A perfect torrent of rain fell almost continuously while the flashes of lightning and crashes of thunder were at times terrific. The oldest inhabitants declare it was the worst they ever experienced.

"In the city John Dufarg (street commissioner) had a narrow escape while going from one room to another in his home, and, as he placed his hand on the door knob to open the door, a flash of lightning passed through the house, along the door, onto the knob, through his hand, along his arm to the shoulder where it left him, flashing through several more rooms, then out of the house.

"Mr. Dufarg's arm and hand were perfectly rigid for over an hour afterward, when he gradually regained the use of his arm and hand. There was no mark left excepting a small burn on the hand.

"Electric and telephone wires suffered greatly. A great many transformers were burned out and wires were cut in several places by the lightning. In the country, Sam Luxenburger had four horses struck by lightning and killed. It is not considered that the growing grain has been damaged any."

Winslow Chapter
New Lodge Constituted Here Saturday
Head Officers Here from Minneapolis to Do the Work

"Last Saturday evening the Winslow chapter O. E. S. [Order of Eastern Star] was duly constituted by the Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas of Minneapolis. She was assisted in the work by Brother Kirk, Associate Grand Patron, also of Minneapolis. After the constituting there was an election of officers for the remaining year. They are as follows:

|---|---|
| Worthy Matron | Edna Kavanaugh |
| Worthy Patron | Gerry Hawes |
| Associate Matron | Ida McNiven |
| Secretary | Maud Bishop |
| Treasurer | Sister Christianson |
| Conductress | Helen Gamble |
| Associate Conductress | Margaret Hill |
| Ada | Edith Prichard |
| Ruth | Susie Day |
| Esther | Nicoline Hawes |
| Martha | Myrtle Lanning |
| Electa | Jennie Stebbins |
| Warder | Lena Baker |
| Sentinel | Donald McNiven |
| Organist | Florence Wright |
| Marshal | Inez Wright |
| Chaplain | Julia Labbett |

"After of the officers were duly installed, the members and guests all partook of a sumptuous repast that the ladies of the chapter had prepared for the occasion. A delightful program was also rendered by some of the talented members of the chapter. Mrs. and Miss Wright each sang a solo. Mrs. Thomas made a few remarks of counsel and advice at the closing, which were greatly appreciated by all."

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD OF APPEAL AND EQUALIZATION COURTHOUSE, COUNTY BOARD ROOM
JUNE 13, 2005, 10:00 A.M.

Pursuant to law, the Pennington County Board of Appeal and Equalization met in the Board Room at the Pennington County Courthouse in Thief River Falls, MN, on Monday, June 13, 2005 at 10:00 a.m.

Members present: Commissioner Donald Jensen, Commissioner Bob Carlson, Commissioner Charles Naplin, Commissioner Oliver "Skip" Swanson, and County Auditor Ken Olson. Members absent: Commissioner Arden "Bud" Comstock. Also present: County Assessor Adeline Olson, Property owners - Jim Dagg, Suzanne Peterson, Dixie Hoard, Sally Coleman, Kenneth Swanson, John Hamre, Don Dyrdal, and Jim Spenst.

The members of the Board of Appeal and Equalization signed the Official Oath of Office, which is on file in the County Auditor's office. Commissioner Naplin was appointed Chair of the meeting.

Jim Dagg, representing JAK of TRF, Inc., met with the Board regarding the increased value on the property located at 201 Horace Ave. N. (parcel #25.003.288.50). The value had increased from $288,500 to $316,800 or approximately 9.1%. Mr. Dagg noted that his rents would not increase enough to cover the additional tax burden. The County Assessor pointed out that Mr. Dagg purchased the property in 2003 for $625,000. The board held the decision until later in the meeting.

Suzanne Peterson met with the Board to express her concerns over the increases in value of her property (parcel #16.040.015.20). Mrs. Peterson stated that local units of government are levying more property taxes to cover shortfalls from the State and Federal level. The Board took the information under advisement.

Dixie Hoard (parcel #16.022.252.04) met with the County Board stating the value of their property was too high. Mrs. Hoard stated that they had poor drainage and bad roads and that these factors should be considered when placing a value on their property. She also stated the other eight homes in their area did not receive the same increase. The Board took the information under advisement.

Sally Coleman (parcel #16.050.007.13) has a double-wide mobile home placed on real estate. She feels the value on her home has not gone up and should have gone down slightly. She is requesting a reduction in value. Mrs. Coleman also represented Harry and Marie Rybacki (parcel #16.050.007.12) citing the same concerns. The County Board took the information under advisement.

Kenneth Swanson discussed his property in Section 3 and 4 in Polk Centre Township. He has wetlands on his property that cannot be drained and asked for a reduction in value. The County Board took the information under advisement. John Hamre (parcel #16.047.006.00) felt his home was valued too high in comparison to Ole Tweet's and Dick Sjoberg's and asked for a reduction in value so as to be more comparable to theirs.

Don Dyrdal and Jim Spenst discussed the value put on property that has standing timber or is described as woodland. After further discussion Mr. Dyrdal made no request.

Steve Lappegaard (parcel #11.021.071.00) questioned why his property value has increased. The County Assessor stated they had increased the value $1,400 over last years value, but last year the value had gone up due to a 10% mandated state increase. Mr. Lappegaard felt his property was overvalued because of frequent high waters from the river. The County Board took the information under advisement.

At this time the County Board reviewed the requests and made the following actions. If no action was taken the values remained unchanged.

Commissioner Swanson moved, seconded by Commissioner Jensen, to reduce the value on Charles and Dixie Hoard's property, parcel #16.022.252.04, to $142,700. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to reduce the value on Sally Coleman's property, parcel #16.050.007.13, to $51,900. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Carlson, to lower the value of John Hamre's property, parcel #16.047.006.00, to $385,600. Motion unanimously carried.

The County Assessor reviewed the actions taken at the Township and Cities Board of Appeals meetings. Commissioner Jensen moved, seconded by Commissioner Carlson, that the real and personal property values as returned by the local Boards of Appeal and submitted by the County Assessor be accepted and approved. Motion unanimously carried.

Commissioner Carlson moved, seconded by Commissioner Swanson to adjourn the County Board of Appeal and Equalization meeting. Motion carried.

Number of working-poor families growing in U.S.

Although the war on poverty was declared in the 1960s, a poor family today in 2005 is much worse off than the average poor family in the 1960s because official poverty measures have failed to keep up with changing basic needs, according to a new report.

"An Atlas of Poverty in America: One Nation Pulling Apart, 1960-2003" was recently published by a team of Penn State University researchers. The project was funded by the Ford Foundation.

"America has become a nation of people where all able persons who can work, do, but many cannot make ends meet," said Dr. Amy Glasmeier, lead author and the E. Willard Miller professor of economic geography at Penn State. "America is not currently doing all it can to assist working families, those who are discriminated against in the labor market, and the disabled, to make ends meet."

"Current U.S. poverty rates may underestimate poverty among the working poor," she added. "Being poor in 1960 meant getting by on less than $3,553 for a family of four a year. Families were not expected to own a car or have a bed for each family member, and nothing was budgeted for medical care or insurance."

Today, official guidelines still assume that families spend about one-third of their income on food, but food spending has dropped to one-sixth, with a larger share of expenses being taken up by housing, utilities and transportation. If health care and childcare expenses are included as necessities, the minimum level of income needed by a family of four is much higher.

Over the last 30 years, the number of jobs that do not pay a living wage has increase dramatically. In the U.S., as many as 25 percent of all jobs pay less than a poverty-level income, the report said. In some states, as many as 30 percent do not pay a living wage.

A living wage takes into account differences in the cost of living across areas of the U.S. In many communities, the national minimum wage of $5.15 per hour provides an income insufficient to support individuals or families, the report said.

The research project's Web site provides a living wage calculator, which shows the amount of income needed to support individuals, and families of two and four people. It can be accessed at www.livingwage.geog.psu.edu/.

"Of the more than 35 million persons classified as living in poverty, most are children, disabled or elderly," said Glasmeier. "But seven million of them are men and women who are working at jobs that do not pay a wage they can live on. A majority of working poor are over age 24 and in their wage-earning period of life."

The working poor are found in every state, according to the report. In 17 states, the majority of working poor totals more than 50 percent of the working age population. Such states are concentrated in the Farm Belt, where economic decline has been ongoing for the last 20 years, and in the west, where population growth has helped keep wages low, said the researchers.

"Working poor families with children are even more concentrated in the south, southwest and the western plain states," Glasmeier said.

"Certainly progress has been made over the intervening 40 years in terms of an overall minimum standard of living as measured by material conditions," the researchers wrote. "In the last 40 years, the largest positive change occurred for the poor elderly. In 1959, 35.2 percent lived below the poverty line; today, it is 10 percent. A combination of programs, ie. Social Security and Medicare, has been one of the main reasons. Still, more than 40 percent of elderly persons live on incomes only twice the national poverty level, which is approximately $18,000 a year."

She was married only 3 months ago to Alexander Grudem in the Cities. She spent her young life here while her father was the pastor at the Assembly of God Church in Karlstad. ### Public and private interests at a crossroads in Smiley Township

Township denies Country Estates petition

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The Smiley Township Board of Supervisors held a special meeting on July 21 to receive a petition and hear arguments requesting that Smiley Township accept jurisdiction of three private/public crossroads located within Country Estates Trailer Court.

After two hours of discussion, it was the opinion of all three Smiley Township supervisors, that the township could not justify taking over the roads in their present state. At the meeting's conclusion, supervisors unanimously carried a motion to deny the petition.

Two Pennington County Commissioners, Oliver "Skip" Swanson and Donald Jensen, and Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagan attended the meeting to represent the interests of Pennington County. Also in attendance were approximately 20 Country Estates residents.

Country Estates residents Dale Cloose and Duane Anderson presented a completed petition to Smiley Township supervisors. The petition was introduced into record by Township Board Chairman Lester DeBriyn. It stated there are two roads that head north and south, 182 and 184th Ave. They are township roads and are maintained by the township. There are three crossroads that run east and west, 137, 138 and 139. They are currently maintained by Brian Bruggeman and now, to some extent, by McKenna Properties LLC. All of these roads are part of the Estates' plat, which is recorded in Pennington County.

A debate over which entity, Country Estates, Smiley Township or Pennington County, has jurisdiction over the series of private/public crossroads has existed for years. The issues of jurisdiction, poor road conditions and poor road drainage between the three crossroads, were presented to the Pennington County Board of Commissioners during three board meetings in May and June. It was the Pennington County Board's legal opinion that Pennington County had no jurisdiction over Country Estates' crossroads.

Cloose, majority owner of Country Estates, reported during those meetings that he was legally advised not to make any improvements on the three crossroads.

The petition presented by Cloose and Anderson asked Smiley Township to take over the maintenance of 137th, 138th and 139th streets. Without making any guarantees, Smiley Township supervisors said they would consider taking over the roads if they were reconstructed to the specifications set by Flaagan.

Flaagan's preliminary plan calls for nearly $100,000 in improvements to the three crossroads. Flaagan noted that part of the drainage problem is due to improper road construction with insufficient materials. His plans include excavation of old road surface, installation of geo textile fabric type five, 12 inches of class-three aggrigate base and four inches of class-five aggrigate base. Flaagan's plan also calls for the installation of 1,600 linear feet of culverts totalling $22,400. Flaagen's total estimate for the project is $99,412.

By Flaagan's estimation, the road would be sufficient to hold up to a five-ton load. He added that this is the minimum improvement he would recommend.

Anderson noted that he disagreed with Flaagan's totals, first asking if Flaagan's recommendation was the only solution. Flaagan responded that it was his recommendation.

Debriyn stated that the roads will need to be constructed to the specifications of the county engineer

Seven Polk County cattle die of anthrax

The Minnesota Board of Animal Health (BAH) confirmed Friday that seven beef cows from a Polk County farm died of anthrax last week. These anthrax cases are the first in Minnesota since 2001 when 21 farms in northwestern Minnesota were affected by the disease. The herd will remain quarantined for 30 days after the last death.

On July 15, the first animal from the herd was found dead. Within a week, a total of seven animals had died. Blood samples were collected and sent to the North Dakota State University Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory in Fargo, N.D. On July 22, the Board received confirmation from the lab that the samples were positive for anthrax.

Anthrax is a naturally occurring bacterial disease of both animals and humans caused by Bacillus anthracis. All warm-blooded animals are susceptible to the disease, but cattle, sheep and goats are the most commonly affected. In rare cases, humans can contract anthrax after handling or eating infected products. The last reported human case of anthrax in Minnesota was in 1953. Anthrax is not spread by animal to animal contact.

In Minnesota, approximately 200 farms have had animals diagnosed with anthrax since it was first reported in the state in 1909. Grazing animals are most likely to become affected by anthrax in the summer after periods of heavy rain, flooding, or excavation. Cases typically occur in areas where animals have previously died of anthrax.

"Heavy rain and flooding bring the spores to the surface where grazing animals ingest them," said BAH Executive Director and State Veterinarian Dr. Bill Hartmann. "We encourage all livestock producers in northwestern Minnesota where flooding occurred earlier this

Orley Gunderson won't ease into retirement

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Shortly after Dr. Orley Gunderson announced his retirement on Nov. 15, 2004, friends and co-workers began asking the obvious question, "Are you counting down the days until you retire?"

The question troubles Gunderson.

"I'm not counting the days, because I love my job," Gunderson typically responds, stating that only now, with less than a week remaining until his July 31 retirement, does he know exactly how many days he has left.

He is counting something during his remaining days as Northland Community and Technical College president. Since announcing his retirement Gunderson has been the recipient of countless awards and recognition plaques, and has been the guest of honor at several events.

"I've gotten recognition from organizations I didn't know existed," Gunderson joked. He estimated that six or so organizations have recognized his retirement in the past year, including an award presented by Senator Ted Kennedy, D-Massachusetts, during the annual American Association of Community Colleges Convention.

The recognition also includes several retirement parties, which Gunderson says have meant a lot to both he and his wife. He appreciates the recognition and attention saying, "I'd rather go out this way than be rode out of town on a rail."

It's hard for most to picture a leader like Gunderson being asked to leave the job he's held for the past 25 years. In fact he was asked earlier this year by one of his superiors, Minnesota Colleges and Universities Chancellor James McCormick, to consider staying on for one more year.

The Thief River Falls vocational school, whatever its name at the time, and Gunderson have always been a perfect fit for each other. Gunderson describes himself as the most Norwegian president of a college in the most Norwegian city in the country.

He accepted a position as president of the Area Vocational Technical Institute (AVTI) in Thief River Falls in 1980. Gunderson, 39 years old at the time, had previous experience working in college administration, first for the state of Minnesota as a consultant and later as an assistant director at a vocational school that would eventually become NCTC East Grand Forks.

Gunderson's drive to work in administration was formed during his years as an agriculture teacher. He began his teaching career at Kelliher High School in 1963, as a secondary and adult agriculture instructor. He also taught in Montgomery and University Park, Penn., before accepting a position department head at Willmar Area Vocational Technical Institute and Willmar Community College. He

The garden of Greg and Barb Kalinoski, 333 Maple Ave. N., will be on display July 30 as one of the featured gardens on the 2005 Garden Tour sponsored by Pennington County Master Gardeners.

2005 Tour of Gardens begins July 30

The 2005 Garden Tour, sponsored by the Pennington County Master Gardeners, will be held Saturday, July 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets are $5 per person. Tickets and directions are available at all locations. For more information, call the Pennington County Extension Office at (218) 683-7030.

Signs are posted to help with directions or ask one of the helpers at the gardens to find another featured garden.

315 Maple Ave. N.

Janeen Kalsnes has been gardening since 1980 but truly got involved with perennials in 1995. This is a gal who doesn't mind getting her hands and knees dirty and who also doesn't mind asking her husband for some help from time to time. Her backyard is a delightful mixture of daylilies, iris, astilbe and hydrangea placed in front of a white fence. This year, they put in a small pond/waterfall at the end of their arching bridge. A hosta bed ties the pond to the perennial bed. Be sure to look at the climbing roses on each side of the bridge as well as a four-foot potted European red tree rose. A mixture of annuals adds splashes of color to the backyard bed. Anchoring the opposite end of the bed is a beautiful, white gazebo which happens to be Janeen Kalsnes' favorite spot to sit back and enjoy the garden.

Greg and Barb Kalinoski
333 Maple Ave. N.

Barb Kalinoski has recently become a perennial gardener but not in the usual way. She has always enjoyed different city parks, observing the structure and flow of various plantings.

Not so long ago she decided she would like some of the structure that landscaping provides to surround her house. She began by having a small planting placed in her backyard so she could see it from the kitchen. After a while, deciding it needed to be moved, she did so and learned that she could do other plantings by herself. She read books, magazines and talked with friends or nursery personnel about what kind of plants to use for the different spots around the yard. It was her desire for structure which led her to the perennials. She admits she still has much to learn about plants and doesn't mind learning as she goes. Having her border around the house provides her with her own little park. She has found that by doing the work herself, the garden will give back to her each time she takes a walk around it. Kalinoski realizes that each person's point of view comes out in a garden and it says something about that person.

Larry and Cheryl Lee
1809 Robin Hood Dr.

The driveway perennial bed of Larry and Cheryl Lee has an interesting personal story behind it. Years ago, Cheryl Lee wanted to put something of interest along the driveway. It just so happened that Jim Breiland of Breiland Landscaping in Thief River Falls was graduating from North Dakota

Local residents sentenced for separate felony offenses

Two local residents were sentenced July 18 in Pennington County District Court for separate felony offenses.

Christopher Marvin Melin, 28, Thief River Falls, pled guilty to a felony offense of fifth degree controlled substance crime. He was originally charged with fourth degree controlled substance crime, but the charge was amended. A five-year stay of imposition was granted. Melin was ordered to serve 60 days in jail. He was also ordered to pay $132 in fees and fines. On Sept. 16, the Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension (BCA) received a report from a confidential, reliable informant (CRI) that the person had bought methamphetamine from Melin. Working with the BCA on Sept. 17, the CRI paid $220 to Melin for two grams of meth.

Natalie Kay Kolberg-Osell, 39, Erskine, pled guilty to possession of meth precursors. Originally, she was charged with conspiracy to manufacture meth. A three-year stay of imposition was granted. Kolberg-Osell was placed on supervised probation for three years. She was ordered to have an alcohol problem assessment and submit a DNA sample. Kolberg-Osell was also ordered to pay $120 in fees and fines. On Jan. 20, police received a report from a Kmart employee that Kolberg-Osell had purchased several meth-making supplies on three separate occasions. She bought boxes of pseudoephedrine, then a gallon of Coleman fuel and then an additional box of pseudoephedrine, respectively. The sheriff's department later executed a search warrant for the home in which Kolberg-Osell was living at the time. At that home in the 700 block of Conley Ave. S., law enforcement allegedly found battery casings, Coleman fuel, Sudafed boxes and other items to aid in the manufacture of meth.

Fifth degree controlled substance crime: On May 31, the sheriff's department attempted to locate a man who was wanted by the Red Lake County Sheriff's Department. The man was located at St. Hilaire Park along with a woman and another man. Steven James Vennes, 26, Thief River Falls, has charges pending for fifth degree possession of marijuana. In connection with that incident, a search warrant was executed in the 800 block of Falls Ave. Approximately 1-3/4 ounces of suspected marijuana, marijuana-related items and numerous books about growing marijuana were allegedly found. Stephen William Peltier, 21, Thief River Falls, has charges pending for assault and criminal damage to property. Peltier allegedly punched another man, who was later taken to Northwest Medical Center. According to the report, the man needed six staples to close lacerations on his head. The report indicated the man was treated and released from the hospital. While police were patting down Peltier, he allegedly slammed his head three times against the hood of a squad car. The squad car sustained damage. That damage amount was not listed in the report.

Fifth degree domestic assault: On July 16, police investigated an earlier report of malicious punishment of a child in the 100 block of Main Ave. N. While there, police learned Dana Marie Dirks, 33, Thief River Falls, also allegedly threw a phone at another underage female. She then allegedly grabbed the girl by her hair and pulled her into an apartment. Dirks was cited for fifth degree domestic assault.

The police report stated Stengrim was taken to Northwest Medical Center with abrasions, contusions and a dislocated hip. Stengrim was transferred to RiverView Hospital in Crookston. Nursing officials there declined to say whether he was a patient there or what his status was. They claimed they had to receive Stengrim's permission to do so. However, The Times was able to confirm through an independent source that Stengrim was hospitalized at RiverView. According to the report, Gibson told the police officer that the sun was in his eyes and he didn't see Stengrim. The report indicated both Stengrim and Gibson said they had the green light, but Gibson did not recall if the green arrow had illuminated. Gibson's vehicle sustained $300 in damage, and Stengrim's vehicle sustained $400 in damage.

Arctic Cat reports record sales in fiscal 2006 first quarter

Arctic Cat Inc. recently reported net sales of $107.9 million for the fiscal 2006 first quarter ended June 30, up 5 percent versus $102.6 million in the same period last year. Net earnings for the quarter rose to $448,000, or $0.02 per diluted share, compared to net earnings of $124,000, or $0.01 per diluted share, in the prior-year period.

"We are pleased to report another record first quarter," said Chris Twomey, chairman and chief executive officer. "Sales increased across all product lines and exceeded our expectations, due to slightly higher than anticipated sales to dealers."

All-terrain vehicle (ATV) sales increased 6 percent to $41.4 million versus $39.2 million in the first quarter of last year. "Our dealers responded positively to our 2006 model ATVs unveiled at our dealer show in June," said Twomey. "We demonstrated further progress on our ATV growth strategy to extend our products into every market segment and to offer best-in-class ATVs at competitive prices. Notably, in just two years, we have completely redesigned our ATV lineup and expanded into new categories that offer opportunities to further increase our market share."

Among the new 2006 ATVs recently introduced was Arctic Cat's first entry into the true utility category with the Prowler. The Prowler's extensive features include side-by-side bucket seats with seat belts, and a composite rear-cargo box designed for hauling and dumping.

Sales of Arctic Cat snowmobiles rose 3 percent to $52 million compared to $50.7 million in the prior-year first quarter due to slightly earlier sales to dealers. Parts, garments and accessories increased to $14.5 million versus $12.7 million in the year-ago period, fueled by sales across all product lines.

During the 2006 first quarter, Arctic Cat repurchased approximately 185,000 shares of its common stock under the company's $20 million share repurchase program.

Outlook

Arctic Cat currently anticipates fiscal 2006 second-quarter net sales for the period ending Sept. 30 to range between $255 million and $267 million, up from $240.7 million for the same period last year. Net earnings for the quarter are estimated to be between $0.90 and $0.94 per diluted share versus earnings of $0.94 per diluted share in the prior-year quarter.

For the fiscal year ending March 31, 2006, Arctic Cat continues to anticipate that net sales will grow 3 to 5 percent and be in the range of $710 million to $723 million. The company forecasts lower margins in fiscal 2006 due to increased raw material costs, lower snowmobile sales and a less favorable yen/dollar exchange rate, resulting in estimated full-year diluted earnings per share in the range of $1.31 to $1.40. Fiscal 2005 earnings per diluted share totaled $1.36.

"Our outlook for fiscal 2006 remains unchanged," said Twomey. "We continue to anticipate record full-year sales, but lower margins are expected to constrain earnings."

Certain CRP practices eligible for haying and grazing

The Pennington County Farm Service Agency (FSA) Office reminds producers that certain Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) practices are eligible for haying or grazing beginning Aug. 1. Practices eligible for haying and grazing include CP1, CP2, CP4D, CP10 and CP18C if the acreage was not hayed or grazed in 2003 or 2004. Any CRP acreage that was hayed or grazed in either 2003 or 2004 is ineligible to be hayed or grazed in 2005.

Prior to beginning to hay or graze their CRP acreage, producers must contact the FSA Office to request and receive written approval from the FSA County Office to hay or graze their acreage. If approved, the haying and grazing authority ends Sept. 15. Haying is limited to one cutting, and the same acreage cannot be hayed and grazed.

All hay and livestock must be removed from the CRP acreage by no later than Sept. 1, and producers must report the acreage they actually hayed or grazed to the FSA County Office by no later than Sept. 16.

On the acreage that is hayed or grazed, the annual rental payment will be reduced by 25 percent. The haying or grazing authority may be leased to an eligible livestock producers, and the hay harvested from CRP acreage may be sold.

For more information, contact the Pennington County FSA Office at 681-1612, extension 2.

NOTICE OF UPCOMING BIBLE READ-A-THON

The third annual Bible Read-a-thon will be starting in Thief River Falls on Sunday, July 31, 2005 at 4:00 p.m. in the Gazebo at Floyd B. Olson Park..

We welcome new readers and veterans from last two year's event to join us in the Gazebo from Sunday through Wednesday evening. We will again begin the book of Genesis and read continually until we finish the book of Revelations sometime late Wednesday afternoon or evening.

Last year over 70 people representing at least ten different congregations participated as readers in the 74+ hour event. Many of those people have already indicated they plan to read again, and we have new people who have expressed interest as well. Stop by the Gazebo anytime during the reading and check the signup sheet for opportunities to read. Several people sign up for the same two hour block of time and rotate reading during their shift. We can always fit more people into the schedule - or you can just sit and listen.

Armyworms reported around region

There have been reports of armyworm infestations around the region. Producers are encouraged to scout their fields. It is important to detect and control armyworms while they are small and before extensive damage is done.

First scout for armyworms in field margins, low areas with rank plant growth and areas where plants have lodged. Look for leaf feeding and frass (droppings) [illegible] plants, and several [illegible] that has fallen to the ground. [illegible] hide beneath plant debris around the base of plants and in heads of wheat and barley.

Consider treatment if armyworms number four or more per square foot, are 3/4 to 1-1/4 inches long, leaf feeding or head clipping is evident, and most larvae do not exhibit signs of parasitization (white eggs behind the head or small brown cocoons attached to the body). If armyworms are more than 1-1/2 inches long, control is not likely to provide economic return.

Earlier this month, Thief River Falls resident John Bornholdt moved dirt into a "slurry pit" at Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village. The pit is part of the former Sewer Disposal Plant, which was deeded to the Pennington County Historical Society. Over the years, the area has been a breeding ground for mosquitoes. It is hoped that the dirt, along with a culvert that was put in that area a year ago, will alleviate that problem. (Submitted photo)

Mosquitoes will be saying goodbye to Pioneer Village slurry pit

It's been years in the making, but finally a mosquito breeding area at Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village has hopefully been eliminated.

This month, dirt from the Barzen Avenue construction project was placed in a "slurry pit" at the village. The pit, which is part of the former Sewer Disposal Plant, was deeded to the Pennington County Historical Society in 1976.

Prior to the dirt being hauled to that area, Pennington County constructed a culvert to help alleviate water in that area. The culvert was built last year.

The area became a breeding ground for mosquitoes after water accumulated there due to the pit's floor of drain tiles. Donated farm machinery was placed in the pit. Over the years, the machinery began to rust due to the water.

Several solutions have been suggested in the succeeding years. However, none seemed feasible until Bud Enge, who worked at the original plant, determined the drain on the southside of the pit was not open. Enge found that a manhole located between the pit and south ditch had been filled with dirt.

A year ago, Thief River Falls resident John Bornholdt determined that if a culvert was built leading to the northside of the property, then the land's natural slope would drain the water to a west ditch. Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagan surveyed the slope and found Bornholdt's idea would work. The society voted to have the county install the culvert and authorized Village Director Caryl Bugge to dispose of all but a few of the rusted pieces of machinery in the pit. The remainder of the items are on display at the village.

This year, Bornholdt told Bugge that he believed the dirt from the Barzen Avenue construction project would be good dirt to add to the pit. He figured that adding the dirt would enable the pit to completely drain rainwater in that area. Flaagan suggested that the society find a bulldozer or front loader to push the dirt into place. It was agreed that the dirt would be moved to the village if it wanted the dirt.

Bornholdt was able to use a caterpillar owned by Duane Thygeson. The agreement was that Bornholdt could use it if he refilled the fuel tank. Bornholdt pushed the dirt into the pit, which is approximately 150 feet in diameter with a low cement column in the center. He then called Sorvig Oil Inc. to refuel the caterpillar. When he got the receipt, it was marked "no charge."

With the help of a few teenagers who were ordered to complete community service, Bornholdt smoothed the edges of the pit in preparation for seeding. Dan Helle brought his seeder, four-wheeler and drag to the village. Forty pounds of grass seed and 50 pounds of oat seed were planted July 14. Over the weekend, the pit was watered. The oats have since sprouted.

Bornholdt already has the next village project on his schedule. He intends to see that the sawmill that is in the village is put into the pit. Bornholdt hopes to have it sawing lumber in the future.

Bike safety incentive program in TRF

Each year, there are about 900 bicycle-related deaths in the United States and another half a million bicycle-related injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms.

Northwest Medical Center, Thief River Falls, and the Thief River Falls Police Department encourage riders of all ages to use helmets. Studies have shown that using bicycle helmets can reduce head injuries by up to 85 percent.

As an incentive to area youth to wear safety helmets while bicycling, Northwest Medical Center and the Thief River Falls Police Department are attempting to "catch" bikers wearing protective gear. If stopped by an officer for wearing the correct gear, the rider will receive a coupon for a free ice cream treat at the Northern Lights Ice Cream Wagon and will be eligible for a drawing at the end of the summer for a bicycle.

USDA extends FSA county committee nomination period

Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns announced Monday that the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) is extending the deadline to nominate eligible candidates to serve on USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) county committees to Aug. 15. The nomination deadline was originally scheduled for Aug. 1.

"Our goal is to have as many eligible candidates nominated to serve on FSA county committees as possible, especially minorities and women," said Johanns. "This two-week extension will give USDA personnel, community-based groups, farmer organizations and others more time to continue their outreach efforts, so FSA county committees can truly reflect America's agricultural landscape."

Committees apply their judgment and knowledge to make decisions on county commodity price support loan eligibility, conservation programs, disaster programs, employment and other farm program-related issues.

Individuals may nominate themselves or others as candidates. In addition, eligible candidates can be nominated by community-based and other organizations in the county where the election is being held before the close of the nomination period. Nominations and elections are open to all eligible candidates and voters. The nomination form is available at USDA Service Centers and by logging onto www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/publications/elections.

Producers should keep in mind several dates regarding the upcoming county committee elections. Producers can request, fill out and submit nomination forms up to Aug. 15. Ballots will be mailed to eligible voters by Nov. 4. The deadline to return ballots is Dec. 5. Elected committee members and alternates take office on Jan. 1.

Kids learn to feel fit and fine

From now to Aug. 5, area kids will be able to participate in Feelin' Fit 'n Fine, which is being offered by public health agencies. Through the program, kids are able to practice healthy behaviors, participate in activities and win prizes.

Each time they complete a qualifying activity for one hour or more, they can have their parents or participating site personnel (lifeguard, summer recreation coach, etc.) initial a square and specify the activity. Once all squares are filled, they bring or mail the scorecard to be entered into a weekly drawing. At that time, they will get to pick out a prize from a treasure chest.

Unemployment rate drops in June

The Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development recently announced that Minnesota's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for June dropped over a half-point to 3.7 percent – the lowest rate since March 2001.

Seasonally adjusted total employment jumped by 10,700 in June. The leading gainers were government (+2,900); professional and business services (+2,600); and education and health services (+1,800). The only major industry sectors that shed jobs in June were construction (-800) and other services (-400). During second quarter 2005, Minnesota added 20,200 jobs to nudge past the pre-recessionary peak achieved in March 2001.

Gov. Tim Pawlenty said job growth and the drop in unemployment indicates that his administration's commitment to economic policies that encourage job creation is paying off.

"The job growth numbers are good news for Minnesota, and I'm optimistic that our economy is gaining steam," said Pawlenty. "This news should remind us that we must continue to stay focused on making Minnesota a more competitive place to do business and create good jobs."

Pamida Foundation recently donated $500 to the Little Brother/Little Sister program in Thief River Falls. Sue Dupree, program director, said the funds will be used to support activities and events for the children participating in the program. Currently, there are 47 children in the program, and about 12 on the waiting list. Last year, the program served 70 children. Dupree would encourage anyone interested in becoming a mentor to contact her at the District Service Center, at 681-8711, extension 241. Pictured presenting the donation to Dupree, and program participant, Brandon Housey, are: (from left, front row) Sue Dupree, Brandon Housey, Penny Brang, and Sandy Landrus; (back row) Travis Pickle, Keith Tormanen, LaVon Lannoye, Irene Roisland, Derek Dalen, and Isaac Kvasager.

Prevent unintended impacts when combating soybean aphids

As Minnesota farmers head into their fields to combat soybean aphids, the Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) reminds them to take steps to avoid unintended impacts on waterways and beneficial insects such as honeybees.

According to the MDA's latest plant pest survey, soybean aphids are increasingly common in central and southern Minnesota. In most areas, aphid populations are still below the level at which it is economical to conduct treatments. However, aphid numbers may continue to grow in coming weeks. Depending on weather and other factors, aphid infestations can cause more than a 20 percent yield loss in soybeans.

There are a number of insecticide products approved for use in controlling soybean aphids. Insecticides listed as Restricted Use by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) require applicators in Minnesota to be certified private applicators, or commercial or non-commercial pesticide applicators with required use categories. As farmers make plans to use these products to prevent crop damage, MDA Commissioner Gene Hugoson urges them to read and follow all product label directions to ensure successful treatments and avoid unwanted impacts on non-target insects and aquatic life.

"Because soybeans are flowering plants, they are sometimes visited by honeybees and other beneficial insects," Commissioner Hugoson said. "To minimize the chance of harming bees and other non-target species, we're asking applicators to follow some basic precautions."

The MDA offers four key recommendations to help minimize unintended impacts:

1. Choose a product less likely to be transported back to the beehive;

2. Conduct applications close to dawn or dusk, when bees are least likely to be foraging;

3. Observe label-directed and voluntary setbacks from aquatic sites (lakes, rivers, streams, wetlands); and

4. Notify area beekeepers in advance about treatment plans. The location of registered hives can be found on the MDA website at www.mda.state.mn.us under the heading "Hot Topics."

Weekly updates on aphids and other crop pests are also available in the Minnesota Pest Report, a free weekly publication from the MDA. The report is posted on the web at www.mda.state.mn.us/pestsurvey. Those planning to spray for aphids can also check the University of Minnesota web site at www.soybeans.umn.edu/crop/insects/aphid for useful tips on selecting treatment products.

"Winnie the Pooh" is coming to Oklee

Oklee Community Children's Theater is getting ready for its presentation of "Winnie the Pooh" on Aug. 5, 6 and 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Oklee High School gymnasium. Admission is $5 for seventh graders and up. For kindergartners through sixth graders, the cost is $3.

Children ages 6 to 16 have been working for the last two weeks to bring the two-act play to life. The play takes place in the 100 Acre Wood, where Pooh (Amy Paquin) is trying to reach the honey high in the tree. Piglet (Alexis Hanson) comes to tell him that the wood is being invaded by a fierce creature named Kanga (Becky Cote) and her child, Roo (Michelle Soto). Pooh, of course, is concerned with his stomach. When Rabbit (Amanda Paradis) tries to tell Pooh about the creature, Christopher Robin (Stephanie Smith) brings Pooh his blue balloon to reach the honey. Eeyore (Matt Lundeen) and Owl (Maise Lundeen) decide to have a meeting to find out what to do with the invaders. Of course, all of the action takes place in Robin's imagination as his aunt (McCault Berns) reads the story.

Others who are involved in the production are Spencer Paradis, who plays a small rabbit, Nick Olson as Rabbit 3, and Andrew Lundeen as the skunk. The play is under the direction of Michael Swenson. Andy Swenson is the assistant director, and Angela Paquin and Lynette Lundeen are also helping with the production.

Three of the students, Alexis Hanson from Red Lake Falls, Amy Paquin from Oklee and Michelle Soto from McIntosh, helped design and paint the trees for the set.

PARENTING TIPS

Little Helpers

Motivating children to work around the house offers many rewards. According to the book 401 Ways To Get Your Kids To Work At Home by B. R. McCullough and S. W. Monson, it adds greatly to their self esteem and sense of belonging. They gain skills necessary for adult life, establish patterns of success that foster independence and self-reliance, and learn to work quickly and efficiently. Now that we are all convinced that this is a good idea, the only questions that remain are "What and how much are realistic to expect and at what age?"

•Make age-appropriate job assignments: Don't expect a two-year-old to run a vacuum. But do expect that he/she can put away pajamas, pick up toys and undress. Your young child will need reminders. Just because he/she did his/her "chores" one day doesn't mean that he/she will remember to do them every day.

•Provide incentives: Jobs always go better for young children when they have help. Also say to your child, "As soon as we finish we will . . ."

•Break the job down into small parts: Your young child may not be able to complete a big task but if you break it down they can be successful. Remember your young child does have limited abilities as well as a short attention span.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk with your child as you "work" together. Describe what you are doing and possibly why (at your child's level of understanding). Remember to listen as well as talk.

Time is directly proportional to your age

We have reached summer's peak. On the roller coaster that is our annual seasonal cycle, we sit perched at the very top, ready to plummet downwards towards harvest, football, school, shorter days, cooler weather, firewood cutting and the raking of leaves.

Every year, the cycle goes faster. The years start to blur together. You meet somebody you think you haven't seen for two years, but after comparing notes, you realize it has been more like 15. Uff da.

The distant look people get in their eyes when they realize how long it has been since they have seen each other isn't so much sadness over a lost friendship as it is the shock of realizing that time has spun out of one's control.

Remember childhood when each year was an eternity? When Christmas never came? When you changed friends as often as you grew out of a pair of jeans, which seemed like half-a-lifetime?

Now, 12 years go by in a flash and nothing much changes. Twenty-year class reunion? I just recovered from the 10-year!

Einstein postulated that time is relative, which should have been obvious long before. You don't have to be a genius to realize that the speed of time is directly proportional to your age.

When I was 4 years old, my family moved to Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, for all of nine months. In my memory, however, those nine months were an epoch much longer than the 20 years since I graduated from college.

Forget facts, let's talk perceptions:

Richard Nixon was president when I first became aware of things outside the sandbox. In my memory, he served about 42 years.

Gerald Ford stepped in for six years and calmed the nation's nerves after the Patty Hearst kidnapping. It took all of the Ford administration for my new front teeth to grow in.

Then came Jimmy Carter's eight years in office. That was the time when I remember thinking that those clingy fake silk polyester shirts with farm scenes on them were the final clothing trend. They were just too cool to ever go out of style.

I was wrong. Reagan came along and everybody started wearing velour, a fancy word for the fabric they use in bath towels. I revised my fashion prophecies. Velour was forever.

To my dismay, velour went out of fashion during Bush the Elder's two years in office, although I kept wearing the shirts until they unraveled in the dryer during the Clinton administration.

Bill Clinton served four years, three of which were dominated by Bimbogate. All business ground to a halt as the U.S. Senate figured out if the oldest game in the world - lying about one's sex life - was an impeachable offense.

Now, we have Bush the Younger who has been in there for the past several months and should be up for reelection here in a couple of years.

Wouldn't you know, a few months ago, about the time George II took over, I spotted some clingy polyester shirts with farm scenes on them on the rack at J.C. Penney. They were already back, only five years after they went out of style!

By then, I had stopped growing and no longer needed new shirts and certainly didn't care if they were fashionable.

For weddings and funerals, I have a nice new tie which is just as new today as it was 15 years ago when I tied the knot on it.

I also stopped watching the news as much, so I have no real idea whether this Bush guy is settling in to the routine of being president or just how it is going. For all I know, we could be at war.

I do know when the grain fields turn tan, that means it won't be long until Tommy Kramer, Ted Brown and the rest of the Vikings head to training camp. Seems like they just got done with last season!

...Undies in a Bunch

You can tell by the sale ads attached to your newspapers that school is starting soon. We're seeing everything that any student could need for the school year, which, of course (and most important to some), includes clothing.

Since the sales are for all ages and sizes of students, I always buy a few basic clothing supplies in the fall, too. Oh, well, yes, you guessed. My list stated, "undies and sox." Hey, we all need those things, right?

The problem is, undies need tags on them to tell us what size they are and how to wash them and, of course, what brand they are so if we like them we can buy them again. All of this fits on a little one-half by one and one-half inch tag made out of....something. And there lies the problem!

Those little tags are the most irritating things I have ever seen. I hate them whether they are on undies or blouses or shirts or whatever, but undies are the worst, as far as I am concerned.

First of all, what are they made of? I swear, some of them are pure plastic. They start out scratchy, and after a few washings, they turn into something like pointed little daggers digging into your skin. There is nothing worse than scratchy undies.

And they are sneaky little things, those tags. You put on your undies and hardly notice the tag. It is only after you have worn them a bit that you start to poke and itch and burn, and then you are usually at work or in some other public place where you would look pretty silly scratching an itch from the poking of the tag. You must tolerate it until you can get to a private place.

When you get to the private place, what do you have to remove the scratchy tag? Nothing, no scissors, no knife, not even a nail clipper. So what do you do? Tear it out, of course. This leaves a gaping hole in the seam of your new undies. Now you have a hole that needs to be sewn up or it will tear a little more every time you wear it until your new undies are nothing but a rag. Doggone!

What? You say to cut out the tags before I start wearing them? Yes, I have done that. I have tried to be very neat and cut the tags out carefully as soon as I take the undies out of the package. Do you know what happens then? The little ends that are sewn into the seam stitching start to scratch. I'm not kidding! Their little (plastic) ends stick out and they poke into wherever it is that they poke and are just as irritating as the large tag. Then it is time to find the seam ripper and get the pokey little pieces of tag out of the seam. While in the process of doing this, I always seem to open up the seam too, so....back to nothing but a rag.

Now that I mention it, I know what is going on. It is just another sales technique. The people who sell undies want you to tear out the tags so that you ruin your undies and have to buy more. Ah, yes, the old ploy.

One good thing I noticed in my new undies this year. One company has put the tag information right on the fabric instead of on a tag. I expected the writing to be stiff and scratchy, but it wasn't. Wonderful. Another brand I bought has made a change, too. They not only put the plastic tag in the seam of the undies, but they put it in a new, different, exciting place - toward the bottom of the seam. So, now, instead of having a scratchy feeling at my waist where I don't feel it all of the time, I can have it right where my leg bends when I walk, when I sit down, when I move at all. Where is that seam ripper?

From now on I'm looking for the new type of tag in everything. I hope the new tags will take over. And that is more than you wanted to know about undies, isn't it? Now, don't get yours in a bunch, OK?

Teach ME! founder attends workshop

Mark DaParma, founder of Thief River Fall's Teach ME! a Learning Club joined top educators from across the nation to share ideas and learn more about the latest successful strategies for raising student achievement during a summer workshop in Minneapolis held in July. The workshop was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education.

"Only people involved everyday with the challenges of helping students achieve, understand what it is like, and these workshops give successful teachers the opportunity to share what works with their colleagues," said U.S. Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings. "Nothing is more important to a child's learning than a good teacher, which is why the No Child Left Behind Act promises students the opportunity to learn from highly qualified teachers."

The 2005 summer workshop was geared toward K-12 instructors. Sessions covered reading and other literacy skills, mathematics, science, history and the arts as well as how to use data effectively. Specialists spoke on teaching strategies for students with special needs and students who are learning English.

President George W. Bush and Congress have requested record levels of federal funding to support our schools. Bush's budget request provides almost $5.2 billion – an increase of $362.5 million or 8 percent over Fiscal Year 2005.

"The workshop was one of the best I have ever attended," said DaParma. "The attending instructors were enthusiastic to share their stories - success as well as what didn't work and why. There were people from around the nation and from all demographics. I came away with not one, but whole lists of ideas which will have direct benefits for Teach ME!'s students. I was in awe, as the national presenters expounded on what the incredibly high lifelong costs can mean financially, as well as socially, for the students who don't 'get it.' It has a negative impact on today's student and even their children yet to come! It has a huge bearing upon the future of our nation. I feel very privileged to have been one of the attendees."

DaParma is the founder of Teach ME! a Learning Club located in downtown Thief River Falls providing remedial and skills gaps learning to area children. The company's Web site is: www.wiktel.net/mdaparma.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: Can Social Security Administration records be used to help me do family genealogical research?

A: Yes but you will be charged a fee. Records potentially available from SSA include an application for a Social Security card (form SS-5) and information from claim files if SSA benefits had been received. To obtain any of this information you will need to file a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request with Social Security. Detailed procedures for requesting FOIA information, including fees and where to write for information, are on the SSA Web site, www.socialsecurity.gov, and linked from the Resources section on the upper right side of the homepage.

In general, to search SSA records, certain identifying information is needed. Agency records are filed by Social Security numbers (SSN's) rather than by names. If you can provide the person's SSN, we will search our records for any information we might have. Without an SSN, we will need the person's full name, date and place of birth, and parents' [illegible] to locate the record.

[illegible] before 1865. The Social Security Administration did not begin keeping records until 1936; therefore, we have no records about people who died before then.

A deceased person does not have any privacy rights. Therefore, if he or she applied for an SSN, we can generally provide a copy of the Application for a Social Security Card (form SS-5). This document contains the person's name, date and place of birth, and parents' names that were given when he or she applied for the number. You will be charged the cost of searching our records even if we are unable to locate or disclose any information on the person you are asking about. Closely read the FOIA instructions before requesting any information. Addresses to use and fees charged vary based on the records to be searched. SSA also maintains a death master file record of approximately 70 million deaths. Not available online from SSA, an extract of it can be purchased through the U.S. Department of Commerce, National Technical Information Service (NTIS).

Private firms sometimes post NTIS derived data on their sites as the SSA Death Index. SSA does not endorse those sites and cannot confirm if they are kept up to date or accurate in any way.

"Nunfest" to be performed Aug. 6-8

"Nunfest" will be performed August 6-8 at the Thief River Golf Club. Each evening, the festivities start at 6 p.m. with a half-hour social with dinner and show to follow. There will be an additional performance at 12 p.m. Sunday with dinner and show to follow.

That's Entertainment, a Thief River Falls theater group, is celebrating its 10th anniversary with this musical. "We like the fact that the community has a place for us in their hearts. They're the reason we're on our 10th anniversary," said Kari Frisch, the show's director.

The comedy features the wild and wacky nuns who've charmingly been coined the Little Sisters of Thief River Falls. They have been asked to do all sorts of events, from church socials to retirement parties. But what they love to do best is what they're most known for—their dinner theatre performances. After the sisters became a local fixture in the community, Frisch started writing plays which centered on Thief River Falls.

"We use local business names and include prominent names from our area to make it more personalized for our audiences," Frisch said.

One of the trademarks of a That's Entertainment production is their audience participation. "We bring people right up on stage with us" said Deb Jacobson, who's been with the group since its formation. "There's always this look of excitement and panic in their eyes when we start scanning the crowd because they've come to expect someone out there is going to be picked. They can't wait to find out who it is."

This is the fourth show which Frisch has written for the Little Sisters. "The actors and the characters have been together so long that it has become much easier to write the script now," said Frisch. "When we get together, the gals are so in tune with their characters that we've even made script changes based on ideas from rehearsals."

In fact, the actors and their characters are so enmeshed that it is sometimes hard to distinguish between the two. "There's a little bit of us in the characters we play and a little bit of our character in each of us," said Frisch. "That's why, the name of each Little Sister character is actually each actress's middle name. I thought it was a way to honor that yin/yang element."

The premise behind "Nunfest" is that the Little Sisters of Thief River Falls have purchased airtime from the local radio station in order to provide a "morally straight and spiritually pure alternative to that country music festival that is being held in Detroit Lakes the same weekend." However, the reverend mother and the other sisters have some disagreement as to what type of format the radio program should take. As always, chaos ensues resulting in loads of laughs.

"You can also count on songs with great harmonies," said Marilyn Wigness who plays Sister Mary Melody—the convent organist.

Tickets for any of the four shows are $24, which includes the show and a complete meal with everything from salad to dessert. Tickets must be reserved in advance and generally go fast. To order tickets or for more information call 681-6604.

Public invited to give their ears and tastebuds a treat

Pack a picnic lunch, round up friends and family, and come out to Old Mill State Park Sunday, July 31 from 1 to 5 p.m. for some old-fashioned fun, entertainment and free ice cream at the music festival and country jam session.

Enjoy this free event sponsored by the Newfolden Lions Club and add a voice to a singalong. Those interested in sharing their musical talents or who have friends or relatives who would like to showcase their talents at the festival are encouraged to call (218) 437-8174 for more information and to reserve a performance time. All participating musicians will be given a free vehicle permit for entrance to the park that day.

In addition to the music, a potluck napkin lunch (sweet treats and refreshments) will be served. Guests are encouraged to bring a treat to share. The Marshall County Historical Society will provide free ice cream in celebration of the old-time creamery picnics that were once held at the park.

A special event for senior citizens will also be held at the park Sunday. The Marshall County Council on Aging is sponsoring a Senior Citizen's Celebration of Summer Potluck Picnic beginning at 1 p.m. in the park's picnic shelter. Any senior citizen attending the park event can participate in the potluck. Beverages and eating utensils will be provided. Seniors are asked to bring a dish to share.

Old Mill State Park is located along Marshall County Road 39. From Argyle, travel on Marshall County Road 4 approximately 12 miles east to County Road 39. From Newfolden, go approximately 11 miles west to Marshall County Road 4 to County Road 39.

All programs are free and open to the public; however, a Minnesota State Park vehicle permit is required to enter the park. Permits can be purchased at the park office. For more information, call the park at the aforementioned phone number.

Day camps set for Aug. 9 and 11

Two day camps will be held in the area for children ages 6 to 10 years old. One of the camps will be held Tuesday, Aug. 9 at Goodridge Lions Park from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The other camp will be held Wednesday, Aug. 10 at Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village in Thief River Falls from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

During the day, campers will sing songs, create crafts, play games and have fun. Campers need to provide their own transportation. Each camper will also have to bring a sack lunch, including a beverage and $2 fee. A mid-morning snack will be provided.

Since the camps are sponsored by Pennington County 4-H, current 4-H high school students and ambassadors will serve as counselors.

The registration deadline is Aug. 2. To register, call the Pennington County Extension Office at 683-7030.

Newfolden receives DNR grant

Newfolden was one of the recipients as the Department of Natural Resources approved grants totaling $2,763,000 to local governments and organizations throughout Minnesota for a variety of park, natural area, habitat improvement and other conservation projects.

Funds for these grants are provided through state appropriations from the Environmental Trust Fund, state bonding, and from the Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund. Grants were awarded through five separate programs.

"I'm pleased that we could work together to fund Minnesota's natural and scenic areas, our regional parks, conservation partners, and the environmental partnership in the 2005 bonding bill and the Environmental Trust Fund," Gov. Tim Pawlenty said. "This funding will help maintain and improve our environment and natural heritage for our generation and the next."

Natural/Scenic Areas

These grants help local governments acquire high quality natural areas or areas with outstanding scenic values. Three grants, totaling $975,000, were awarded to the cities of Elk River and St. Cloud and to Dakota County for combined acquisitions totaling about 110 acres.

Regional Parks

This program provides grants to local governments for regional parks located outside the Twin Cities seven county area. Two grants, totaling $820,000, were awarded to the city of Austin for acquisition of 148 acres to be added to the existing Hormel Nature Center and to Wright County for acquisition of 138 acres to be added to the existing Robert Ney Regional Park.

Outdoor Recreation

These grants help local governments acquire, develop and renovate local parks. Grants to nine cities, totaling $595,000, were approved for funding from state bond funds and Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund dollars. The successful applicants include the cities of Worthington, Dalton, Eveleth, New Prague, Clara City, Newfolden, Welcome, Claremont and Green Isle.

Conservation Partners

This program helps local governments and organizations complete fish, wildlife and native plant habitat improvement projects; $209,000 was provided for 16 projects.

Environmental Partnership

A wide variety of conservation and environmental service projects are funded through this program. A total of $164,000 was awarded for 16 projects.

Cooperative U.S., Canada effort uncovers fraud in a purchase of state licenses

A Canadian resident recently pleaded guilty to defrauding the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and will be required to pay more than $800 in fines. He will also lose hunting and fishing privileges in Minnesota for one year.

Ernest "Danny" Lee Calvert, 48, of Fort Frances, Ontario, was found to have obtained Minnesota hunting and angling licenses using false information. The recent conviction resulted from an investigation started in 2003 when Minnesota Conservation Officer Lloyd Steen of Ray received a call from Ontario CO Mike Veniot, who believed Calvert was actually a Minnesotan trying to obtain a Canadian resident hunting/fishing license. Steen said Calvert had a cabin on Rainy Lake and had previously lived in International Falls for years.

During an interview, Calvert said he was an Ontario resident who had been living in Fort Frances for several years. Calvert also had an Ontario driver's license, a Canadian insurance card, dual U.S.-Canadian citizenship and an Ontario hunting/fishing license from 2002.

A further check found Calvert had also purchased a Canadian angling and hunting license in 2001, owned a pickup truck licensed in Ontario and jointly owned a house in Fort Frances. Calvert was issued a new license for 2003. A residency check showed Calvert moved from the U.S. to Canada in 1997 and lived in Fort Frances since 1999.

The break in the case came when DNR records showed Calvert had purchased resident hunting and angling licenses in 2000-2002 and should have paid an additional $374 in nonresident fees.

"This investigation shows that Calvert clearly attempted to cheat the state of Minnesota out of five nonresident license fees in three separate years by illegally claiming he was a Minnesota resident," Steen said. "This case could not have been made without the cooperation of the Ontario officers."

Surplus bear licenses made available Aug. 1

Minnesota bear hunters who were unsuccessful in this year's lottery may purchase a surplus license starting at noon Aug. 1.

Surplus licenses are available in six permit areas where the number of available bear licenses exceeded the number of applicants. For the 2005 season, 15,950 licenses were offered in 11 permit areas. A total of 16,510 applications were received.

Surplus licenses are available on a first-come, first-served basis at any of more than 1,700 statewide Electronic License System vendors or at the DNR License Center in St. Paul.

Beginning at noon on Monday, Aug. 8, any eligible person will be able to purchase a remaining bear permit.

The bear season will run Sept. 1 to Oct. 16. Licenses for the no-quota area (outside of the 11 lottery permit areas) can be purchased directly at any ELS vendor beginning Aug. 1.

This year, hunters will be able to purchase permits in both quota and no-quota areas. However, they'll be restricted to hunting only those areas where their permit is valid.

A total of 2,021 surplus licenses will be available for the bear season. In area 31, three licenses are available, while 85 are available in permit area 22, 186 in area 13, 451 in area 24, 573 in area 45, and 724 in area 51.

A map showing the location of these bear permit areas can be found on the DNR Web site at www.dnr.state.mn.us.

2005 Tour of Gardens begins July 30

State University in landscape design and needed to do a senior project. This was a perfect fit for both parties as the Lees now have their driveway surrounded by perennials and Breiland was able to graduate.

While Breiland was doing that project, the Lees' young son Jared also took an interest in landscape design. He is now a professional landscape designer in Golden Valley and five years ago designed this upgraded version of the driveway bed, and Breiland was hired to do the planting and put in the cypress mulch. Among the plantings are ornamental grass, daylilies, asters, miniature hostas, Morden shrub roses, coral bells, echinacea, black-eyed Susan and French lilac.

Verne and Cathy Spengler
15772 190th St. N.E.

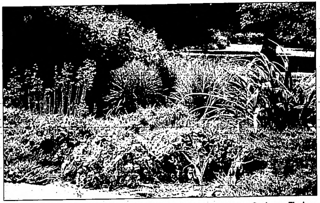
Verne and Cathy Spengler have both been involved in the landscape design on their farm for about 25 years. A tall hedge of cotoneaster shields the large expanse of lawn and gardens from passing traffic. As one drives to their home, he or she will be greeted by a flowing paved sidewalk to the front door and an assortment of annuals and perennials. Cathy Spengler "over-wintered" geraniums and has those along the sidewalk.

Other beds are located along the perimeter of the site. "Grandma's Garden" contains bee balm, lilies, iris, pinks, primrose, ground sedum, thunbergia black-eyed Susan, lavender and many other perennials. "Grandpa's Garden" surrounds an oak tree and is surrounded by hostas, wax begonias and impatiens. They also have many different kinds of trees, including harald red, Manitoba sweet, chestnut crab, Canada red cherry, Ohio buckeye and high bush cranberry as well as many spruce trees forming a border around the yard.

Verne and Cathy Spengler's "Grandpa's Garden" will be seen by tourgoers July 30 while they take part in the 2005 Garden Tour sponsored by Pennington County Master Gardeners. The Spenglers reside at 15772 190th St. N.E.



Larry and Cheryl Lee's garden will be among the gardens on the 2005 Garden Tour sponsored by Pennington County Master Gardeners. The Lees reside at 1809 Robin Hood Dr.

Township denies Country Estates petition

before the township will consider taking them over.

Also discussed during the meeting were possible ways to pay for the project. Flaagan noted two instances, Johnson Drive, North Township and Mark Boulevard, Rocksbury Township, in which township residents privately raised funds and one instance, Riverbend Trail, when residents agreed to be privately assessed.

A major disagreement between Country Estates and Smiley Township supervisors exists regarding the financing of the road project. Anderson and Cloose, citing that the roads have been deemed public, asked that the township contribute a portion of the project's funding. DeBriyn responded that the township doesn't have funds to contribute and the board would not assess township residents to pay for improvements.

Discussion continued for the remainder of the meeting with the township supervisors emphasizing the points that they can't assess township residents to improve private roads, while Country Estates' residents rebutted with the fact that they account for more than 13 percent of the township's tax base.

The likely next step for Country Estates residents, as suggested by Swanson, would be for residents to form a committee that would gather additional signatures of affected land owners who are willing to be assessed.

Kennedy student earns degree from UW - Madison

year to vaccinate their livestock for anthrax." Information on vaccinating animals can be obtained by contacting a veterinarian.

Often a seemingly healthy animal dies without showing any clinical signs of anthrax. In the most acute form of the disease, an animal will suddenly stagger, have convulsions and die. Hemorrhage from the mouth, nose and anus are common. Other symptoms include excitement, often followed by depression, fever, trembling, staggering and difficulty breathing. Horses may show signs of abdominal pain. Carcasses from animals that die of anthrax decompose rapidly and rigor mortis is often incomplete. Pigs and carnivores are more resistant to the disease and may survive infection. These animals may develop swelling in the neck and throat or have gastrointestinal disturbances.

Any animal that dies suddenly of unknown causes in northwestern Minnesota should be treated as an anthrax suspect. Producers should contact their veterinarians immediately so blood samples can be submitted for testing. Any remaining animals should be vaccinated and treated for anthrax. Autopsies should not be preformed on suspect carcasses as the procedure can result in contamination of surrounding soil. After confirmation of the disease, carcasses must be incinerated on-site. All suspect cases of anthrax must be reported to BAH at (651) 296-2942.

Gunderson won't ease into retirement

held that position, for three years, before deciding he wanted a career in administration.

In 1969, Gunderson earned his master's degree and took an administrative leadership internship with Lane Community College in Eugene, Ore. Gunderson returned to Minnesota in 1971. He worked for what is now known as MnSCU in the St. Paul central office for two years, serving as vocational education director.

In 1973, Gunderson accepted a position as assistant director at the newly formed Area Vocational Technical Institute in East Grand Forks. Ironically, he accepted the position after he, working with the Minnesota technical college's governing body, tried to discourage the construction of a vocational school in East Grand Forks.

After a seven-year stay in East Grand Forks, Gunderson accepted an administrative position at Thief River Falls AVTI. The vocational school would later become the Area Technical Institute, then Thief River Falls Technical College and Northwest Technical College-Thief River Falls, before merging with Northland Community College in 1995 and the East Grand Forks campus of Northwest Technical College in 2003. During each merger, he would be named the new institution's president.

In total, Gunderson led seven institutions during his stay in Thief River Falls. He was happy most of the time, except for the 1992-95 period when the Thief River Falls Technical College was part of the six-college Northwest Technical College.

"That was like three years in purgatory, it was not fun at all, and I was lucky I didn't get fired," Gunderson recalled. He realized the six-campus college was poorly thought out and began meeting with state legislators and the local school board to discuss solutions.

"That school was very inefficient, it was ineffective, it was costly, it had no reason to exist. It was just a terrible organization," Gunderson said. "I said we have to get out of this. There's nothing that will improve our college. What we need to do is combine this technical institute over here with the community college on the other side of the building and that's what we did."

Like Gunderson's vision, the two Thief River Falls colle[illegible] in 1995. Gunderson was [illegible] the combined community and technical college's president that [illegible].

Northland Community and Technical College [illegible] grown [illegible] Grand Forks [illegible] Technical [illegible] NCTC [illegible] to day operations of each campus.

Retiring as the longest serving president of a two-year college in the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities System, Gunderson has little to complain about. He is proud of the emergence of the NCTC Airport Campus and the rise of its aviation maintenance program.

At one time the NCTC Aviation Maintenance Program included 523 students, who took classes between 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Participation in the program has dropped significantly, to about 50 students. Despite the dramatic drop, Gunderson is happy with the program, and he considers it the best of its kind in the nation.

Gunderson did express one concern that he has witnessed during his Thief River Falls tenure that will confront future students. The cost of education continues to climb and according to Gunderson, it will make a college education unaffordable for the average adult. Calling it the biggest change, Gunderson said the cost of tuition for attending a two-year school has increased from a dollar a day tuition in 1978 to $25 a day 27 years later.

"Basically education is not as accessible as it used to be," Gunderson said. "Some students can't afford to go to school anymore. I've seen state and community colleges go from inexpensive to expensive."

Minnesota Colleges and Universities Chancellor James H. McCormick shares the same desire for economically priced education.

Gunderson will continue his efforts toward making education affordable. Though his days as NCTC president are numbered, he recently met with Arctic Cat officials to discuss some programs that he hopes will increase enrollment at NCTC and employment at Arctic Cat, by offering scholarships and loan repayment programs to prospective students.

"I think he (Gunderson) has been a visionary during these years of growth and change," McCormick said. "He has a very deep concern for students of all ages. He is very committed and I share this vision with him. We need to have access to our public school system and we need to keep it high quality."

The second biggest change Gunderson has seen in his 25 years in Thief River Falls is the rise of technology and its use in a learning environment. He said there were no computers on campus when he first arrived in 1980. Now they are intertwined into virtually every program the school offers.

He is also impressed with the emergence of the NCTC Foundation, which has overseen $10 million worth of contracts in the last 15 years. The Thief River Fall's NCTC foundation will soon hire a full-time administrator.

Gunderson hopes that he and the next NCTC president share some common traits. He especially hopes that the new president would plan to stay for a while.

"I think in order to get things done you need to establish relationships," Gunderson said. "It's pretty hard for a person to blow into town, implement their plan and leave within two to three years."

On July 31, after spending more than 40 years in higher education, Gunderson will say goodbye to the NCTC Thief River Falls and East Grand Forks campuses. He recently began cleaning out his office in preparation for the day.

Gunderson has been granted emeritus status and will continue to serve the college in that capacity. Gunderson said he will have an office at the Swenson House, not on the campus itself. He plans to assist with the NCTC Foundation's fundraising efforts, but his intent is to distance himself from NCTC's administration.

"I don't want anything to do with the campus or decision making," Gunderson said. "I don't want to interfere."

Gunderson does have a change of heart regarding one potential retirement career.

"One change, I thought when I retired I would like to run for public office," Gunderson said. "But what's happened in the last eight years has really turned me off. There's no compromise. Democrats and Republicans alike are constantly at each other's throats. There's no willingness to compromise."

"I think at the local level we still have some common sense. Government at the local level works. Thank God were not like the state and national level."

Except for his new role as professor emeritus, Gunderson has not made many plans, which presently are limited to spending time with his family.

"I'm going to enjoy my grandkids," Gunderson said. "My wife and I are going to do some of the things we did when we were younger."

If he had his career to do over, Gunderson said he would do everything the same, starting with his decision to go into administration.

"In order to make good things happen, you have to be an administrator," Gunderson said. "I was more interested in that than becoming a billionaire."

The backyard of Ken and Janeen Kalsnes' property is a mixture of daylilies, iris, astilbe and hydrangea. Their garden, at 315 Maple Ave. N will be featured on the 2005 Garden Tour sponsored by Pennington County Master Gardeners

Area's arts and cultural resources being surveyed

The arts and cultural resources of our area will be studied this summer through an economic impact study conducted by Minnesota Citizens for the Arts (MCA), and the Northwest Regional Arts Council (NWRAC), one of 11 regional arts councils statewide. The project, which will produce 11 regional economic impact studies as well as a statewide study, measures the economic impact of arts and culture organizations and audiences both locally and across Minnesota. The study began recently, and the results will be released to the public in January 2006.

Cities and states across the country seek to build "creative economies" that are driven by the strength of creative people such as artists, designers, and innovators of all kinds.

"The arts and culture are one of the things that define Minnesota, like our lakes and the great outdoors, drawing people here from all over the country. Minnesota is poised to be one of the leading creative economies in the country behind only New York and California, because Minnesota has a unique civic culture of public support for and participation in the arts," said Sheila Smith, MCA's executive director.

The year-long study will be coordinated by MCA, while each of the state's 11 regional arts councils will manage audience surveys and the data release events in their own regions. Americans for the Arts, their national partner, will create the economic models for the study for each region and for the statewide study, and will provide secure web-based surveying tools.

"We hope that many of our arts and cultural groups participate in the survey," said Mara Wittman of the NWRAC. "The results will be a great way of showing the economic impact of the arts in northwestern Minnesota."

The types of non-profit organizations that will be studied include community and statewide organizations in the arts, historical societies, humanities organizations, and public broadcasting. Arts areas to be studied include dance, literary arts, music, theater, visual arts and artist service organizations.

"It is anticipated that the data collected from around the state will help support the case for increased public and private sector arts and culture funding in our communities and will generate significant statewide and local visibility for these important community assets," said Smith.

The study consists of two parts: 1) A web-based budget survey for arts and culture organizations, and 2) An audience survey distributed to attendees at arts and culture events or exhibits. These surveys measure event-related spending by arts audiences and are extremely important. For example, arts attendees often eat a meal before the show, pay for parking, and purchase souvenirs. This spending has a measurable impact on the local economy—an impact that differentiates the arts from many other local industries. If you are asked to complete an audience survey, please take part.

Some area organizations, including the Thief River Falls Community Arts Council, Warren/Alvarado/Oslo High School Theater Department, and Northwest Minnesota Art Extension, have already been surveyed.

This statewide project is a collaboration of the Forum of Regional Arts Councils and MCA, principle partners, with major funding provided by the McKnight Foundation. Additional partners include Twin Cities Performing Arts Research Coalition project and Americans for the Arts.

Local agriculture teacher wins award

Agricultural teacher Betsy Jensen of Stephen recently won the Outstanding Young Teacher Award at the annual Minnesota Association of Agricultural Educators' Summer Conference held July 11-15 in Moorhead.

Jensen is proud of her award and has made an incredible impact on her students. She has been teaching farm business management for five years at Northland Community and Technical College in East Grand Forks. Jensen said her favorite subject to teach is commodity marketing.

Jensen is active in her community as she is an emergency medical technician. She is a member of the First Lutheran Church, and she is involved in the Monday Study Club.

The Thief River Falls TIMES

Winton Forsberg and Bonnie Dunston were honored at the Senior Citizens program during the 2005 Pennington County Fair as Pennington County's Outstanding Seniors.

Busy career led to a busy retirement for Outstanding Senior

by David Hill
Editor

Of the 40 years Winton Forsberg spent with Soo Line Railroad, 25 of those years were spent as trainmaster. Being a trainmaster was a demanding job that kept him very busy. So at the age of 58 when Forsberg could retire, he couldn't envision sitting down and doing nothing.

"I just couldn't sit down and do nothing," said Forsberg. That realization kicked-off a sort of second career as busy volunteer.

On Friday, July 15, Forsberg was named one of Pennington County's two 2005 Outstanding Senior Citizens during a special program at the 2005 Pennington County Fair.

Forsberg said he's a little embarrassed by the reward. He said it's reward enough for him to help people and organizations, and seeing the good that can come from participating in those organizations. Keeping busy by volunteering has also allowed him to meet a lot of good people.

Since his retirement, he's done a lot that would benefit many people - plenty, despite his modesty, that would qualify him to be named one of Pennington County's 2005 Outstanding Senior Citizens. His activities include participation in: Meals on Wheels; tours at Pioneer Village; managing funds for needy families; fundraising for various charities; participation in Northwest Senior Federation; Lions Club; Golden Pioneers, Lutheran Brotherhood/Thrivent; Zion Lutheran Church; Pioneer Village; and the Thief River Falls Concert Association.

Myra Nesland felt strongly enough that Winton made an outstanding candidate for Outstanding Senior Citizen that she nominated him for the award.

In her letter of recommendation, she noted that he and his wife Claudette had joined Northwest Senior Federation in 2002. At one of the meetings, he agreed to be a county vice president even though he didn't know what to do. She said, "It didn't take very long before Winton found out there were many jobs to do."

It also didn't take long for him to start making a difference.

Nesland said Forsberg wrote to several organizations and quickly raised a lot of money for the Minnesota Senior Federation.

"Winton has helped Northwest (Northwest Region of the Senior Federation) as county vice president, and treasurer for two years. And now," she said, "he is president and is very active in the Thief River Falls community."

Of his participation in all these activities, Winton said Claudette has been very supportive.

Winton was raised on a farm near Viking. He graduated from high school in Newfolden, eventually attended Valley City State College where he received a four-year degree, and served a couple of years in the Army.

Winton and Claudette have two children. Their son, Mark and his wife Cindy, live in the Twin Cities where they are raising their two children; and their daughter, Jodi Carter and her husband Brett, live in the Twin Cities where they are raising their two children.

Outstanding Senior Citizen enjoys working with others

by David Hill
Editor

Bonnie Dunston says she has been active all her life, so active in fact that when she retired she didn't feel she could just come home and sit down.

She's glad she didn't. She says she has learned a lot about other people's perspective on life and earned the friendship of many new acquaintances.

"I've learned a lot just by rubbing shoulders with other people," added Dunston.

Bonnie Dunston has been named Pennington County's Outstanding Senior Citizen. Presentation of that award took place on Friday, July 15, during the 2005 Pennington County Fair.

A very quiet person, Dunston is a little embarrassed about the award. She believes there are many other people out there who are more qualified.

Dunston is very qualified, however. In the nomination application, a summary paragraph about her, stated: "Northwest Medical Center has been privileged to have Bonnie help as a volunteer and also as an auxiliary board member. She has good ideas and is willing to help implement them. There is no job too small or too unimportant for her. She is willing to do anything behind the scene to make the big picture better."

Dunston's list of volunteer activities includes being a volunteer at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls; a Meals On Wheels volunteer; an English as a Second Language tutor at Northland Community and Technical College; a volunteer at Adventist Community Center; an Easter Contata participant; the Assistant Dean at Maplewood Academy; and a member of the Northwest Medical Center Auxiliary board of directors.

Of her many volunteer activities, Dunston said she has especially enjoyed working with the hospital auxiliary board of directors. She explained that it meant having a say in how money is spent - money that helps others.

Bev Rupprecht, director of volunteer services at Northwest Medical Center, said Bonnie is a very quiet person and there's nothing she won't do, even the little things. She realizes how important the little things are, she added.

"You know," said Rupprecht, "it is often the little things that make a big difference."

Rupprecht also described Dunston as efficient, and creative. Searching for more, Rupprecht said, "She's there for people."

Dunston loves being there for other people, and even describes herself as a "people person."

Being a tutor for people who are brushing up on their English language skills has also been a rewarding activity for this busy volunteer.

"It is especially rewarding to be a part of their lives," she said.

But, it's also right up her alley. Dunston was an elementary teacher for 31 years at Adventist schools in the region. Bonnie explained that she and her husband Ted moved to Thief River Falls in 1975, but they had lived in Thief River Falls with their two children between 1958 and 1963.

Bonnie said that throughout everything, Ted has very helpful and understanding.

Their two daughters seem to be following in their footsteps. Joan Freeman is an elementary teacher in Kansas, Mo; and LeAnn Merth, is Dean of Woman at Union College in Lincoln, Neb.

Viola Wikstrom won two grand champion ribbons at the 2005 Pennington County Fair. She won the awards for her baby quilt and table cloth.

Saturday, July 2, 2005

This morning started out with breakfast in bed around 7:10 a.m. and a trip to Westminster Abbey around 8:00 a.m. There we took a tour, saw many famous gravesites, like Purcell, Handel, Winston Churchill and many kings and queens. We saw part of the Changing of the Guard and then took a tour of London including Big Ben, Houses of Parliament, St. Paul's Cathedral, Harrods, the Replica of the Pantheon, Tower Bridge, Tower of London, London Bridge and Buckingham Palace.

After the tour Tom, Karl, Philip and I went wandering around. First, we found tickets to go see "Les Miserables", and then we went to an Italian/French restaurant and found ourselves some monster pizzas. We did some shopping and wandering through Leicester Square, Piccadilly Circus, the Gay Pride March, the Red Light Cabaret and about a billion people. It was crazy.

After a few hours of wandering, it was time to go into the theater and watch a spectacular show of "Les Miserables." It was so incredible – just as good as the Lion King. After that we walked the crazy streets of London to the tube. Live 8, Gay Pride and Wimbledon were all still going on [illegible] the area was really busy. We returned to our hotel for [illegible] how busy it was.

We [illegible] breakfast [illegible] [illegible] all the royal coronations. Many famous people are also buried there. It is extremely elaborate and very big. We went to Buckingham Palace, the official residence of the Queen, and watched the changing of the guard at 11:30 a.m. There is quite a bit of pomp and circumstance surrounding this change of shift, and was fun to see.

We stopped at St. Paul's Cathedral Crypt Restaurant for lunch. We were unable to tour the cathedral as we were rushed for time. St. Paul's was the cathedral where Prince Charles married Princess Diana. Following lunch we were treated to a city bus tour where we drove by most of the major sites.

At 2:15 p.m. the bus dropped us off at Covent Garden, a large area with shops, open market areas and lots of people. I walked over to Planet Hollywood and watched some of the Live 8 concert from Hyde Park on TV. A group of us went from there to a Mexican Restaurant and watched Venus Williams beat Lindsey Davenport at Wimbledon live. This was an excellent championship match taking place about six miles south of where we were in London. This was the longest final ever.

We looked at buying 1/2 price theater tickets, but most of the good shows were sold out because it was Saturday night. Some got in to "Les Miserables" and "Stomp", and two people went to the opera. We decided to wait until Monday night to go to something and decided to enjoy the night life at some of the local pubs.

We rode the tube back to our hotel district, ate at a Thai restaurant and watched some more of the Live 8 concert. We were back to the hotel at 9:30 p.m. and I went to bed early to try to catch up a little on sleep.

Sunday, July 3, 2005

Today we left for the [illegible] Hall which was located in a city called [illegible] miles from London. This was our last performance. We played in this big auditorium with tons of seating and a huge stage. When we got there, we warmed up, and then went into our clinic with one of the judges. After that, Karl, Tom and I went into the mall area for just a short while. After our lunch break we also watched some of the other bands play. They were all very good.

Finally, we performed, and talked with another judge. In the end, we got a bronze. After our clinic Adam and I went shopping and I found a bowl for Mom and a purse for myself and Lynsey. When we returned, we had our awards ceremony, went back to London, to our hotel and went to bed. We were so exhausted!

I got up, had a continental breakfast and headed for the business center where I worked for awhile on the internet. I then walked to the tube station and bought an all-day pass for Zones 1 and 2, got on the tube and went to the Hyde Corner Station. This is at the Southeast corner of Hyde Park where the Live 8 Concert had been held the day and night before. I stopped at the first original Hard Rock Cafe right by the park and bought an original London Hard Rock T-shirt. They were also starting the London 10K run right there at 10 a.m. as well. I got some photos of this and also took photos of the Wellington Arch with the guards riding through.

Got back on the tube and went to Leicester Square and exited. I walked by Trafalger Square and went to the National Gallery. This was a free admission gallery as well and has all of the United Kingdom's most treasured paintings in it. The Gallery was superb. I stopped at a pub and had a baked potato with chili topping and a "pint". After lunch I walked by 10 Downing Street where the Prime Minister resides and purchased a ticket to the Cabinet War Rooms for 10 pounds, about $18 U.S. This is where Churchill and all of his Generals and Staff directed the English war effort during WWII. It's also where the Churchill museum, opened in 2005, is located. The two-hour visit was spectacular, but could well have been an all-day adventure.

I continued south and went to see the House of Parliament and Big Ben. Everyone thinks Big Ben is the clock, but in actuality it is a big bell located in the bell tower behind the clock. I saw the jewel tower located west of Big Ben and this is an old corner of much older government buildings that survived the London fire in the 1800s. I walked 3/4 mile southwest to see the Westminster Cathedral. This is the largest Catholic Church in London and is fashioned after a church in Turkey to make it look very different than St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey which are both Anglican churches. There was a service going on in the cathedral, so I took part in the last half of the service. The large church was full and the service was very nice. The church has a huge organ in it and the music was great. The church is decorated middle eastern style with a lot of mosaic artwork.

After the service I went to a very old pub and had dinner and a pint. The pubs have great food, but it is a lot more expensive than what we are normally used to. I then walked across the Thames and went by the London Eye, a huge ferris wheel where thousands can ride simultaneously. I took a photograph of the Waterloo Bridge, a famous bridge across the Thames. Next it was off to Shakespeare's Globe Theater where I took photos of a small model of the theater. The theater is a 2/3 size model of the original one. A play was going on, so I could not go into the theater itself.

I walked across the Millennium Bridge, a walking bridge, to St. Paul's Cathedral and [illegible] the tube to a station where I transferred to another train and went to our hotel district. I walked past our hotel to a pub and had a pint with our bus driver. The band had only recently returned from their competition in Basingstoke, about 50 miles from London. They competed with four other bands and were awarded a bronze medal. This was the only day I did not accompany the band to their performance.

Monday, July 4, 2005

Happy 4th of July! Today, Karl, Adam, Tom and I were on a mission to see as many things as we possibly could. So, we started off in the tube, of course, and headed to Harrod's. When we arrived we found they don't open until 10:00 a.m., so we left and said we'd come back later.

In the tube again we made our way over to the British Museum where a lot of neat artifacts from Egypt, Greece, Italy and North America were on display. After that we made our way via the tube to the Imperial War Museum which was filled with tanks, missiles, a Holocaust exhibit and of course, a gift shop. The Holocaust exhibit was really depressing; but it was very good. Once we were done there, we stopped for lunch. This is when I decided to quit trying "surprise" meals and just go for the things that I know.

We continued on to Madame Tussaudes, Baker Street and saw Sherlock Holmes' place. Then we went to Harrod's (again by the tube), where I found a mug for Phyllis and saw some of the most expensive clothes ever! A white shirt with an orange collar was 400 pounds which is $800 and that was on sale! Wow! After finishing there, we got back on the tube and found our restaurant where we were having our farewell dinner.

Following dinner we went out to see the London Eye, Big Ben and Parliament. Let me tell you, once we rounded the corner and saw Big Ben for the last time, it just took your breath away! It was so neat! So we walked toward Big Ben, took a lot of photos and then made our final trip on the tube to return to our hotel. We were completely wiped out. We got our things together, packed and went to sleep.

Happy 4th of July! We'll miss the normal celebrations that occur in the USA and won't see any fireworks! Got up and had a continental breakfast. The rolls we were provided were pretty poor. I got on the tube about 9:15 a.m. and went up to Speaker's Corner at Hyde Park to see it and also the Marble Arch. I then walked south to Harrah's and bought a roll of film for $4.65 pounds. Expensive! I found the memorial for Princess Diana and Dodi Fahyed in the lower level and took photos. Across the street I exchange money for British pounds. I then got on the tube and rode to Leceister Square and bought a 1/2 price ticket for "A Woman In White" by Andrew Lloyd Webber for 7:30 that evening. Lunch with a pint was at Chiquito's for about 10 pounds.

Rode on the tube to the Tower of London, purchased a ticket for this attraction and spent the rest of the afternoon there. The Tower of London is more than a tower, it is the name of the original fortified settlement of London on the Thames. It was originally established by the Romans in 300 AD and was built by the English by William the Conqueror in 1068. It has many towers and walls. The tower also had a moat around it. The White Tower is the biggest original building in the fort and now houses the exhibit of armor and an original chapel. The Bloody Tower is where Sir Walter Raleigh was housed for over 13 years and from where he wrote the History of the World. He was a prisoner there three different times, but on the third time was executed. The Tower of London housed many "traitors" of England and they entered through traitors' gate by way of the river Thames. Two of Henry VIII's wives were imprisoned and executed there: Anne Bolleyn and Katherine Howard.

I headed for Waterloo Road for the Fire Station restaurant for the farewell dinner. On the way I took photos of Southmark Cathedral and the replica of the Golden Hinde. The ship was built as an exact replica of Sir Francis Drake's ship and has sailed all over the world. Our group had an enjoyable dinner together. I rushed away to get on the tube and get to the Palace Theater for the 7:30 p.m. performance of "A Woman in White" by Andrew Lloyd Webber. It was good. The music was great, but the story was a little weak. After the play I stopped at a pub for a pint and then rode the tube back to the hotel. I ran into a few other band members and visited with them about what we all had done during our stay.

Goodbye Europe! This morning we packed our things onto the bus and went to the airport. There we said goodbye to Dermit and Allianna and then went to wait for our flight home. We finally arrived back in Thief River Falls at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday.

We rose at 7:30 a.m. and packed our bags for the airplane ride home. We had a continental breakfast and then boarded a bus to go to Gatway Airport to get on our Delta flight to Atlanta, an 8 hour, 57 minute flight – long! We arrived in Atlanta on time and had to go through Immigration and Customs. We waited one hour for our next flight to Minneapolis-St. Paul. We boarded our plane, but had to wait over 1-1/2 hours for a huge rain storm to pass over the area. We arrived in Minneapolis at 11:15 p.m. Our group then boarded a bus for Thief River Falls.

After serving in the military with the 8th Army, 304 Signal Battalion, which included an 18-month period as a radio teletype in Korea between 1950 and 1952, Charles Doppler joined the American Legion. Doppler said he thought it was a good organization to belong to, and still is. He also said the chaplain at the time put his arm around him and told him he was going to join. Wednesday, July 20, Doppler (center) was presented a certificate recognizing his 50 years of membership in American Legion Gopher Post 440 in Minneapolis and awarded lifetime membership by Dan Cummings (left), commander of Gopher Post 440, and Reuben Mack (right), post chaplain. Doppler currently lives between Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. At one time he owned and operated Doppler Gear Co. in Minneapolis, and Newfolden Machinery in Newfolden. The company did work for several area companies, including Arctic Cat, Polaris, Steiger, and several others. Very few people ever receive the award for being a member of an American Legion for 50 years. In fact, there are only three in Gopher Post 440. Upon receiving the award, Doppler was so pleased he said he couldn't express his thoughts in words.

Senate passes energy bill that extends biodiesel tax incentive

The Minnesota Soybean Growers Association (MSGA) applauds the Senate for recently passing an energy bill that extends the Biodiesel Tax Incentive through 2010 and establishes a Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS) to be met by 2012.

"Minnesota soybean growers thank those in the Senate who saw the importance of this landmark energy legislation that is good for biodiesel and America," said MSGA President Bob Worth, a soybean grower from Lake Benton. "With record oil prices, our entire nation will benefit from this legislation that helps us shift from foreign oil to soybean oil."

Aside from extending the tax incentive, the bill also sets up a RFS requiring the usage of eight billion gallons of renewable fuels per year by 2012. This includes both biodiesel and ethanol.

"We really appreciate the support of Senators Mark Dayton and Norm Coleman in extending the biodiesel tax incentive through December 31, 2010," said Worth. "This bill will not only encourage more people to use biodiesel, it will also offer incentives to farmers who want to build biodiesel plants and retail station owners who would like to use B20 in the future."

Biodiesel offers similar fuel economy, horsepower and torque to petroleum diesel while providing superior lubricity. It is made from soybean oil and is the fastest growing alternative fuel in America today.

Sales tax exemption efforts hit a snag

Last week, another disappointing setback was dealt to Thief River Falls when proposed legislation that would grant the city an exemption to the state's sales tax requirement on building projects, failed to make it out of committee. It's a confusing situation that has become increasingly frustrating.

First, that there is a sales tax at all on construction of buildings to be used for public purpose is confusing. In most situations, locally-generated tax dollars are used to construct public buildings. In essence, then, tax-supported construction projects are being taxed.

Second, that a state agency rejects the intent of prior legislation to grant a sales tax exemption for the construction of the Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA) in Thief River Falls, is outrageous. One piece of legislation should have been enough to convince the Department of Commerce to grant the sales tax exemption. A change in leadership at the department should have no bearing on the issue at all.

One would think that the state would be more than happy not to be asked to contribute to the construction of such a project. Let's face it, despite apparent public perception that the citizens of Minnesota do not support the use of public funds to build stadiums and other sports facilities, there are a lot of groups out there asking for just that. And, many legislators seem willing to make it possible for that to happen - because they say such projects will benefit the state.

REA was built almost entirely with money donated by one individual. Simply because one person has money to donate to a project that would benefit the public at large, is no reason to stick out a hand and ask for a cut. In fact doing so, would have a negative impact on the public benefit being built with that money.

Public officials and legislators need to be encouraged to continue to push for the sales tax exemption on the building. Local officials and legislators have tried several times - too many times to count - to straighten out the mess and get the sales tax exemption for the project. It's worth fighting for. The tax would amount to over $300,000. If you recall from previous stories, a one percent increase in the city's tax levy would generate roughly $17,000, so it would take an incredibly large tax increase in Thief River Falls to pay a tax on this public building, and it's not likely to come from anyone else but taxpayers.

Road work patience

Highway 59 from Thief River Falls south was almost a "four-wheeler" - that is a road so bumpy from poor repairs and new upheavals that only drivers with four-wheel drive could safely navigate over the rough areas. "Four-wheelers" make even the environmentally conscious in the big cities envious of our SUVs and trucks. In other words, when work begins on a "four-wheeler," it's long overdue.

Nevertheless, if you're like me and several people I know, highway maintenance projects always cause us to groan and sometimes curse under our breath. We're busy people - we've got deadlines and timelines to meet, places to be - and we don't like surprises and/or delays. Such events could throw our whole day into a spiral. It's as frustrating as waiting for a train in Thief River Falls, which doesn't have an underpass. It's as frustrating as farm implement slowly pulling out in front of you - the only vehicle for miles - on an otherwise empty highway.

There is another thing I've noticed about road construction projects. From my experience, there are two types of flag-men and women: suntanned teenagers, and senior citizens. Both are relaxed and so...nonchalant...that they don't flinch or seem to care if you're unhappy enough to curse at the road, the projects, the delays, and them. They've got that relaxed air about them that seems to put them above the hustle and bustle of the world. They seem so detached that for those of us who saw the 1960s or part of the '60s the word "Hippy" quickly comes to mind. Yeah, the image that word creates for me makes me smile, too.

So, there it is - necessary, frustrating - and there is absolutely nothing you can do about it...except, take a deep breath and relax, or plan ahead of time to avoid those areas, ride a bike, or maybe become a hippy. You won't freeze to death while you wait in your vehicle, not now, that's for sure. You might cook a little if you don't have an air conditioner, but unless you've got a beat up, old pickup like Tim Lyon (The Lyon's Share, 7/15/05, Northern Watch) and you can't roll down the driver's side window, you'll survive...10-pounds lighter, maybe, but you will survive.

I've heard that patience is a virtue. Road construction projects test our patience, but patience in road construction zones is absolutely necessary.

Sorry for thief

To the Editor:

On my way home from church on Sunday, I drove to Greenwood Cemetery. When I stopped at my husband's grave, I noticed the garden ornament was gone. It was dark green metal, about five feet tall, and the top was shaped like a butterfly. I bought it because of the butterfly. I was angry, but as I drove home I realized that a person who would steal from a cemetery must have a really terrible life.

My sincere sympathy.

Senate declares National Health Center Week

Action raises awareness of services provided by health centers

Senator Norm Coleman has announced that his resolution (SR.31) to declare the week of August 7, 2005, "National Health Center Week" passed by unanimous consent in the Senate. This legislation is intended to increase the public awareness of nonprofit, community-owned health centers across the United States. It will also recognize healthcare providers who contribute to the well-being of their communities by keeping children healthy and in school; as well as helping adults remain productive and on the job. Furthermore, this bill commends health centers for providing cost-effective, high-quality health care to the nation's poor and medically underserved in addition to acting as a vital safety net for health delivery systems in the U.S.

"Health centers are truly American's healthcare safety net, and I am pleased that the Senate has recognized their importance," said Coleman. "Our nationwide network of health centers provides vital services to millions of Americans each year, and they should be commended for the excellent job they do day in and day out. Raising awareness is an important step towards making sure the uninsured have access to quality healthcare."

Minnesota boasts of 18 health centers that met the needs of low-income and medically underserved populations by providing affordable, quality primary health care services. Nationally, there are more than 1,000 such health centers serving an estimated 15 million people in nearly 3,600 communities. Health centers provide care to one out of every seven uninsured individuals, one of every nine Medicaid beneficiaries, one of every seven people of color, and one of every nine rural Americans, all of whom would otherwise lack access to health care.

"Health centers play a key role in Minnesota's health care community," Coleman said. "A good example of the positive impact health centers can have in Minnesota's communities is the North Point Health and Wellness (NPHW) Center, located in North Minneapolis. Last year, more than 50,000 visits were made to NPHW's medical and dental clinics, with approximately two-thirds of their patients on medical assistance, and 14.9 percent with no medical insurance at all. Clearly, this health center is a vital and necessary component of the North Minneapolis community, and I applaud those who have worked hard to make sure the community's residents get the care and medical attention they need."

"Community health centers play a critical role in the public health infrastructure of our country and are a safety net for many uninsured and underinsured," said Gary Cunningham, director of North Point Health and Wellness Center. "This resolution recognizes the critical role that community health centers play in the lives of the less fortunate in our society. For 40 years, community health centers have been providing vital health services to low-income communities throughout the United States. I am pleased that Senator Coleman has played a leadership role along with Senator Durbin in recognizing the important role community health centers play."

Teachers and their revolving door

by Robert M. Shaw
Minnesota Newspaper
Association manager emeritus

A young friend of ours hopes to become a teacher. These days she's taking her practice teaching in a north Minneapolis grade school. She's having a rough time.

The other day she remarked that students talk in class.

"Wait, what did you say?" I asked her. "Talk in class? When I was in school, we weren't allowed to do that. If we talked in our sixth-grade class, Miss Streitz would come down the aisle with a ruler, ask you to hold out your hand, and give you a real good whack on the knuckles. It was entertainment of a sort - broke the monotony. She enforced the rule: no talking in class. So did all the teachers."

"Well," she responded, "they talk in my class. They're allowed to." She said she'd been "having trouble" with a certain boy.

"What do you do about it?" I asked.

She said she calls the principal and he sends the student to a certain room. "The problem is, though," she added, "That some of them like to be sent to the room. They're right back again. Doesn't mean a thing."

She remarked that about half of the new teachers in the United States drop out in the first five years.

I checked that out, and apparently it's true. A University of Pennsylvania professor of education, Richard Ingersoll, in the May issue of NEA Today (the National Education Association magazine) reported that U.S. schools lose 40 to 50 percent of their new teachers in the first five years. About one million teachers, he said, one-third of the total, are in "job transition" every year. Why do they leave? Ingersoll says it's not because of money, but other reasons.

I wondered if one reason was the beating teachers take in the classroom.

Over the years, I've known several friends, good people, who tried teaching but dropped out because, they said, the system made it impossible for them to control students' behavior in the classroom.

I have a young woman relative, a niece's daughter-in-law, who last year taught school for one year in a Chicago suburb. She quit. "I couldn't stand it," she said. "It was chaos. Parents would come right into the school and challenge you."

I was invited a while ago by the daughter of a neighbor to be her "honorary grandpa" on a special day. I saw some good things - there are always good things in schools - but please let me describe one scene in an advanced math class. The teacher, a young man, was explaining a complicated mathematical concept. All students, there were about 10 of them, were listening, trying hard. But one little red-haired boy just out of the teacher's direct sight was deliberately disrupting the class. He smirked, grimaced, looked at the ceiling, tried to get the others to laugh, threw an occasional spitball. What astounded me was that the teacher from time to time turned to the student and soothingly, patiently, almost begged him not to misbehave.

My thoughts, when I think of such matters, turn to Falls High School in International Falls during the 1930s. We had some very good teachers. Throughout the system, there was one iron law: No talking in class, no talking in the halls. I would love to see that little red-haired boy in the advanced math class meet Leo Anderson. Leo was the principal at Falls High. He had a paddle, and the fact was widely known throughout the student body. My brother once was sent to "see Leo." They talked quite civilly, Paul says, for a few minutes. Then Leo asked my brother to bend down and touch his toes. he did, and promptly received a flat blow on his gluteus maximus which, Paul claims, still tingles on a cold winter day.

Some say corporal punishment is cruel, but I will say this: Leo's paddle worked marvelously well. It worked in the same way it works in military boot camps. We had a very good school. We learned a lot. Teachers were not there primarily to create order - order was assumed - but to put subject material from their minds into our minds. The environment demanded respect, and parents supported the system.

The little red-haired boy in the Edina advanced-math class knew who was boss. He was. The parents who marched in and confronted my niece's daughter-in-law knew who was boss. They were. The students in that north Minneapolis school who talk in class and laugh at the pathetic punishment if they misbehave, they know who is boss. They are.

What our public school teachers are forced to endure is, I say, a big and untold story. Why do half of our good, young teachers quit, pensions and all? I say it's because we take away from them the only condition in which learning can flourish: A respectful environment. From my perspective, this is a scandal, but I'm afraid that for many the word has lost its meaning.

Penas votes "Yes" for K-12 education

Minnesota schools will see near record funding increases in the next two years as a result of the balanced budget agreement passed July 13 by the Legislature. The agreement raises overall education spending by $800 million, including a 4 percent basic formula increase each of the next two years.

Rep. Maxine Penas (R-Badger) voted in support of the plan, which allows basic per-pupil funding to grow by $182 in 2006 to total $4,783 and another $191 will be added in 2007, for a total of $4,974 per pupil. At their request, school districts will receive $139 million in new levy authority, providing them the ability to supplement their state aid on the basis of their individual needs.

"Adding more dollars to the per pupil aid formula is crucial," said Penas. "That means new money will go to schools here in northwestern Minnesota."

Local districts will receive significant per pupil increases.

The bill also contains new accountability reforms such as the QComp performance pay initiative for teachers. Districts [illegible] to adopt performance pay [illegible] will receive a funding boost [illegible] participating districts [illegible].

The bill provides $[illegible] million to start a [illegible] program [illegible] [illegible] the effectiveness of different teaching methods.

Other reforms include "Get Ready. Get Credit" programs to help students prepare for college, $11 million to create a Gifted and Talented program that encourages academic excellence, and a compensatory revenue project which will allow school districts to distribute compensatory state aid based on student performance.

Penas said early childhood education gets a step forward with a $104 per-pupil increase in Early Childhood Family Education (ECFE) funding and a $4 million Head Start increase. Another $1 million is included to establish the Minnesota Early Learning Foundation, which will include grants to improve early childhood development programs and help low-income families prepare their children for kindergarten.

Other notable provisions in the bill include $7.5 million for Internet/telecommunications access (Penas authored); $3.3 million for online learning; $23 million for special education; and $100,000 for education administrative districts, which allow schools to share certain administrative tasks as a way to save money.

"Overall, this legislation will strengthen Minnesota's education system," said Penas. "Our students will definitely benefit from these necessary increases."

Deserves Explanation

"Lost, Strayed or Stolen – One Wiley Tindolph, a good looking man of middle age, of pleasing address, good conversationalist, very popular with the fair sex. When last heard of, he was looking for "Booze." Any information as to his whereabouts will be gladly received by his many friends in Thief River Falls. – Thief River Falls Press.'

"The above, taken from The Thief River Falls Press, is somewhat misleading about the person in question, and is deserving of some explanation. The idea of anyone living in the Upper Falls having to go on a trip to get booze is absurd, as many northern end dwellers will testify. Mr. Tindolph has not many of the pleasures here below to cheer his lonely hours and in making up the deficit has a prize terrier that for convenience sake he calls 'Booze,' not to remind him of any of the hours he has spent under the influence of the cup that cheers, for on good authority we are informed he is not guilty of imbibing, but simply as a convenient name. Wiley passed through here Wednesday morning, Booze with him, so we know of what we speak."

FROM THE UPPER FALLS

Thief River Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota

Will Come Up Next Tuesday
Red Lake's Rope Is Getting Shorter

"Next Tuesday the Red Lake county seat case will again come up before Judge Watts at Crookston. Every day sees the rope of Red Lake Falls getting shorter and before a great while we will have them forced to call an election. After Tuesday, Red Lake Falls will have an opportunity to go to the [Minnesota] supreme court, and our attorneys feel confident that if they do they will never even get a hearing, but that their case will be thrown out of court on the first day. They have absolutely no ground upon which to stand."

Everybody Is Coming
Fair Week Will See Large Crowds Here
All the Valley Towns Will Send Large Delegations

"Everywhere the people are talking of coming to Thief River Falls to the county fair on August 9, 10, and 11. Advertising agents have visited all of the towns on the Soo line from Detroit [Lakes] to Emerson and on the Great Northern from Fosston to Greenbush and Crookston to St. Vincent. They report that all are interested in the program which is to be carried out here and that the attendance will be large. A liberal amount of advertising matter has been placed in all of the towns.

"The committee is now at work securing special rates, special trains and better service from the railroads and are meeting with a great deal of success.

"The attractions this year will be far better than ever before, in fact they will be as good as the ordinary circus, and the people who attend will be amused in every way possible."

Had a Narrow Escape

"Crookston Journal: Nicili Lillimoe and John Nelson of Erskine while out driving last Sunday evening met with an accident which was the result of the intoxicated condition the boys were in. They drove over to Brooks, a small village in Red Lake county, and managed to secure liquor although the saloons are supposed to keep closed doors on the Sabbath.

"Although the boys had drunk a goodly supply of that hot and rebellious stuff, they got into their buggy and drove the horses along at a lightning pace. The horses, becoming unmanageable, got beyond their control and they were thrown out and the buggy badly damaged. A party of farmers from Erskine are in town today ascertaining whether or not the saloon keeper can be arrested who sold the boys the liquor."

Sewer Makes Things Bad

"The sewer contractors are now at work in the business portion of the city and to say that it makes it inconvenient is putting it rather mildly. The streets are quite sure to be in rather bad condition for the remaining part of this year and next spring considerable road work will have to be done."

Paved Streets Next

"A large number of the business men of Thief River Falls are very much in favor of having the streets of the business portion of the city paved next year.

"This will soon be the only improvement the city lacks and it is the proper thing to do. Nothing improves the looks of a town like good streets and the sooner the streets are paved the better it will be for the town."

John Biskey Opens New Motel Monday

"John Biskey, proprietor of the new Falls Motel located on Highway 59 at the southeast city limits, announced Monday that the establishment is now open for business. In addition to an apartment for the owner, the motel includes a lobby, with a fireplace and six rental units, each with bath. A central hot water heating plant also is provided to permit year-round operation.

"Construction was started in May, with the general contract carried out by Iver Nelson and Sons, plumbing and heating by Helgenset and electrical wiring by Prior Electric company."

New Eighth St. Span Assured In 1956, Sen. Wiseth Says

"The long-awaited new Eighth Street Bridge to replace the present narrow span will be included in the state highway department's 1956 construction program, State Senator Roy E. Wiseth last week informed Carl Gjernes, president of the city council, following a conference with O. L. Kipp, assistant commissioner of the highway department. Surveys for the project are now under way."

Water In Tindolph Pool Is Still Good

"The Tindolph park pool has been well patronized by swimmers during the past week, and the water is still in good condition, it was announced by Quentin Jones, waterfront director. He warned young swimmers of the danger of using old inner tubes to support them when venturing out into deep water. He pointed out that the patches on the tubes may come off at any time, causing them to lose their buoyancy."

From the Editorial Page

"Although they have been expanded regularly year after year, our city bathing beach facilities are still inadequate. This is especially true of course in seasons of exceptionally hot weather and in recent weeks hot weather has not been the exception.

"The steadily increasing use of our rivers for recreational purposes keeps us reminded of the fact we cannot postpone much longer an extensive stream repair and improvement program. For more than a half a century the channel above the dam has been filling up by siltation and a dredging operation is very much needed. Fortunately this is a program that can be extended over a period of many years and will not necessarily be burdensome in any one year. And a dredging operation, by building up some low lands, can result in some financial recovery.

"An extensive channel improvement program is the type of community project that we can take in stride, one step at a time, but it is high time that we take the first step."

Walleye survival for tournaments is being studied

Walleye caught at Wal-Mart FLW Walleye Tournaments this summer will not only thrill anglers, they'll help researchers study survival rates at catch-and-release tournaments.

FLW Outdoors, a major corporate tournament sponsor, will join the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and four Midwest states in the two-year study, which aims to minimize the effect of tournaments on walleye populations.

"Walleye angling has changed since we last looked at tournament survival," said Jack Wingate, DNR Division of Fish and Wildlife research manager. "This is an excellent example of tournament sponsors working with natural resource professionals for the good of the resource."

The $253,000 study, set to begin this summer, will be implemented by the University of Minnesota and Mississippi State University. Other states involved are Iowa, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Walleye will be studied at 12 Wal-Mart FLW Walleye League Tournaments in the cooperating states. Tournaments will be held in accordance with existing state laws.

Effects of tournaments on walleye populations will be analyzed through computer models using data collected from the 12 live release tournaments. A survey and focus group meetings of anglers, biologists and the industry will be used to determine socially acceptable levels of survival in tournament-caught walleye.

"Through this important cooperative venture, we hope to improve the walleye resource for everyone," said Wingate. "The results of this study will help determine how future tournaments are permitted."

A final study report is expected in December 2007.

DNR QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Q: Weedrollers have become a popular tool for eliminating unwanted vegetation along the shoreline, especially in the Brainerd area. What sort of problems do they cause for fish and water quality?

A: Mechanical devices, such as weedrollers, are commonly used to control aquatic vegetation in public waters and their use is regulated by the DNR through the issuing of permits. Not all sites are suitable for the operation of these devices, however. Although they can be an effective method of controlling vegetation, these machines can have a negative impact on lakes, which is an area of concern when it comes to lake management. The potentially harmful affects of the loss of aquatic plants are felt by a wide variety of species, including waterfowl, invertebrates, amphibians and fish. Specifically, weedrollers can decrease water clarity by displacing sediment and destroy fish spawning beds and nursery areas, and potentially impact recreational activities. Lakeshore owners should be aware of these tradeoffs when considering using such devices. A proper permit should be obtained before using any mechanical vegetation removal device.

- Wayne Mueller, DNR aquatic plant specialist

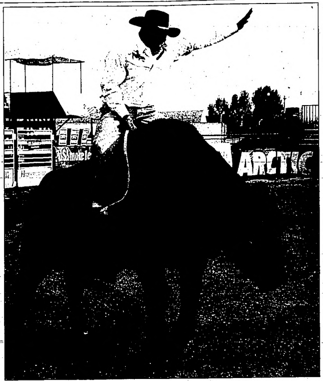
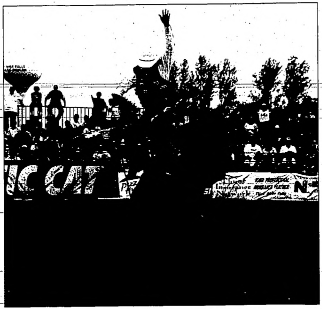
Rodeo stock for the 2005 edition of Thunder on Hooves, known as the "Bad Boys," was provided by contractor Jerry Nelson. Three of Nelson's bulls are currently ranked in the PBR top 50.



Though he's been ridden as an entrant in countless parades, prior to Saturday night, Ole the Ox had not been successgully ridden in previous Thunder on Hooves appearances. That changed Saturday, when the 10-year-old bull met his match in Griffin Newland.

Jim Sharp maintains a tight grip, while his opponent, a bull named Red Hot Chili Pepper, feverishly attempts to buck him to the ground. Sharp competed in the second night of Thunder on Hooves Bullride in Thief River Falls.



Evan Rasch, riding the bull named Baby Mash, was the first to successfully ride a bull during Saturday night's edition of Thunder on Hooves.

Construction starts

No sooner had all parties signed off on the agreements than construction at the future site of Wal-Mart Thief River Falls began. Crews have been moving quite a bit of dirt at the site since. The super center store is expected to open in the spring or summer of 2006.

City moves ahead with airport plans

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Years from now, what will the Thief River Falls Regional Airport look like? At its July 26 meeting, the Thief River Falls City Council moved one step closer to finding the answer to that question.

During the meeting, the council authorized Public Works Director Ron Lindberg to submit a grant request to the Federal Aviation Administration. That $150,000 request would enable the airport to develop its master and layout plans.

At a March 2004 council meeting, Lindberg said airport master plans are usually sufficient for 20 or 25 years. The latest airport master plan was determined in 1992 or 1993. However, he noted that future expansion by Digi-Key, along with the recent crosswind runway addition and adjacent property acquisition, needed to be added to the plan.

Updating the master and layout plans would be the first step to see if any future expansion is justified at the Thief River Falls Regional Airport, Lindberg said at the March 2004 council meeting.

City Council approved Tax Increment Financing (TIF) District No. 1-6 and adoption of the TIF plan. The district includes Meadowlark Estates Second Addition, which is located southeast of Northland Community and Technical College.

In a TIF district, the additional property taxes generated by a development are used to pay for infrastructure.

Midwest Minnesota Community Development Corporation is developing the district. Its cost of improvements is estimated at $187,000. The estimated annual tax increment is $35,175 for that area in which 12 parcels will be developed into single-family, owner-occupied housing.

Prior to the council meeting, a public hearing was held about the TIF district. Only one resident attended that public hearing.

The council approved a rate of $500 per day for the lease of the main floor or upper concourse of Ralph Engelstad Arena (REA).

Mayor Dale Wennberg stepped down as chairperson for this portion of the meeting as he is the interim REA general manager. Vice Mayor

Goodridge wants recycling program

County Commissioners authorize purchase of recycling containers for program

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Pennington County Commissioners authorized the purchase of two recycling containers for the city of Goodridge recycling program, during the Pennington County Board's July 26 meeting.

Howard Person, Pennington County solid waste officer, told commissioners that he had received a request from Goodridge Mayor Bob Homme, stating that the city of Goodridge is interested in beginning a recycling program and would like to receive recycling containers to get started. The request called for one recycling roll-off container and one container for cardboard, costing $5,500 and $1,600 respectively. The city of Goodridge will pay for the hauling of recycled material to Thief River Falls.

According to Person, the cardboard recycling container will be located at the Municipal Liquor Store in Goodridge. The location of the other container has not been determined, but it will collect, mixed metal, glass, newsprint and types one and two plastic.

Person noted that both containers will be located in such a way that they will be accessible 24 hours a day. He added that Pennington County will now offer recycling in all three of its communities.

Solid Waste Items

• The board approved Pennington County resident Russ Holten's system for handling waste water. Person and Andrea Hedemann, Pennington County Soil and Water Conservation District employee and water plan coordinator, met with the board regarding a Pollution Control Agency (PCA) call to Holten's residence. The call was in response to an oil spill.

According to Person, the PCA believed that Holten was draining waste water from work trucks into a wetland, without the necessary permits. It was determined later that the land was not a wetland and according to Person, Holten's system for handling waste water was more than acceptable in regard to safety.

Hedemann stated that she viewed Holten's system for waste water and was impressed with the steps he took to make it environmentally safe.

• Person reported that Finstad construction will soon begin construction on the roof of the the solid waste transfer station's office space.

The board authorized a request for a secretarial disaster declaration for crops in Pennington County. Person, a technical adviser in agricultural production systems for the University of Minnesota Extension Service, stated that he met with the Farm Service Agency regarding the crops in Pennington County. He estimated that half of the first hay cutting was lost due to bad weather and while the second cutting was good in quality, it was poor in quantity.

Governor seeks disaster designation

Several area counties included in request

Governor Tim Pawlenty has requested that 17 Minnesota counties, mainly in northwest and north central Minnesota, be declared agriculture disaster areas due to excess rain, hail and high winds from the first week of May through mid-July. A declaration would allow affected farmers to receive assistance from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, specifically the low-interest Emergency Loan Program administered by the Farm Service Agency. Average crop loss in the affected counties is approximately 39 percent. Preliminary reviews value the damaged crops at nearly $217 million.

"While some parts of our state are seeing bumper crops, others have been severely impacted by harsh weather," Governor Pawlenty said. "One-fifth of all jobs in Minnesota are related to agriculture and it's important to keep our farmers and related workers going through this tough stretch."

Included in the declaration request are Aitkin, Beltrami, Benton, Clearwater, Dakota, Grant, Itasca, Kittson, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Mille Lacs, Pennington, Roseau, Traverse, Washington and Wilkin counties.

Thunderstorms with heavy rains, hail and some high winds have plagued much of the northwest and north central areas of Minnesota from the first week in May through the middle of July. Kittson, Roseau and Marshall counties have received as much as 12 to 20 inches of moisture representing more than a 50 percent increase in the normal precipitation. Some fields in these counties, as well as Pennington, Clearwater, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods, Itasca, Aitkin and Koochiching, have not been dry enough to plant.

Corn and soybeans are the crops most consistently affected by the excess moisture.

In the metro area, Dakota and Washington counties have numerous vegetable farmers who have suffered losses of their first planting of vegetable crops due to the excessively wet conditions in May.

More exhibits and events for Barn Again!

Numerous events and activities scheduled at Village during the month of August

In a continuing celebration of the importance of barns in northwestern Minnesota, several exhibits are scheduled at Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village in Thief River Falls during the month of August.

"Barn Again! Celebrating An American Icon," is a Smithsonian Traveling exhibition. Specifically, it is a five-kiosk traveling exhibit that tells the history of American barns from the turn of the 20th century to the present. In conjunction with this exhibit, local organizers have planned numerous activities, events and exhibits that enhance the experience.

Activities and displays in July included the grand opening, aerial farm photos, gardening and crops exhibit, fiddler contest and quilt exhibit. Activities and exhibits during the month of August will include a farm toys exhibit, private toy exhibit, a performance by "Back Behind the Barn Boys" at Hartz Park, a women in agriculture exhibit, an old-time dance bands exhibit, honey processing and candle making demonstrations, and a grand finale on August 20 called the "Saturday Night Barn Dance," which is a musical and theater group performance.

August activities and exhibits include the following:

Valley Home Assisted Living facility breaks ground for memory-loss unit

by April Scheinoha
Reporter

Valley Home Assisted Living broke ground Friday for a unit to help patients with memory loss. It is expected it will take eight to 12 months to construct the 24-unit facility.

"We're excited to be doing this as there really is no other memory-loss, assisted-living facility in northwest Minnesota," said Lynn Geller, Valley Home administrator.

The facility is being constructed with the help of a $3.5 million guaranteed loan funded by United States Department of Agriculture Rural Development and provided by Northern State Bank of Thief River Falls.

"I'm really happy that we can do this," said Bill Sininger, community programs director for Rural Development in Minnesota.

"Without that, we'd still probably be in the room, working out a solution," said John Tofte, vice chairperson of the Valley Home Board.

"We've waited a long time for this to happen," Geller said.

"We're very, very pleased to see this happening," Tofte said.

Several local government officials were on hand for the groundbreaking ceremony. "This is an exciting day for Thief River," said Mayor Dale Wennberg.

"Valley Home has always had a tremendous reputation for taking care of their people," said Sen. LeRoy Stumpf. "I presume this will be a continuation of that good care you're giving to your people."

Also present for the groundbreaking ceremony were Valley Home residents. "We hope that we help them feel welcome as we have been made to feel," said Beth Scholin, president of the Valley Home Residents' Council.

According to the Mayo Clinic, more than four million elderly Americans suffer from Alzheimer's disease. By 2050, it is anticipated that number will quadruple since more people will be living to be in their 80s and 90s.

Members of the Valley Home Board, representatives of Kraus-Anderson Construction, the president of the Valley Home Residents' Council and government leaders in Thief River Falls broke ground on Friday, July 29, for a 24-unit facility for individuals suffering from memory loss. The facility is expected to be finished in eight to 12 months. According to the Mayo Clinic, more than four million Americans suffer from Alzheimer's disease.

Minnesota's new legal limit is 0.08 – don't blow it

Minnesota law enforcement officers can now arrest motorists for driving while intoxicated (DWI) for an alcohol-concentration level of 0.08 and above – or below, if they can prove alcohol caused a motorist to make driving errors. The new level became effective Monday; the bill was passed by the Minnesota Legislature and signed by Gov. Tim Pawlenty in May 2004.

The Minnesota Department of Public Safety Office of Traffic Safety (OTS) reported a significant decrease in alcohol-related traffic deaths in 2004 from 2003. Last year, 31 percent of all traffic deaths (177 of 567) were alcohol-related compared to 39 percent (255 of 655) in 2003. OTS attributed the decrease to continuous, stepped-up enforcement of impaired driving and public education.

"The 0.08 law is another tool we can use to make Minnesota roads safer," said Public Safety Commissioner Michael Campion. "We will continue dedicated law enforcement of impaired driving."

Despite the reduction in impaired driving deaths, OTS officials pointed out that in the five-year period of 2000 to 2004, more than 168,000 people were arrested for DWI in Minnesota and there were 1,127 alcohol-related deaths at an estimated economic impact of nearly $1.2 billion. Overall, there are 447,315 Minnesota residents with a DWI on record. One in every nine persons in Minnesota with a driving record has a DWI – and 192,448 or one in 20 has two or more incidents.

The 0.08 law has resulted in progress in neighboring states: Wisconsin had a nearly 14 percent decrease in alcohol-related deaths a year after passing the 0.08 law. North Dakota's alcohol-related deaths also decreased, and both of these states' average alcohol-concentration levels of arrested drivers decreased.

The passage of the 0.08 law guaranteed Minnesota nearly $20 million that was being withheld by the federal government for not passing the law before 2003. The money will be used for building and improving state and local roads.

Unauthorized signs and objects not permitted in state highway right-of-ways

The Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn/DOT) reminds citizens that state law prohibits the placement of unauthorized signs and other objects in state highway right-of-ways.

Highway right-of-way typically extends beyond the top of the back slope in rural areas. In urban areas, the right-of-way varies but is typically just beyond the sidewalk if present.

During the summer season, there is a significant increase in advertising signs and items for sale placed illegally in the highway right-of-way. Illegally placed signs and objects on the roadway can restrict the visibility of drivers, especially at intersections, and divert the persons' attention away from their primary task of operating a motor vehicle safely. Encroachment of highway right-of-way is considered a misdemeanor violation.

Mn/DOT personnel may remove any signs within the right-of-way without notice.

For information regarding roadway regulations, right-of-way boundaries, regulations for signs beyond the right-of-way, or where to find removed materials, contact the Mn/DOT office in Bemidji at 218-755-2942 or in Crookston at 218-281-6051.

Water safety in the Land of 10,000 Lakes

by Gillette Children's Specialty Healthcare staff

It's hot, and record numbers of Minnesotans are cooling off in one of the state's many lakes, rivers and backyard pools. As temperatures rise, so has the number of drowning fatalities statewide. In fact, by mid-July, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) reported the number of drownings had reached a four-year high.

To date, 26 people have drowned in Minnesota in 2005; 11 of those deaths occurred in the first half of July. The DNR also reported 17 boating-related fatalities. In 2004, 30 people drowned statewide and there were 15 boating accident deaths.

Summer drowning victims typically fall into one of three categories: small children who lack supervision or swimming skills; young people who try to swim beyond their abilities; or older people who have a medical problem while in the water. Alcohol was involved in about 30 percent of drowning deaths in 2004.

When seconds matter

When someone is underwater, time is of the essence. Drowning victims usually lose consciousness after two minutes. After four minutes, they sustain irreversible brain damage. Even immediate rescue doesn't ensure a happy ending – as many as 20 percent of survivors have severe, permanent neurological disabilities.

Melissa, for example, was 5 years old when she tripped and fell off a dock. Even though her mother pulled her from the lake immediately, Melissa's lungs had filled with water. Melissa sustained a brain injury that left her unable to walk or communicate.

"Children who experience near-drowning episodes typically sustain very severe injuries, and if they survive, they face devastating consequences," said Mark E. Gormley Jr., M.D., a pediatric rehabilitation and medicine specialist at Gillette Children's Specialty Healthcare in St. Paul. Gormley is an expert in caring for children with brain injuries. In addition to treating near-drownings, he has treated children with broken bones, amputations and traumatic brain and spinal cord injuries resulting from boating, diving and water-sport accidents.

"Near-drowning victims often incur anoxic brain injuries that result from a lack of oxygen," said Gormley. "These injuries cause the brain to shut down and can send the body into a coma."

He added that, in general, children with anoxic brain injuries are the most difficult to manage because the whole brain is affected. "There are no healthy parts of the brain to compensate for the injured parts," Gormley said.

The likelihood of recovery from a near-drowning episode depends on how long a person is deprived of oxygen. Recovery also depends on how long a person is in a coma. Patients with favorable prognoses usually awake within one week. But they often have problems with coordination, memory, restlessness, muscle tightness, seizures, paralysis, balance and communication.

When it comes to keeping people safe, these tips from the American Red Cross can help:

- Never leave a child alone near water, no matter how shallow it is. Children have drowned in bathtubs, toilets and buckets of water.
- Make sure you and your children know how to swim.
- Always swim with a buddy and only in supervised areas.
- Make sure you are aware of the water's depth when diving.
- Know how to recognize and respond to emergencies.
- Before boating, know the basics of boating safety. Remember that by law, children must wear Coast Guard-approved life jackets while in boats.

The power outage was reported at about 1:30 p.m., and power was restored at about 2:20 p.m. to the area that included Riverside Terrace and continued north to Fourth Street.

The outage was caused by a fitting that blew up and tripped a breaker, according to Utilities Director Arlo Rude. The power outage was similar to one in late June affecting those same customers. However, a cable blew up in that instance.

World Breastfeeding Week observed Aug. 1-7

Submitted by Inter-County Nursing Service

"Breastfeeding and Family Foods: Loving and Healthy-Feeding Other Foods While Breastfeeding is continued," is the 2005 theme for the World breastfeeding Week at the World Alliance for breastfeeding Action (WABA). Exclusive breastfeeding for the first six months followed by continued breastfeeding for up to two years or beyond is recommended. The emphasis is making the transition from fully breastfeeding to breastfeeding and eating with the rest of the family, in a loving and caring way.

"Human milk is the preferred feeding for all infants, including premature and sick newborns. It is recommended that breastfeeding continue for at least the first 12 months, and thereafter for as long as mutually desired," according to the American Academy of Pediatrics Breastfeeding Policy Statement: Breastfeeding and the Use of Human Milk. Pediatrics Vol. 115 No. 2 February 2005, pp. 496-506 (doi:10.1542/peds.2004-2491) http://aappolicy.aappublications.org/cgi/content/abstract/pediatrics;115/2/496

La Leche League, Why is LLL necessary? breastfeeding is an instinctual and natural act, but it is also an art that is learned day by day.

The reality is that almost all women can breastfeed, have enough milk for their babies and learn how to overcome problems both large and small. It is almost always simply a matter of practical knowledge and not a question of good luck. http://www.lalecheleague.org/FAQ/necessary.html

"A study of working well moms, CIGNA's corporate lactation program for employees who breastfeed, revealed a savings of $240,000 annually in health care expenses for breastfeeding mothers and their children. In addition, a savings of $60,000 annually is realized through reduced absenteeism among breastfeeding mothers at CIGNA. The study also found that pharmacy costs for breastfed children are lower, because they require 62 percent fewer prescriptions." UCLA Study of CIGNA Corporate Lactation Program proves that helping working moms breast feed is good business. More information can be found at http://www.prnewswire.com/cgi-bin/micro_stories.pl?ACCT=149478&TICK=CI20&STORY=/www/story/06-15-2000/0001244067&EDATE=Jun+15,+2000.

Breastfeeding Can Lead to Lower Adult Cholesterol Levels "After studying over 1,500 adolescents and reviewing 37 other studies about infant feeding styles and blood cholesterol levels researchers found that adults who had been breast fed as infants had lower cholesterol levels than those who had not been breast fed. The average cholesterol reduction in the adults who had been breastfed was just below 10 milligrams per deciliter. A reduction of this amount in all adults could reduce coronary heart disease by approximately 10 percent," according to "September 2002 Pediatrics.

breastfeeding Reduces the Risk for Obesity "A study of over 32,000 children found a 30 percent reduction in the risk for obesity of exclusively breastfed children at three years of age. Other evidence suggests that the protective effect of exclusive breastfeeding on obesity should persist and possibly increase throughout the breast fed individual's life. This study establishes formula-feeding as a risk factor for obesity," according to the June 8, 2002 edition of "The Lancet."

Kids learn to feel fit and fine

Bryana Vigness

Michael Bengtson

Until Aug. 5, local kids can participate in Feelin' Fit 'n Fine, which is being offered by public health agencies. Through the program, kids are able to practice healthy behaviors, participate in activities and win prizes.

For the program, kids receive a scorecard. Each time they complete a qualifying activity for an hour or more, they can have a square initialed and the activity listed in the square. Once all the squares are filled, they mail or bring in the scorecard, so it can be entered into a weekly drawing. At that time, they can pick a prize from a treasure chest.

The local winners at Inter-County Nursing Service in Thief River Falls were for week five Bryana Vigness and for week six Michael Bengtson.

CCC announces new LDP application form

Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) has announced the availability of a new Loan Deficiency Payment (LDP) application. The new form, CCC-633 EZ LDP agreement, streamlines the LDP agreement application process.

The LDP agreement must be completed prior to the loss of beneficial interest (title, control and risk of loss) in any commodity grown on the farm(s). It may be completed any time after acreage reports are filed for all forms in which the producer has a crop interest. Each individual producer or entity must complete a separate agreement form. Joint producer agreements are not permitted.

The LDP agreement will include all farms and all eligible crops grown on those farms based on producer entity farming interests. The LDP agreement must be filed in the county Farm Service Agency (FSA) office that maintains the producer farm records.

When requesting payment, producers who have completed the CCC-633 EZ LDP agreement must file a CCC-633 EZ Request for LDP. The Request for LDP can include any quantity already harvested, up to the maximum eligible quantity as determined by the local county FSA committee (excluding previously loaned quantities and previous LDP application quantities). Requests for LDP must be filed in the county FSA office where the farm acreage reports are filed, and received on or before the final loan availability date for the applicable commodity. Each individual or entity requesting payment must complete a separate form. Joint producer payment applications are not permitted.

The LDP rate is based on the date the properly completed Request for LDP is received in the county FSA office that maintains the farm records for the farm that produced the commodity. If beneficial interest is not maintained on the date the request form is received by the FSA county office, the LDP rate will be based on the date that beneficial interest was lost.

Previously filed CCC-709 Field Direct LDP applications are valid for the 2005 crop year. However, all producers are encouraged to complete the new CCC-633 EZ LDP agreement in order to maintain eligibility for 2005-crop LDPs.

Additional information about the new application and other LDP requirements is available by calling the Pennington County FSA Office at 681-1612, ext. 2.

It's Back to School... And, Back to Bed

Are your kids getting enough rest?

The first few weeks of school can be hard for children and their parents - especially as they try to get back into routine of early to bed, early to rise.

"Making new friends, meeting a new teacher and learning new, challenging information can be stressful for children. These changes can be further aggravated by being tired," said Jennifer Groos, MD, pediatrician at Blank Children's Hospital.

Almost two-thirds of elementary-age children and nearly all adolescents have some sort of sleep deprivation. Besides feeling tired, lack of sleep also leads to poor concentration, lower academic performance, and a weakened immune system. It can even affect your child's mood and behavior.

"One of the first things to do for a child who isn't getting enough sleep is to get them to bed earlier," said Dr. Groos. "It is important to start re-directing your child's sleep schedule for the new school year well before they have to actually get up earlier."

To help your child get to bed and fall asleep earlier, a bedtime routine can be very helpful. Have your child brush their teeth, wash their face and put on their pajamas, then do a bedtime activity, such as reading a calming story or singing a lullaby, can help ready them for sleep. They will get used to the routine as a signal for going to bed, instead of you having to tell them that it is bedtime.

Another important key to your helping your child get enough sleep is to limit the amount of TV, computer, and video game time before bed. Violent or stressful themes can cause nightmares and make it hard for your child to fall asleep. Also, do not allow a TV in your child's bedroom because this has been shown to cause children to go to bed later and get less sleep.

Most importantly for your child's sleep, you should pay attention to your child. If they act cranky or are having trouble paying attention, then they may need more sleep. "Ask your child if they feel tired in the morning or how they slept," said Dr. Groos. "Sometimes the key to gauging if your child is getting enough sleep or not is your child."

How much sleep does your child need?

1 - 3 Months
Sixteen or more hours a day, broken up with the longest period being no more than five hours at a time

4 - 7 Months
Three to fives hours of sleep during the day in two to three naps and 10 to 12 hours at night waking up about 2 times for feeding

8 - 12 Months
Average 13 hours of sleep including two daytime naps

1 - 3 Years:
10 to 12 hours at night with naps tapering off with two naps the first year down to short and sporadic naps at 3 years, as naps fade off, an earlier bedtime may be tried to ensure a well-rested child.

3 - 5 Years:
10 to 12 hours a night, about half stop naps completely by age 4 and the rest are done with naps by age 6

6 - 18 Years:
Eight to 12 hours a night; every child is different, so pay attention to signs of tiredness and try to encourage going to bed earlier; be clear that being crabby is not allowed because of tiredness and as children get older and start to make their own decisions they must become responsible for the amount of sleep they decide to get

LHS new student orientation scheduled this month

Annually, the counseling office at Lincoln High School (LHS) offers an orientation for all new students. Typically, the majority of new students are incoming freshmen.

These orientation sessions are scheduled from Aug. 16-19. Those sessions are set for:

- Tuesday, Aug. 16 – 10:30 a.m., 1 p.m., 2:30 p.m. and 7 p.m.

- Friday, Aug. 19 – 1 p.m.

All students and their parents who are new to LHS this fall are invited to attend. These sessions are scheduled in the LHS career center or auditorium. Signs will direct attendees to the proper room.

A session takes about 75 to 90 minutes. It covers the student's schedule, locker number, lunch number and tour of the building, etc.

Homeowners can have well water tested

Pennington County Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD) will hand out bottles this month to homeowners wanting their private well water tested for nirates and bacteria. Homeowners can pick up bottles at the SWCD office from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Aug. 23 through 25. Bottles will be handed out on a first come, first serve basis due to the limited number of bottles.

The samples must be returned to the SWCD office the morning of Aug. 26 to be sent to a certified lab for testing. Water needs to be collected within 30 hours of testing to ensure reliable results. It is recommended that the sample is taken just before it is brought to the SWCD. The cost is $10.

Routine testing of private well water is beneficial to the homeowner as bacteria and nitrates are two good indicators of any contamination in the water supply.

If a strong interest is shown, more clinics will be conducted in the future. For more information, contact Andrea Hedemann, Pennington County water plan coordinator, at 683-7075.

Dinner theater production set for Aug. 20

Highway Bill will help many MN cities

Senator Norm Coleman said that he was proud to have been able to specifically secure $70 million for key Minnesota highway projects and enthusiastically supported $3 billion in funding over the next five years for Minnesota's transportation needs, including $7 million for northwestern Minnesota roads and transportation projects in the Highway Bill poised to pass Congress this week. Overall, Minnesota will receive an increase of 46 percent, the second highest increase in the country, resulting in significant new road construction and thousands of new jobs statewide, due in part to a change Coleman championed last year in the funding formula that previously penalized ethanol-producing states. The Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy for Users (SAFETEA-LU), known as H.R. 3, which provides $286.5 billion over five years to improve transportation infrastructure throughout the United States, is designed to reduce traffic congestion, make state roads safer, and create thousands of good paying jobs across the country.

For the City of Moorhead, the Highway Bill will provide $5 million in funding for the I-94/34th Street project. This funding will be used to improve access to I-94 from 35th Street as well as increase its safety by relocating the interchange away from the railroad crossing.

"It is easy to see the positive impact this funding will have on Moorhead's families," said Coleman. "By revamping the current system to move a key interchange away from a railroad crossing, this project will give parents and families the piece of mind that everything is being done to make sure their children get to and from school as safely as possible. The expansion will also help accommodate the needs of this growing community and make way for future development."

The Highway Bill will also provide $2 million to upgrade an existing transportation corridor in Polk, Pennington, and Marshall counties to provide an increased carrying capacity of 10 tons. The route is a critical shipping corridor for major industries in northwestern Minnesota, including the cities of Roseau and Warroad.

"Upgrading the carrying capacity of this vital corridor is a big boon to businesses in northwest Minnesota that use these roads to transport their goods," Coleman added. "Providing the quickest, most efficient means of travel for industry is a great way to ensure sustained economic growth in Minnesota."

Today, thirty-four percent of major roads in the United States are in poor or mediocre condition; 27 percent of bridges nationwide are structurally deficient or functionally obsolete; and 36 percent of the nation's urban rail vehicles and maintenance facilities are in substandard or poor condition. The average traveler who drives during peak hours is estimated to spend $1,160 a year, and rush hours have increasingly cost commuters an extra 18 minutes over a three-year period from 1997 and 2000. Annually, congestion costs American drivers $76 billion in lost productivity and wasted motor fuel, 3.6 billion hours of delay each year, and 5.7 billion gallons of wasted motor fuel.

"I think all signs are pointing toward improved commuting times, increased safety, and healthier highways and roadways for all of Minnesota," added Coleman. "As a whole, this report will help keep our roads safe and economic growth strong, creating thousands of new, good paying jobs in Minnesota alone. Making critical improvements to our infrastructure is absolutely vital if Minnesota is to remain competitive in an increasingly global economy, particularly for a state like ours that is both an interior state and exports a high volume of goods."

In addition to addressing roadway and transit concerns and infrastructure, the Highway Bill will create a better economic outlook for the country and communities alike. For every $1 billion invested in highways and transit, well over 47,000 jobs are created. The bill will now head back to both chambers for final approval before heading to the President's desk to be signed into law.

Northern Minnesota offers abundant natural beauty

Northern Minnesota is about as landlocked as you can get - if you forget about Lake Superior on the eastern edge of the state. Last weekend, I traveled up North Shore Drive for a wedding and had a chance to explore Minnesota's nautical corner.

The breeze off Lake Superior keeps the shore cool no matter how sweltering the weather is up on the prairie. During winter, the big lake lops off the lower 15 degrees of the temperature spectrum, allowing dozens of plants and trees to flourish near the shore which would freeze out only a few miles to the west.

Seagulls screech just as they do at any ocean beach. Seagulls are sort of the pigeons of the sea; they might be considered beautiful if they were rare and elusive, but they are neither, so they qualify as a nuisance.

I haven't seen anybody swimming in Lake Superior. The water is clear, but cold, around 60 degrees. The turquoise tint of the waves makes the water look even colder, as if diving in would gain you admission into some exclusive club of fat old men.

Sandy beaches are few and far between. For most of the length of the North Shore, the waves beat against large rocks and cliffs. People who want to water ski apparently go elsewhere, for the lake has been empty of recreational boats all weekend.

The Sawtooth Mountains, so old that they have worn down to mere hills, rise up out of the lake to the northwest. Small rivers, colored root beer by mineral deposits, rush down the forested mountains to the lake over crashing waterfalls and through impressive gorges.

Superior's waves are substantial enough to hypnotize one into a daze for 20 minutes or so as they come in, one by one, some bigger than others, some hitting the rocks with great force, others fizzling, one in 40 splashing water inland far enough to make one jump back a bit.

Something about the endless crashing of waves stirs one to think the same thoughts one gets when seeing the layers of rock which first built up, then wore down to form the Grand Canyon.

Those thoughts have to do with one's inconsequentiality. These waves have been crashing here for thousands of years and will probably crash on for thousands more, carving out the rocks, [illegible] the cliffs. Whether I am here to watch or not makes no difference.

These are not thoughts one thinks while caught in traffic in the suburbs of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

I suspect those thoughts are why people head up to the North Shore for a getaway, even though the water is too cold for swimming or water skiing. Exposure to the raw force of nature both invigorates one's body and relaxes one's psyche.

Naturally, when you have beautiful scenery, hotels and resorts pop up with every amenity known to man. My room is 50 yards from the crashing waves of the lake, but the primal effect of those waves is dulled a bit by the cable television, hot tub, wireless internet, indoor pool, weight room, gourmet restaurant and coffee shop.

Oh, there are gift shops galore, too. Seems like no scenic location is complete without expensive sweatshirts, smelly candles, foofy jellies, stuffed animals and dozens of other items, 95 percent of which have no relevance to the scenery outside the door.

The function of the gift shops, I suspect, is to allow people to purchase part of the feeling of being close to nature and bring it back to the rat race with them. Trouble is, people seem to spend more time in the gift shops and restaurants than they do in the natural surroundings.

So it is with human nature - a beautiful place, a beautiful thing, a beautiful idea - once discovered and accepted by the masses, becomes so encrusted by human attempts to improve on it that it disappears.

Fortunately, Lake Superior is large enough and remote enough to absorb most of what man has thrown at it thus far.

Deer Park Garden Club holds tour

Deer Park Garden Club held its annual July tour, which was scheduled by Michelle Prestebak.

Six of the club members from the Goodridge area were selected for the tour. It was noted that flowers are known to lift a person's spirit and that is what sharing the garden is all about.

The 1 p.m. tour began at the Eddy and Loretta Stucy farm. The yard featured many perennials and annuals, as well as a large vegetable garden. A trellis of vibrant clematis took center stage and made a pretty view at her front entry.

The second stop for the tour was at the Brad and Lana Nelson farm. Lana's raised flower bed, which is surrounded by natural stone, made for a dramatic focal point. Two other flower beds added interest. The hanging baskets and containers of blooming annuals made a big impact around the house.

The third stop, west of Highlanding, was at the Joe Jagol farm and Margie Coan. The Highlanding river added a dimension to their backyard display. She had a beautiful vegetable garden and many colorful flower beds. Small sculptures were placed among the foliage and flowers. Stepping stones added interest to her display.

The fourth stop, which took the tour north, was at the Allen and Stacy Englund farm. She is a young novice gardener with a green thumb. She had many creative ideas and a favorite flower in her yard.

The fifth stop was at the Tim and Michelle Prestebak farm. Many new varieties were added to her massive color palette. In her huge flower beds were interesting sculptures and stepping stones. A trellis of wrought iron and hanging baskets of flowers blended in with the color and surroundings.

The sixth stop was at the Trent and Marilyn Stanley farm. A massive boulder-strewn slope in front of their house and along side their garage and driveway created an awesome statement. The very large stones of various shapes and height were placed to look very natural in its surroundings. Future plans are in progress. Three wrought-iron sculptures placed behind three whiskey barrels created a focal point on the east side of their house. The sidewalk led the way to the screened-in gazebo, which connects the house with a breeze-way.

The tired and hungry group was served a buffet luncheon by hostess Marilyn Stanley in the gazebo.

Enjoying the tour were Loraine Hamann, Lana Chervestad, Helen Chervestad, Loretta Stucy, Arlene Prestebak, Marilyn Stanley, Michelle Prestebak, Viola Prestegaard, Margie Coan, Stacy Englund and Ethel Wiseth.

The Aug. 9 road trip tour to Bergeson Nursery was discussed. Michelle stated everyone will receive final information soon.

Farm Management Minute

Is it time for a change?

by Doug Fjerstad
FBM Instructor, Fosston

I have been teaching farm management for 26 years in the Fosston area and have helped several farms make enterprise changes over the years. I have seen producers who are not satisfied with what they are doing but would like to stay in agriculture. Sometimes it is a labor issue where the workload is too intense and the owners are getting burned out. Normally, when things aren't going well financially is when they start looking for something different. Sometimes producers think the grass looks greener on the other side of the fence and would like to try something that their neighbor is doing.

One of the first things I analyze on a farm that is considering a change is the kind of buildings on the farm. Then I ask the producer whether it could be a good livestock farm. Do they have any pastureland or is there any available? If we make a certain type of change, what kind of equipment do we need? We check to see what kind of experience the producer has and what are their interests. Sometimes we find that they really don't need to make a complete enterprise change, but they need to make some modifications within the existing operation. I also review with the producer whether additional equipment would help with any of the anticipated changes.

By helping the producer to stand on the outside of his farm and see where he wants to be down the road, we can begin to establish goals and set priorities for reaching these goals. Once goals have been established, they need to keep updating and revising their long-term goals as changes occur. We need to discuss the proposed changes with their lender to incorporate their financial expertise into the plan. As farm management instructors, our goal is to help producers make sound short- and long-term business decisions, especially if or when they're considering enterprise changes.

For more information on farm business management, contact an instructor at 1-800-959-6282.

QUESTION OF THE MONTH

Why can't we have a longer time on the computer?

Currently the Thief River Falls Public Library has a one-hour limit on computer usage per day. Many libraries our size have a 15-minute to half-hour limit. Some have a half-hour limit, but you can extend it by paying for additional time. Other libraries allow you an allotted amount of time and then you need to get off and get back in line for a chance at the computer. The usage on the current PCs has been ranging from 75 to 98 percent usage daily. Usage is figured by the number of people on the computer during the day divided by the hours in a day that the computers are available divided further by the number of public workstations. This means these computers are in high demand. Decreasing the time allotment per day has been discussed, but that would be difficult for those people doing research on the computers or taking tests. Since they are so popular, it is oftentimes difficult to get people to give up their PC to the person who has been waiting for it. That means the next person is sometimes shorted of their time when the library closes. Spacewise, the library is at its capacity for PC units and cannot fit any more within the current building to alleviate this problem.

...The Story of the Empress of Ireland

An Omen in the Clouds
The Empress of Ireland Sails past
Cap a l'Original

this Goliath
smitten by the tiniest of coals a collier bearing anthracite cheapest of sling shots felling this sea giant now handcuffed to the waves

by Roger Moore,
St. Thomas University,
Fredericton, New Brunswick

I'm going to tell you a true story that I would bet you have not heard. It is the tale of one of the most horrific naval disasters in this century, ranking with the sinking of the Titanic, the Lusitania and the Andrea Doria. Because the disaster took place when it did, May 30, 1914, it was almost immediately eclipsed by events leading to World War I. Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria was assassinated June 18, 1914, in Sarajevo, and this, according to what we learned in our history books, was the beginning of the first world war.

This tale of a naval disaster includes all of the qualities needed to be a good story, including an impressive, beautiful lady Goliath of a passenger ship that was said to be one of the most trustworthy on the seas at the time; a sturdy little runt of a work ship David that was used long and hard and stuck to it; two commanding officers, both good men and true; and rumors of a curse placed upon a ship's captain by a murderer.

The passenger list of the beautiful ocean liner included people from a variety of social classes, from the rich and famous (among them a famous actor and his actress wife and a former member of British Parliament turned outdoorsman, as well as a well-known rich socialite from Canada, Mrs. Ethel Paton); 171 God-fearing and kindly members of the Salvation Army heading to a convention in London; and a full compartment of third-class passengers comprised of a variety of working class families from diverse backgrounds going home, going to see friends and relatives or just taking a much-deserved and hard-earned vacation. It seems that most of the children on the ship were in third class.

The name of the passenger ship was Empress of Ireland, and it met its fate about 2 a.m. in the dark of a foggy night in the St. Lawrence River on May 30, 1914. The ship carried 1,477 people, and 1,012 lost their lives that night. More than 700 of the dead still lie in the cold waters of the St. Lawrence River. More passengers died in the wreck of the Empress than in the Lusitania (791) or the Titanic (832).

The Empress of Ireland was built in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1904 for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and regularly crossed the ocean between Liverpool and Quebec City, British Colombia, in six days. It could carry up to 1,550 passengers and 420 crewmembers, and had eight decks and over 46,700 feet of beautiful mahogany woodwork. The first-class dining room spanned the width of the ship and was 58 feet long and 65 feet wide. It had leather upholstery, gilded woodwork, sculpted ceilings, cut glass fixtures and an atrium that went up two levels to a music room. The music room served as a recreational retreat for first class passengers, with a Steinway grand piano and coal-burning fireplace. Most of the time, a five-piece orchestra would play for the guests. True to its name, the ship soon became the favorite of Irish immigrants, for whom she symbolized the door to the new world.

Capt. Henry Kendall had been commander of Empress of Ireland since May 1, 1914. Kendall was 40 years old at the time of the tragedy. He had begun his life at sea at the age of 15, and worked his way up through the ranks. Being captain of the Empress of Ireland was the epitome of his career. This trip was to be the 96th crossing by the Empress.

The ship that sank the Empress was a Norwegian collier (coal-bearing ship) called the Storstad, at the time loaded with 10,400 tons of coal and equipped with a lethal chiseled bow for slicing through ice packs in the Norwegian fjords. Because she was fully loaded with coal, she punctured the Empress well below the water line, and the Empress began to fill with water immediately. If the Storstad had remained in the opening where it struck the Empress, more lives might have been saved. But it pulled free immediately, allowing water to rush into the breach. At the time of the disaster, the Storstad was under the command of Chief Officer Alfred Toftenes, who had served on the vessel for three years. Its captain, Thomas Anderson, came to the bridge from his bed just as the Storstad rammed the Empress.

Because of a dense fog bank that rolled unexpectedly through the river channel and enveloped both ships, and through a series of mistakes by both Kendall and Toftenes, which included both of them at one time or another stopping their engines, causing them to lose control of their ships' steering, the Storstad, plowed into the side of Empress of Ireland. The stocky little Storstad created a hole 14 feet wide and 25 feet high in the belly of the Empress, just between the ribs of the liner, "smoothly as an assassin's knife," wrote James Croall in his account of the disaster, and buckling her hull like tin foil. It is said that the collision took place so gently that the passengers hardly noticed, but the wound was fatal. Within 14 minutes - 14 minutes - the Empress of Ireland was at the bottom of the river.

USDA to offer 590 CSP contracts

The United States Department of Agriculture will offer 590 Conservation Security Program (CSP) contracts across the state of Minnesota. These 2005 contracts being offered translate into more than $4,227,650 in long-term commitments to conservation over the next 10 years.

"CSP participants are conservation innovators. What they do today will lead to additional environmental benefits for the nation as they share their knowledge of conservation with others," said Regional Assistant Chief Merlin Bartz. "The program is offered nationally on working lands rewarding the nation's leading conservationists and providing incentives for them and others to do more."

USDA expects to fully invest the $202 million provided by Congress for this fiscal year. Environmental enhancement activities offered by applicants include improving soil quality, water quality, wildlife habitat management, nutrient and pest management, air quality management and on-farm energy management.

Following the process outlined in the CSP sign-up notice published in the Federal Register on March 25, 2005, applications will be offered according to the published enrollment categories, in order, until the funding is exhausted. USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) will offer contracts to applications in enrollment categories A and B and subcategory C 1.

NRCS also extended the comment period on the interim final rule for CSP to Sept. 9, 2005. This extension will give the public additional time to comment on key issues regarding implementation of the program. The extension notice was published in the Federal Register on July 20, 2005. Comments can be made via the Federal Register at the Regulations Web site or by e-mailing farmbillrules@wcc.usda.gov.

Jump in the sand. How deep are the prints? How far is it between the footprints?

The following is a finger play to use when walking in the sand.

In the sand I shovel and dig.

Good Moods, Bad Moods

Preschoolers can sometimes be moody when things don't go their way. A child's mood can change quickly from joy to anger, for example, if someone doesn't pay attention to her or if she can't make a toy work the way she wants. Often you may not even know why she's upset. She may have some idea inside her head of what she expects. When her expectations aren't met, she might pout or stomp about without ever letting you know why.

Try to put yourself in her shoes. See if you can figure out the problem. "I'll bet you're mad because you got tired of waiting for me to get off the phone." Be sympathetic, even if you think her reason for being in a bad mood is not important. If she feels you understand, she'll get over her moodiness more quickly.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Try to put into words what you think your child is feeling or thinking. A young child needs your help to understand his or her own emotions.

Swanson receives his solo pilot wings

Cadet Airman 1st Class Michael Swanson of Northwest Minnesota Composite Squadron, Civil Air Patrol (CAP), graduated from the Minnesota Wing Flight Academy 2005 held at the Mankato Airport from July 15 to 23.

Swanson graduated as a solo pilot from the academy and was awarded his solo pilot wings. To receive his solo wings, Swanson had to complete a minimum of one take-off and landing as the sole occupant of a Cessna aircraft. Swanson's flight instructor was Capt. Rachael Norman of St. Paul.

Swanson is the son of Alan and Deb Swanson of Goodridge. He is entering his junior year at Goodridge High School this fall. He has been a member of CAP for two years and will continue his flight training locally to achieve his goal of earning his Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) private pilot's license.

The Minnesota Wing Flight Academy provides each powered-aircraft student four class periods each eight-hour training day. Two class periods each day are flying with an FAA Certified Flight Instructor in a Cessna 172 aircraft developing their flight skills. The other two daily class periods are classroom instruction learning the physics of flight, FAA flight rules and flight procedures.

This year was the 38th consecutive Minnesota Wing Flight Academy. Forty-one Cadets from the age of 14 to 17 representing five states (wings) were selected to attend the academy this year in the powered and glider training programs. Twenty-eight students received their solo wings, and 13 received their supervised solo wings from this year's academy.

All the FAA flight instructors and staff at the academy volunteer their time and expertise for the nine-day academy to teach cadets how to fly powered or glider aircraft.

Swanson is the fourth cadet from the local squadron to be accepted to attend this annual flight-training event in the past few years. The local squadron cadets meet every Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at the Thief River Falls Regional Airport. Those interested in the program can attend any meeting or call Cmdr. Arlo Rude for more information at 681-3653.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: My claim for disability was not approved for medical reasons. How do I appeal the decision?

A: First, read the decision letter to learn the specific reason your claim was not approved. Then follow the instructions on that decision letter, paying strict attention to the timelines shown. Requesting the first review of a disability decision, a process called Reconsideration, is similar to filing the original application and consists of two basic steps. First, you complete form (SSA-561) to request the Reconsideration review. Second, you complete a medical questionnaire (form SSA-3441) and several new medical release forms (SSA-827) to update your record.

The medical questionnaire is used to update your application about all medical problems, new treatments and medical sources, not to repeat information supplied before. All three forms can be downloaded from the publication section of the SSA Web site, www.socialsecurity.gov, and mailed to your SSA office. An interview is not needed. You can also complete and transmit the medical questionnaire (form SSA-3441) online. Reach it from the SSA Web site disability section or directly at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/applyfordisability.

The Social Security Administration encourages people to use this online option, just remember to also mail in the other forms. Once at your local SSA office, a representative updates your claim on the computer record. State employees prepare the actual medical decision for SSA so the medical file is then returned to your state Disability Determination Service (DDS) for review of the medical decision by examiners who were not part of the original decision.

When completed the medical file is returned to the SSA office where, depending on the decision made, your application is processed to payment or you get a letter with additional appeal opportunity.

Campers participate in Courage Day Camp

The Thief River Falls Area Courage Day Camp was held July 10 through 22 at Oakland Park in Thief River Falls.

Campers with physical or sensory disabilities participated in several activities based on a Wild West theme. Gerry Seim demonstrated how to shoot dangerous animals using a bow and arrow. The campers saw old-fashioned items at Peder Engelstad Pioneer Village. They went for a lazy ride down the river courtesy of Johnson's Riverside Boarding Home. Buffalo were spotted by campers at the Olson Farm west of Thief River Falls. Thanks to the Pennington County Fair Board, the campers also saw some of the "modern" western gadgets at the motocross and all-terrain vehicle mud run.

After all of this fun in Thief River Falls, the campers went to Buffalo River State Park and met the campers from the Fargo-Moorhead Area Courage Day Camp. They talked, swam and went horseback riding after roughing it with help from Jodie Olson and the Boy Scouts.

This camp would not be possible without the support of numerous local businesses and organizations, Camp Director Jamie Bakken said. Many people made camp possible by volunteering their time, including Olson, Seim, Margaret and Scott Olson, Jerry Hesse and Kelsy Brazier. Courage Day Camp is sponsored, in part, by the United Way.

At Oakland Park Nursing Home, campers tried to give something back to the community by reading with the elderly and singing.

When asked what was their favorite part of camp, campers responded with "meeting new people, making friends, the food, horseback riding and swimming at the beach." This camp takes place each summer in Thief River Falls. For more information, contact Jamie Bakken at 681-4571.

Odette receives CAP commendation

Maj. Dave Odette of Thief River Falls received a Minnesota wing commander's commendation for his work as commander of the Minnesota Wing Flight Academy 2005. Col. Steve Miller, Minnesota wing commander, presented the award at the Flight Academy graduation held July 23 at Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter.

Wing Flight Academy is one of the premier events of the Minnesota Wing CAP. Flight Academy involves cadets and staff from not only Minnesota but from multiple states, as far away as Missouri, Tennessee and Mississippi. This year, a total of 41 Cadets graduated from the academy with support from 34 volunteer staff during the nine-day annual event with training aircraft, gliders and glider tow planes being used from four states.

This yearly event requires year-long planning by Odette and the Flight Academy Committee. This commander's commendation recognizes the volunteer efforts of these people to make Flight Academy a success in training middle school and high school students not only flight training, but also self confidence, personnel discipline and leadership skills.

Property tax refund deadline approaching

As the Aug. 15 deadline approaches for the 2004 Property Tax Refund, the Minnesota Department of Revenue urges homeowners and renters to be aware of recent law changes that may affect how the property tax return is filed.

Minnesota has two types of property tax refunds: the regular property tax refund and the special property tax refund. Renters may qualify for the regular refund; homeowners may qualify for both. Homeowners apply for both refunds on the same form. Form M1PR is due Aug. 15, 2005.

Minnesota recently adopted the federal changes enacted after June 15, 2003. If you filed Schedule M1NC, Federal Adjustments, with your Minnesota income tax return, do not include the adjustment from Schedule M1NC when determining your household income on Form M1PR. If you already have filed Form M1PR and you included the Schedule M1NC adjustment, you may receive a larger refund by filing an amended property tax refund return. Complete Form M1PRX, Amended Property Tax Refund Return.

Regular Property Tax Refunds

The regular property tax refund provides tax relief to taxpayers whose property tax or rent is relatively high compared to their household income. Generally, household income is your federal adjusted gross income plus most nontaxable income, minus a subtraction if you have dependents, or if you or your spouse is age 65 or older or disabled. The department expects about 300,000 homeowners and 280,000 renters to apply for the regular refund this year.

Renters

Renters qualify for the property tax refund based on your household income and the rent you paid on your residence in 2004. You will need a Certificate of Rent Paid, which your landlord should have issued earlier this year. Your 2004 household income must be less than $45,970. The average estimated refund for renters is about $520 with a maximum of $1,310.

Homeowners

Homeowners qualify for the property tax refund based on household income and the property taxes payable on the residence owned in 2005. To qualify, your 2004 household income must be less than $85,210. You also must have owned and lived in the home on Jan. 2, 2005, and your property must be classified as your homestead. The average estimated refund for homeowners is $580 with a maximum of $1,590.

Special Property Tax Refunds

The special property tax refund provides tax relief to homeowners whose property tax increased by more than 12 percent (and at least $100) from 2004 to 2005. The refund is 60 percent of the amount of tax you paid that exceeds the 12 percent increase or $100. The average estimated refund is about $60; the maximum special property tax refund is $1,000.

There is no income limit to qualify for this refund, but you must be a homeowner who owned and lived in your home on Jan. 2, 2004 and Jan. 2, 2005.

The department expects about 80,000 homeowners to apply for the special property tax refund.

How to file Electronically

Software is available to electronically file your Minnesota property tax refund. For a list of software products, go to the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us. Prices start at $7. Your tax preparer may also be able to file your return electronically.

On paper

Forms and instructions are available on the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us or by calling 651-296-4444. Libraries may also have the Property Tax Refund forms and instructions.

Reminders for paper filers

The department offers a few tips to ensure your refund application is processed quickly.

- Renters: Include the full page CRP with the return.
- Homeowners: Include a full page photocopy of the property tax statement provided by the county, and make sure you are using the final property tax statement for 2005, not the proposed tax payable in 2005.

Refunds

Refunds will be mailed beginning mid-August to renters and mobile home owners who filed returns by June 15, 2005. The department will begin mailing refunds in late September to homeowners who file returns by Aug. 1, 2005. Refunds filed after these dates will take about 60 days from the date you file.

More Information

You can check the status of a refund on the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us or by calling 651-296-4444.

You can find additional information, forms and instructions on the department's Web site at www.taxes.state.mn.us. ## EGF wins another Ninth District title

Host East Grand Forks lived up to its status as the favorite to win the 2005 Ninth District American Legion Division I baseball tournament.

The champions went through the Wedesday-to-Saturday eight-team, double-elimination tournament in unbeaten fashion with wins over Detroit Lakes, Fergus Falls (twice) and Moorhead. East Grand Forks handled Fergus Falls 10-0 in the finals. Both teams qualified for the 2005 American Legion state tournament that begins Thursday in St. Cloud.

Steve Gust, who served his first year as Northland Community and Technical College head baseball coach this past spring, directed East Grand Forks to its fourth Legion district title in the past five years

It was a 1-2 tournament for Thief River Falls. Post 117 lost a 7-5 Wednesday first round decision to Fergus Falls, out-scored Detroit Lakes 14-13 Thursday and lost to Perham 11-2 Friday in loser-out games.

Post-season Legion games are scheduled as nine-inning affairs. During the regular season, teams play doubleheaders that feature seven-inning contests.

The Courtney Skjeryen-coached Thief River Falls squad finished the year 16-17.

Bemidji beat Moorhead 7-4 Monday in the championship game of the 2005 District 9 VFW baseball tournament at East Grand Forks.

Coming out of the loser's bracket in the eight-team, double-elimination tournament, Moorhead outscored Bemidji 13-12 in an eight-inning game to open the final-day activities, forcing a second title showdown.

It was a five-game, third place tournament for Thief River Falls. The Shane Zutz-coached 16-year-olds beat Detroit Lakes 12-2 Friday; lost to Bemidji 3-2 and defeated Fergus Falls 10-4 Saturday; then edged Perham 7-6 and fell to Moorhead 8-4 Sunday.

Thief River Falls finished the year 22-10 overall.

"We proved this weekend that we were definitely a team to be reckoned with," said Zutz. "Teams threw their best pitchers, knowing they had to play well to beat us. It was a great weekend for the kids."

Thief River Falls' Seth Schmitz, Cody Bottem and Spencer Johnson were named to the all-tournament team.

Post 2793 opened the tournament by falling behind Detroit Lakes 2-0 in the first half inning of Game 1. But RBI singles by Schmitz and Patrick Barry tied it in the bottom of the inning, and a six-run second carried Thief River Falls to a 12-2 win when Sean Sorteberg delivered a two-run single; Schmitz picked up an RBI when he was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded; and Barry added a run-scoring single.

A Ben Espeseth single and a passed ball made it a 10-2 game in the third.

It ended on the ten-run rule in the fifth on an RBI singles by Schmitz and Johnson.

"We came out and took care of business the first game of the tournament," noted Zutz.

Bemidji and Thief River Falls were tied at 1-1 going into the seventh inning, with a first inning Bemidji run matched in the fourth when Johnson doubled and Alex Yaggie came through with a two-out single.

Thief River Falls took a 2-1 lead in the top of the seventh on an RBI single through the left side by Schmitz.

Bemidji, however, answered with two runs in the bottom of the seventh for the win. A home run on a full-count pitch tied it and a 2-2 pitch was hit up the middle to score the winning run on a close play at the plate.

"We played a tremendous game," said Zutz. "Bemidji didn't look past us and threw their best pitcher. We left seven runners in scoring position, and that obviously hurt. Cody Bottem flat-out pitched his tail off."

Thief River Falls handed Fergus Falls to begin loser bracket play, building a 7-0 lead before giving up four runs in the top of the sixth.

A wild pitch and an error accounted for three first inning runs, while a two-run single by Schmitz and a passed ball added up to a 6-0 second inning cushion.

Thief River Falls answered Fergus Falls' threat when Schmitz hit a long three-run home run over the left-center field fence in the bottom of the sixth.

"We were cruising along with Ben (Espeseth) pitching so well," explained Zutz. "Then we went to sleep and they scored four runs. We bounced back quickly with Seth's home run to seal the game."

Thief River Falls stayed alive in the loser-out round by scoring in the bottom of the eighth to break a 6-6 tie with Perham.

A three-run first inning home run by Schmitz gave Thief River Falls a early lead.

After falling behind 5-3, Post 2793 got one run back on a two-out error in the fifth and tied it in the sixth when Matt Nelson's sharply-hit ground ball to short made it 5-4 and a Michael Blix single pulled Thief River Falls even.

Jordan Espeseth reached base on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored the winning run when Sorteberg hit a 1-2 two-out pitch up the middle.

"It was great to be on the other end this time after the Bemidji game," offered Zutz. "We played pretty poorly defensively, but out pitchers (Sorteberg, Schmitz, Johnson) got us out of jams and we got a couple of key hits."

Moorhead used a four-run fourth inning and a three-run sixth to end Thief River Falls' season.

Post 2793 opened the scoring when Schmitz singled in a first inning run, and Thief River Falls went ahead 2-1 in the fourth on an RBI single by Michael Blix.

After falling behind 5-2, Thief River Falls came back with single runs in the fifth (RBI double by Michael Benedict) and sixth (suicide squeeze bunt by Ben Espeseth).

Thief River Falls presented a seventh inning threat by loading the bases with one out. But a force-out at the plate and a strike-out ended the challenge, and the season.

City tennis meet has a strong field

A competitive field was on hand for the 2005 Thief River Falls City Tennis Championships, according to tournament director Troy Hanestad..

"I think this was the highest level of tennis we have seen in the tournament in it's five years," said Hanestad, who was also a participant. "It was great playing and watching."

Winners were named in two of the three divisions played during the July 23-24 competition: Ashley Leister in women's singles and Justin Pyle-Ryan LaCoursiere in men's doubles.

The men's singles championship match was put on hold when LaCoursiere, off to a 5-2 start against Joe Broten, had to retire due to severe leg cramps.

"Joe agreed to replay the match at a later date, which I thought was a great example of sportsmanship," pointed out Hanestad. "He could have claimed the title by injury default."

Leister and LaCoursiere were the defending champions in singles; LaCoursiere-Pyle repeated as champions in men's doubles.

There were not enough entries to run a women's doubles bracket, putting a Leister-Kassi Sparby entry in the men's division, where they "played very well," noted Hanestad, while losing to Pyle-LaCoursiere in the quarterfinals and Lincoln Olson-Jared May in the consolation round.

TRF VFW finishes a 19-8 regular season

Thief River Falls VFW baseball team finished its regular season 19-8, splitting a Wednesday (July 20) doubleheader with Perham and sweeping a Thursday (July 21) twinbill against East Grand Forks.

Wednesday, the first game against Perham, as Thief River Falls coach Shane Zutz put it, was just one of those games where really nothing went well in a 12-2 loss. "This happens once throughout a season," he said.

Thief River Falls bounced back to win the second game 7-2.

In the highlights from the second game, Zutz noted that during the third inning, Sean Sorteberg led off with a single to center. Matt Nelson hit a ground ball to second that was mis-played, putting runners at first and third. Seth Schmitz singled to right scoring Sorteberg, with Nelson moving to third. Patrick Barry then hit a sacrifice fly to center scoring Nelson. Schmitz moved to second on the throw to the plate and scored later in the inning on a single to right by Spencer Johnson.

In the sixth inning, Ben Espeseth, walked and Ben Carlson laid down a sacrifice bunt to move him to second base. A wild pitch moved Espeseth to third and an error by the third baseman off the bat of Alex Yaggie scored Espeseth.

In the seventh inning, Thief River Falls got some more breathing room in by scoring three more times. A walk by Sorteberg and a sacrifice bunt by Nelson put a runner at second with one out. Schmitz was then intentionally walked. With two outs, Michael Blix was hit by a pitch to load the bases. A Johnson single scored Sorteberg and Schmitz. Espeseth then grounded a ball to the pitcher who mis-played it allowing Blix to score.

Perham scored in the first inning, with a single, triple and a groundout scoring two runs. That was it though as Cody Bottem shut them out for the next six innings.

"Cody set the tone for us in this game," said Zutz. "He pitched very well using all three of his pitches (fast ball, curve, change-up). Defensively, we were much better. We had a couple of big hits and we were able to capitalize on their mistakes."

Thief River Falls wrapped up its schedule with a pair of ten-run rule five-inning wins over East Grand Forks, 14-4 and 19-1.

GREENBUSH RACE PARK

from Bob Hultgren

After a week off, the Greenbush Race Park resumed its 2005 season Saturday night hosting a NOPA Super Truck Special.

With hot summer weather and seven classes of cars competing, there was no shortage of action and excitement.

In the Mini-Sprints, Dan Wiskow (Roseau) collected his sixth feature win of the season when he passed Jeremy Swenson (Badger) on Lap 5 to take the lead and race to the win. Swenson, in one of his best outings of the season, finished a solid second, with Clay Sorteberg (Greenbush) third.

Randy Jawaski (Kindred, N.D.) continues to prove why he's one of the best NOPA Pure Stock racers around as he led flag-to-flag for the feature win. While Jawaski was out front, attention was paid to the race for second place. Several cars jockeyed for the runner-up spot before Mike Peterson (Lancaster) claimed it during the final couple of laps. Peterson started tenth and worked his way through traffic. First-time visitor, Ken Crane (Mahnomen) finished third.

In the NOPA Street feature, Jamen Foss (Greenbush) held off a late race challenge from Steffan Snare (Hallock) to pick up the win. Foss led all the way. Snare started ninth but worked his into second by Lap 5. Snare went high and low, but was unable to get around Foss. Phillip Hougard (Karlstad) crossed the line third.

Jeff Reed (Bemidji) paid his first visit to the Race Park this season and left with the Wissota Super Stock feature win. Reed started on the front row and raced a smooth and fast line for the flag. John Halvorson (Warren) finished second, with pole sitter Scott Ripplinger (Warroad) third.

What has been a tough season for Dave Riopelle (Argyle) got a little more bearable Saturday when he claimed his first Wissota Modified feature of the season at the track. Riopelle took the lead on Lap 3 and led the final 12 laps for the win. Manitoba racer Rick Delaine finished second, with points leader Nolan Olmstead (Badger) third.

For the first time in this reporter's memory, the American cars outnumbered the Canadian cars in the NOPA 4-Cylinder class. And race fans were treated to an exciting race, starting from the green flag, when the cars were five wide down the front straightaway, to four lead changes over 15 laps of action. Kurt Smith (Greenbush) led the first three laps, but more importantly, also led the final four laps to pick up the feature win. Dustin Wahl (Greenbush), who led late in the race, finished second, with Mike Gross (Greenbush) third. Points leader Lee McRae led laps five through eight, but spent the final laps in the infield with a broken scooter.

The evening wrapped up with the NOPA Super Truck Special. Dave Buffie (Winnipeg, Manitoba) led most of the race for the feature win. Buffie surrendered the lead to Ricky Weiss (Winnipeg) midway through the race but battled back to retake the lead for the final six laps.

Next event on the Greenbush Race Park schedule is the Northern Late Model Special Saturday, Aug. 6. Hot laps start at 7 p.m.

From The Upper Falls

The News, John W. Eastman, Publisher December 4, 1905
Thief River Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota

County Fair Next Week
Large Crowds Will Be Here
Attractions Will Be Far Better Than Ever Before

"Next Wednesday will be the opening day of the Red Lake county fair and from that time until the fair closes Friday night, there will one continuous round of pleasure. Nothing has been left undone and no expense spared to make this fair one that will live long in the memory of all who attend.

"The attractions will be better than many circuses, and so numerous will be the acts that it will be impossible to go into detail. It will be sufficient to say that the fair management have contracted with the T. I. Cash Balloon and Attraction company of St. Paul for the amusements and Mr. Cash will be here personally in his special cars, accompanied by about 100 actors.

"The horse races this year will be better than ever before and Secretary L. M. Hoag has been kept busy answering letters of inquiry from horsemen. The $1,200 hung in purses is attracting horsemen and they will surely be here to compete for it."

Now Have the Money
Nothing Can Stop the D. S. S. & A.
Borrowed the Money in New York City and Will Use It Next Year

"That the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad is going to be built from Thief River Falls to Duluth next year, there can be little doubt. A prominent man in railroad circles last week told a Thief River Falls business man that the Duluth and South Shore road had provided against circumstances that might develop and that would stop them. Not knowing what the condition of the money market would be next year, the Duluth and South Shore recently floated a loan in New York City for an amount sufficient to build and put the road in running order. The money is now in a New York bank and will remain there until next spring."

Impressive Services
At Saint Bernard's Church Sunday
First Communion for a Class of Twenty-Four Young People

"The services at St. Bernard's church last Sunday were especially impressive by reason of the fact that the First Communion class, consisting of fourteen girls and ten boys, made their first communion. At 9:45 the children gathered at the parsonage, where they were met by the pastor and escorted to the church. As the procession entered the church, the choir sang 'Veni Creator.' The class then made profession of faith and later received their first Holy Communion. The services were most elaborate and will tend to impress upon the young people the importance of this event, and the day will doubtless be marked by them as the most important of their Christian lives. Father Adolph delivered a strong and impressive sermon, pointing out to the children the significance of the event, and congratulating the parents on their true Christianity and church loyalty in thus early bringing their children within the circle of active church members and workers. He dwelt at length on the true meaning of 'First Communion' and the children were visibly impressed with his remarks. During the service, the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Wright, rendered several beautiful hymns, and sang the Mass in a most creditable manner. The church was beautifully decorated throughout, the altar being a veritable mass of flowers and plants.

"The children spent the entire day at the parsonage with Father Adolph. The ladies of the parish arranged dinner for them and later in the afternoon they enjoyed lunch, consisting of ice cream, cake and fruit.

"The following is the list: Adela Blair, Francis Bourque, Philip Bryant, A. Campbell, C. Campbell, Eva Coe, Lloyd Crowe, James Curran, Elmer Eve, Mary Fountain, Malina Galipeau, Laura Galipeau, Agnes Goulet, Philip Holzknecht, Mary Moran, Del Robideau, Alice Rochfort, Jerry Roach, John Roach, Frances Schmitz, Leona Soards, Tilly Weiner, George Werstlein and Emil Zeh."

Horses Are Now In City
Will Remain Until After the Fair
The Races This Year Will Be the Best Ever Witnessed here

"That the horse races at the county fair are going to be good ones this year is an assured fact. Already four horses are now in the city and will remain here until after the fair, having arrived here Sunday morning from Winnipeg, where they had been in the races for two weeks.

"Among the horses now here are two belonging to J. F. Bradford of Verndale, 'Rupert,' the trotting horse, and 'Assessor' the running horse. Mr. Bradford will also have other horses that are now at point in the southern part of the state here during the fair. Both 'Rupert' and 'Assessor' have been here in former years and are favorites with the people of this section.

"Secretary Hoag has received word from a large number of horsemen to the effect that they will be here to attend the races, and it is quite likely that no racing event pulled off in northern Minnesota will equal the races to be had here during fair time. There will be some local horses in the fastest of the events to be seen here, and this will add local interest.

"LATER: Thirteen race horses arrived here yesterday over the Soo line, making a total of seventeen horses now here. The horses are from Illinois and Iowa, and are said to be some of the best in the country. If many more horses arrive next week, it is quite likely that some special races will have to be gotten up to accommodate all."

Again Are Defeated
County Seat Case Up Again Tuesday
As Usual Red Lake Falls Was Defeated Upon All Points

"The county seat removal case came up again on Tuesday evening, the right of Thief River Falls to intervene being the issue. Judge Watts ruled against the Red Lake Falls attorneys upon every point raised and the matter of this city conducting the suit in the future is now established. The Red Lake Falls attorneys made a motion that they be allowed to amend their original complaint, and as this was one of no consequence, no objection was made to their doing so. They now allege that C. M. Evenson and Alex A. Sweaas, who represent Thief River Falls in the matter, are not citizens or taxpayers. Of course it will require a few days in which to secure the proof of this matter, but it will be a very easy thing to accomplish.

"Thief River Falls was represented by Attorneys E. Stanton, S. Cooke, S. H. Clark, and Ira C. Richardson of this city and A. A. Miller of Crookston."

Local Boy Sets Up Lemonade Stand For a Good Cause

"Ronald McCarthy, eight-year-old son of M. F. McCarthy, Navy recruiter here, and Mrs. McCarthy, learned recently that a fund was being raised in his former home town of Charleston, South Carolina, to aid the families of three policemen who had died recently in that city.

"Ronald immediately got busy and set up a lemonade stand, selling the drink for three cents a glass. Up to last week he had realized $1.97 profit, with his mother supplying the lemons, and $2 has been forwarded to the Charleston fund.

"He is still running the stand at his home, 323 Knight avenue North, in case any Times readers get thirsty."

H. Kjos Appoints Local Red Cross Committee Heads

"Chairmen of most of the standing committees of the Pennington county chapter of the American Red Cross have been re-appointed to serve the coming year, Herman A. Kjos, chapter chairman, stated this week. Included are R. S. Eldevik, home service; Quentin Jones; water safety; M. C. Gulbranson, disasters; Mrs. Ray P. Jude, Junior Red Cross; Fred F. Protz, first aid; Miss Mary McLaughlin, nursing aid; and Mrs. I. R. Geving, publicity."

$2,000 Fire Loss To Fair Grounds Building Monday

"Discovered Monday at 1 p.m., a fire of undetermined origin caused $2,000 to the roof of the Woman's building on the Pennington county fair grounds. The loss is fully covered by insurance. How the blaze started is a mystery, according to Fire Chief Roy Langevin, who reported that the building was locked at the time, and electrical current was disconnected. One-third or more of the roof was destroyed before the fire was extinguished by the local fire department."

"Theodore Roy has accepted the Tweet school for the coming term.

"It is about time to make inquiries about the [prairie] chicken crop.

"The weather this week has been about as unfavorable for the crops as it could be.

"We are having altogether too much rain and unless it stops soon there will be trouble during the harvest.

"Mike McAndress was in on Thursday with a sample of wheat from his fields which he claims has the black rust.

"L. T. Bergh was in the village Monday and informed us that a party of Soo surveyors crossed his claim, actually walked across, which, considering reports from that neighborhood, is very remarkable, as high water is reported from that vicinity.

"August A. Erickson, the well known River Falls farmer, was in town yesterday and reports that crops out his way are looking fine, no signs of black rust. He looks for a big crop with wheat harvest to commence in about two weeks.

"Fred Gebott left last Saturday for Frazee, where he has taken the position of head filer in the sawmill. The mill is about the same size as the one here and the position is a responsible and lucrative one for so young a man to fill. His friends however claim that he is well qualified to fill the position. David Bridge, who has been filing for the lath mill here, also went along to be first assistant.

"George Turville of Thief River Falls was at Oslo last Saturday to attend the opening sale of business lots in the new town to be built where the Soo crosses the Red river, says the NEWS. He reports that a large number were present and that all were of the opinion that Oslo is going to make one the best towns in Marshall county. Just thirty business lots were sold, the prices ranging from $665 to $325. Another sale will be held later at which time an excursion will be run down the Red river in a steamboat from Grand Forks to Oslo."

Chief Mon-Si-Moh Dead

"CROOKSTON JOURNAL: Mon-Si-Moh, chief of the Indians at the Red Lake reservation, died last week due to a cold which he caught while attending the celebration at Devils Lake on the Fourth. The old chief was the eldest of six children. It was his father who received the large grant of land near Thief River Falls. On his father's death, there was a lawsuit over the property left. Mon-Si-Moh thought that according to Indian custom being the oldest son he was entitled to all the property. The case was taken to the United States Supreme court which rendered a decision against him and as a result the property was divided among the children of the deceased. He was fifty years of age and was highly honored and respected by the members of his tribe."

Permanent Writ Denied

"CROOKSTON TIMES (Wednesday): Thief River Falls, represented by Attorneys Sam Clark, Ira Richardson and E. M. Stanton, last evening attempted to have Judge Watts have the temporary writ of mandamus issued to Red Lake Falls people some time ago, compelling the county board to meet and call an election, made permanent, but failed. Attorneys Grady, Boughton, and McIntyre, for the defendant, Red Lake Falls, set forth an answer in which it was alleged that the parties applying for the original writ were not citizens of the United States and notices of meetings of the board were not posted in the proper places. Upon the answer of the Red Lake Falls people, Judge Watts denied to make the writ permanent and the temporary injunction mandamus was dissolved.

"The Thief River attorneys served notice of their intention to present a motion to have the answer of the Red Lake Falls people stricken out and a hearing will be had the latter portion of the month to permit such procedure.

"The Thief Riverites claim that the answer of the Red Lake Falls people is largely falsehood and will endeavor to show it up in that light. Should the answer be stricken out, the case will at once go to the Supreme court and, if it is not, the case will come up before the fall term of court in Red Lake county."

Strike Is On

"The station agents and operators on the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern lines have ordered a strike and they commenced going out last Thursday. There does not seem to be a great deal of difference between the companies and the men. An overtime allowance for Sunday work seems to be the main point of difference. The railroads however do not want to deal with the men as a body and refuse to meet their committee. Locally, our agent H. M. Swenson is still at his post but no telegrams are taken or sent. The passenger trains are generally running on time but the freight service is somewhat demoralized. It is impossible at present to tell what the result will be or how the strike will end."

Cigarette tax...um, fee increase may have unintended consequences

Impact of a 75-cent per pack "health impact fee" on cigarettes that goes into effect on Aug. 1 will be watched closely in border communities. Residents of small border communities, know all to well that policy changes that affect how consumers spend their hard-earned money can act as a two-edged sword.

The goal of the "fee" increase, of course, was to raise additional income for the state, but it fits nicely or conveniently with goals of reducing smoking and smoking-related illnesses. The 75-cent per pack tax increase is expected or anticipated to accomplish both goals.

The health impact fee on cigarettes is expected to garner $401 million in revenue for the state, which would be welcome given the state's difficulty in balancing its budget. According to the law, the purpose of the fee is to recover costs related to or caused by tobacco use and to reduce the use of tobacco, especially by youths.

BlueCross BlueShield argues that the benefits of the fee or tax increase will result in a 14.2 percent decrease in youth smoking, and "force" 26,300 adults to quit smoking. They estimate the five-year healthcare cost savings from fewer smoking-affected pregnancies and births at $8 million; the five-year healthcare cost savings from fewer smoking-caused heart attacks and strokes at $10.7 million; and the long-term healthcare cost savings in the state from adult to youth smoking at $1.10 billion.

There may be an unanticipated consequence of the tax for border communities that has some are merchants concerned. They believe the added tax will cause smokers to travel to nearby communities in North Dakota. They believe that given this opportunity, there's a good chance they'll do other shopping while there, too.

But then again, why would anyone drive 50 miles to save $7.50, or even $15, if they bought two cartons of cigarettes. On its face, it sounds ridiculous. However, combine the savings per carton on cigarettes with a much wider selection on other goods and services, and you've got the making for an entertaining visit.

Merchants of border communities will be watching closely to see if the additional $7.50 per cart on will cause customers to spend more of their income in North Dakota, but as BlueCross BlueShield reminds us, we should also be discussing the positive impacts of the new law.

National sex offender database needed

Two high-profile crimes put this region in the national spotlight. That's not the kind of publicity we seek, but the murder of Dru Sjodin and alleged crimes that Edward Duncan committed also put the spotlight on the obvious lack of a national sex offender registry.

The National Sex Offender Public Database, which would authorize the federal government to create, manage and make available to all states and the general public via the Internet a sex offender registry, is needed to help track people known to be repeat offenders. In addition to creating a national database, the legislation also strengthens the rules monitoring high-risk sex offenders by requiring correctional facilities to immediately notify the state attorneys general about the planned release of any high-risk sex offender. The intent of the law is to close dangerous loopholes and prevent similar tragedies from occurring in the future.

"We, as elected officials, are duty bound to protect our communities," said Sen. Mark Dayton. "The National Sex Offender Public Database will help track people known to be repeat offenders. With this legislation, Minnesotans will know when these potentially dangerous people move into our neighborhoods."

Whether this information may have prevented the Sjodin murder or the alleged crimes committed by Duncan is worthy of discussion. Regardless, it certainly would have helped law enforcement, and may have prevented the crimes.

The Senate passed the legislation last November, but the House failed to act on the bill in time for the August recess. A House panel did approve a plan and it is expected to come up for a vote in the House in September.

Legislature must act to secure our rights and restore fairness to eminent domain powers

by Pat Anderson
State Auditor

After years of experience in and around local government, I have first-hand knowledge of the extent of local government power. As the mayor of Eagan, I had the opportunity to help determine the development of a rapidly growing community. And now as state auditor, I oversee the finances of all local units of government in the state to make sure their actions conform to the powers given to them in the law.

The actions of city councils, county boards and school boards determine everything from the way land in your community is used, the location and width of the roads you drive on, and the class size and curriculum of your public schools.

I believe that most governmental decisions should be made locally rather than at the state or federal level. Governments that are close to the people they serve are best suited to deal with local problems. Local control also makes it easier for citizens to voice their opinions and to hold elected officials accountable.

While the merits of local control are undeniable, any government can abuse its powers. With this fact in mind, our founding fathers adopted the Bill of Rights to protect individual's rights from government intrusion. Unfortunately, following the Supreme Court's recent ruling in Kelo vs. New London, one of those rights, as it has historically been understood, no longer exists.

The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution allows governments to take private property for "public use" as long as just compensation is provided. Since our country's founding, the courts have interpreted this amendment to allow governments to take private property for public facilities – roads, parks, government buildings, etc. In the New London case, however, the Supreme Court ruled that local governments may condemn non-blighted private property and take it to make way for other private landowners as part of an economic development plan.

Since the Fifth Amendment is no longer interpreted to protect your private property rights from government takings, your city can now force you to sell your home at a price it determines to be fair. Your only choice is to watch the bulldozers come in and to begin looking for a new home.

The decision is difficult to square with the American tradition of protecting individual rights. In fact, it is difficult to imagine a court decision that could have more harmful effects on the rights of average citizens, the poor and the politically powerless. Revenue-hungry governments can now team up with revenue-hungry big business to bulldoze the homes of average citizens, whose Fifth Amendment protections no longer exist. The Kelo decision is one more example of Americans being forced to surrender their individual rights to ever increasing government power.

Property rights advocates around the country were rightly outraged by this decision.

The backlash to the court decision is widespread and includes efforts at the national and state level. Sen. John Cornyn has introduced a bill that would prohibit federal monies from going to state and local governments that use eminent domain for economic development.

At the state level, a constitutional amendment has been introduced in the Texas State Legislature that would ban the use of eminent domain to support private interests. The governors of Georgia and Missouri and legislators in Florida, Oklahoma and New Hampshire have created committees to review eminent domain practice in their states. Movements to restrict the use of eminent domain have cropped up everywhere from New Jersey to Alaska.

It is time for Minnesota to join these other states in acting to restore some fairness to government's eminent domain powers. The Legislature should start by prohibiting local governments from taking property solely for the purpose of increasing their tax revenues.

I am a strong believer in Minnesota's tradition of local control and prefer that most power be exercised at the local level. Fundamental freedoms like property rights, however, are so sacrosanct they must be safeguarded from any government usurpation.

When the courts overreach, it is up to the citizens and our representatives in the legislative branch to secure our rights. Because the Supreme Court has failed, the Minnesota Legislature must act. Full property rights, including protection from eminent domain for non-public uses, should be restored to Minnesotans.

Powering the Plains praises extension of tax credit for renewable energy

With passage of the federal energy bill, state officials, utility and industry executives, farmers and environmentalists are praising the region's congressional delegation for its successful bipartisan push to secure a two-year extension of the federal renewable energy production tax credit (REPTC). The credit will help sustain development of a wind industry with $1.4 billion of installed capacity in the Upper Midwest and growing rapidly.

Concluding that temporary federal subsidies yield benefits greater than their cost in the development of wind energy, Powering the Plains (PTP) participants from across the region endorsed a multi-year extension of the credit this spring and urged Congress to pass such a provision as soon as possible. PTP is an energy policy initiative of the nonprofit Great Plains Institute that brings together public, private and nongovernmental representatives from Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Manitoba, Canada.

"Wind is the fastest growing energy source in the world, expanding at a rate of 20 to 30 percent per year, but that growth has been hindered in the U.S. due to the on-again, off-again nature of the REPTC," said Brad Crabtree, PTP director. "Congress making the credit available through 2007 averts another harmful round of boom-and-bust in the industry."

"I've been developing wind projects in Minnesota for some time now, and I can say from experience that consistency in the federal production tax credit is essential to growing this young industry," said southeast Minnesota businessman Garwin McNeilus. "We can get rid of the credit eventually, but right now it's essential. Congress got this right."

Consistency in the production tax credit for wind has been hard to come by. Michael Noble, executive director of Minnesotans for an Energy Efficient Economy, said, "When the REPTC lapsed in 2004, wind development nationwide virtually ground to a halt. For a state like Minnesota, which jockeys with Iowa for third and fourth in wind development, such pendulum swings have real economic consequences."

"Congressional action could not have come at a more critical time," said State Sen. Ellen Anderson (DFL-St. Paul), chairperson of the Jobs, Energy and Community Development Committee and PTP Policy Work Group participant. "The state of Minnesota has done a lot to encourage wind development, but we need the federal government as a partner along with private industry. Members of Congress deserve our thanks for supporting the extension of the credit, which is critical to building on Minnesota's leadership in wind power."

Executive Director of the nonprofit Wind-on-the-Wires and PTP participant Beth Soholt echoed that sentiment. "Wind projects in the pipeline for 2006 can move forward with certainty now, thanks to this extension by Congress, although we could frankly use even longer-term predictability in the federal credit if we want to see more wind development and new transmission lines built to carry that wind power to market," she said.

Unpredictability in the REPTC has disrupted wind farm development and financing, and driven projects and contracts to larger companies best able to weather the uncertainty.

"This has hurt businesses in our region who seek to become national leaders in this rapidly expanding industry," said Crabtree. "This extension will not only help the industry, but will also encourage innovative community approaches to wind development that use the credit as a financial tool for helping farmers and ranchers own the turbines themselves."

Confidentiality bill passes in Minnesota

Thanks to the help of the livestock industry, the Minnesota Board of Animal Health (BAH) has announced the Minnesota Legislature has passed a bill to ensure confidentiality of premises and animal data information collected as part of the National Animal Identification System (NAIS).

BAH, the Minnesota Department of Agriculture and University of Minnesota Extension Service are working together to register all Minnesota livestock premises (farms, auction markets, processing plants, etc.) by the end of the year. The state has received funding from the United States Department of Agriculture to implement a premises identification system and to begin work on livestock identification in the state. In the event of a disease outbreak, the goal of the NAIS is to be able to trace potentially exposed livestock within 48 hours.

Minnesota's voluntary NAIS program has already assigned over 7,300 national premises identification numbers. The passage of this confidentiality bill is a great advancement for the future establishment of an animal identification system in Minnesota and can only help the program grow, said NAIS Program Manager Dave Wiklund.

"This legislation will go a long way towards protecting our producers' private information," added Wiklund. "I expect this to boost our NAIS program in Minnesota. I'm thankful that so many Minnesota producers are interested in helping us develop a NAIS program that will work for our state."

Dayton blasts Coleman on CAFTA vote

U.S. Senator Mark Dayton issued the following statement on the Minnesota delegation's position on Central American Free Trade Agreement, taking particular issue with Mark Kennedy and Norm Coleman's support for the bill:

"Senator Norm Coleman and Congressman Mark Kennedy betrayed the sugarbeet growers, workers, co-op owners and operators, and civic leaders of west central and northwestern Minnesota.

"It is disgraceful that Congressman Mark Kennedy sold out the people of Minnesota for his own political fundraising. This is proof positive that he does not deserve to be a United States senator.

"I give great credit to Congressman Gil Gutknecht for his principled stance against CAFTA. He joined with Congressman Collin Peterson, Congresswoman Betty McCollum, Congressman Jim Oberstar, and Congressman Martin Sabo in voting against this detrimental agreement."

Sen. Coleman supports Bolton appointment

Monday, President George W. Bush exercised his authority to make temporary appointments without Senate confirmation when Congress goes into recess, to appoint John Bolton the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Lawmakers began their current break Friday. The recess appointment puts Bolton at the United Nations through the end of 2006.

Monday, Sen. Norm Coleman issued a statement in support of the appointment. "As the United Nations takes up the question of fundamental reform this fall, the United States needs a strong voice to articulate American interests. There is no one better suited to fill this important post at this critical time in history than John Bolton," said Coleman.

Coleman continued, saying, "Bolton has the toughness and the commitment to successful UN reform that is needed now. This nomination has been thoroughly vetted by the Senate, and a majority of U.S. senators support him.

"I applaud the president's strong leadership in making this recess appointment, and I am confident that Ambassador Bolton will be an effective voice for the United States at the United Nations."

The county fairs are held at this time and if you are an exhibitor, there are busy and exciting days. Not much else gets done. Good luck to those who try to keep these types of entertainment going for us. We expect a lot of company when the 100th year centennial comes around in August. Many are working hard on it already. Thanks and see you there August 25th to August 28 in Karlstad. The All School Reunion at that time will include Strandquist School which is now part of Karlstad School.

Last week, our friend Judy Kleinvachter celebrated her ? birthday with a real party by her children and friends. This week she was having a birthday party for her twins, June Kasprowicz and Joan Gerhis. They went to the Hobo Haus in Newfolden for dinner. The guests were Judy, June Kasprowicz, Alan and Joan Gerhis, Marie Steffen, Lois Kleinvachter and Jim Fredricks from Warren. Happy birthdays, Judy and her twins!!

David and Phaela Thompson have their grandchildren, Kimberly and Donovan Thompson from California visiting them this summer. Phaela brought them to visit their great grandma, Pearl Thompson in Karlstad. They are so cute!

Lloyd and Marie Johnson, Adam and Alexis Aakre, Elsie Lefrooth and Pearl Thompson visited at the Wadholm parsonage Wednesday evening.

Becky Johnson and her pet, Joey visited Pearl on Saturday. On Sunday evening, Isaac and Betsy Thompson and Elsie Lefrooth visited Pearl Thompson after church.

The county fairs are now a thing of the past but in August the Centennials are coming around for towns which were incorporated in 1905. I asked Judy Kleinvachter if she had been to the fair and she answered that she never had the fever to go there since that was haying time and that was a "must" to get done. This year, to get the hay put up has been almost impossible. Some folks have only been able to cut the hightest areas of their hayland and even then had to get there through water.

But Judy takes time to take her friends along to potato dumplings and dinners. On Friday, she drove to TRF and visited Marie Klienvachter in CC at the hosptial. Her visitors the past week were June and Kari Kasprowicz, Marie Steffen and little Paulina Berggren and Claudia and Kali Berggren.

Tom and Mary Lou Lundell of Minnetonka visited at Isaac and Betsy Thompson's. They were here to take home the John Deere tractor they had bought at an auction over the telephone last week. After they had it loaded on their trailer, they parked it at the Lundell farm while they spent a couple of days in Canada. On their return, they met Isaac and Betsy and Robert and Cathy Thompson for dinner at the Black Bear Grill. Tom Lundell had been trying to find the original John Deere tractor which was the first tractor his Grandfather Lundell had on his farm near Kennedy, but was unable to trace its whereabouts since he traded it for another one. This tractor was the same model that had belonged to a neighbor.

Sandy Hagenbeck of Sturgeon Lake and Betsy Thompson visited Pearl Thompson on Thursday. Becky Johnson and Joey had visited Pearl before they did.

On Friday, David and Phaela Thompson took their grandchildren Kim and Donavan Thompson and great grandma Pearl Thompson to the Black Bear Grill for supper.

RESIDENTIAL ANTIDISPLACEMENT AND RELOCATION ASSISTANCE PLAN FOR VIKING, MINNESOTA

The City of Viking anticipates participation in the Minnesota Small Cities Development Program. Through this participation, single family owner occupied housing rehabilitation will occur. The consequence of the proposed rehabilitation activities is that the potential for displacement exists although it is not anticipated. The purpose of the displacement minimization plan is to describe the steps the City of Viking shall take to mitigate the adverse effects of displacement on low and moderate-income persons and families. The City of Viking's plan is described herein. Although demolition or conversion of low-, moderate- income occupied dwelling units is not proposed, nor anticipated, the city will take the following steps if this should occur.

A. The City of Viking will replace all occupied and vacant occupiable low-to-moderate income dwelling units demolished or converted to a use other than as low-to-moderate income housing as a direct result of activities assisted with funds provided under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, as described in 24 CFR, Part 570.606 and 24 CFR, Part 42.

All replacement housing will be provided within three years of the commencement of the demolition or rehabilitation relating to conversion. Before entering into a contract committing the city of Viking to provide funds for an activity that will directly result in such demolition or conversion, the City of Viking will make public and submit to the Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development the following information in writing:

1. A description of the proposed assisted activity;

2. The general location on a map and approximate number of dwelling units by size (number of bedrooms) that will be demolished or converted to a use other than as low-moderate income dwelling units as a direct result of the assisted activity;

3. A time schedule for the commencement and completion of the demolition or conversions;

4. The location on a map and the number of dwelling units by size (number of bedrooms) that will be provided as replacement dwelling units. If such data are not available at the time of general submission, the City of Viking will identify the general location on an area map and the approximate number of dwelling units by size and provide information identifying the specific locations and number of dwelling units by size as soon as it is available;

5. The source of funding and a time schedule for the provision of replacement dwelling units;

6. The basis for concluding that each replacement dwelling unit will remain a low-moderate income dwelling unit for at least 10 years from the date of initial occupancy.

7. Information demonstrating that any proposed replacement of dwelling units with smaller dwelling units (e.g., a 2-bedroom unit with a two 1-bedroom units) is consistent with the housing needs of low and moderate-income households in the City of Viking.

The City of Viking may request the Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development to recommend that the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development approve an exception to required replacement housing if there is adequate local supply of vacant low-to moderate-income dwelling units in standard condition. Exceptions will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis as described in 24 CFR, Part 570.488(c)(1)(B).

B. The City of Viking will provide relocation assistance, as described in 24 CFR, Part 570.488 (c)(2), to any lower-income person displaced by the demolition of any dwelling unit or the conversion of a low/moderate-income dwelling to another use in connection with an assisted activity.

C. Consistent with the goals and objectives of activities assisted under the Act, the City of Viking will take the following steps to minimize the displacement of persons from their homes:

1. The City will not demolish any properties with State or Federal Funds.

2. The City will not convert any low- to moderate-income housing to any other use with State or Federal Funds.

D. Definitions for the purposes of this plan are as follows:

A "low to moderate income dwelling unit" is a unit with a market rental including utility costs, that does not exceed the applicable fair market rent for existing housing and moderate rehabilitation, as established under the Section 8 existing housing program.

A "vacant occupiable dwelling unit" is a vacant unit that is in standard condition; or in substandard condition, suitable for rehabilitation; or in dilapidated condition and occupied less than three months from the date of the grantee agreement.

A "occupiable dwelling unit" is a unit that is in standard condition or has been raised to a standard condition from a substandard condition, suitable for rehabilitation.

A "standard condition dwelling unit" is a well built unit with adequate space for persons living there. There are no major defects in the structure and only minor maintenance is required. Such dwelling units will have the following characteristics: reliable roofs; sound walls and foundations; adequate and stable floors; walls and ceilings; surfaces and woodwork that are not seriously damaged nor have paint deterioration; sound windows and doors; adequate heating, plumbing and electrical systems which don't present safety hazards; adequate insulation for local climatic conditions; and is in compliance with local building and housing codes.

A "substandard condition dwelling unit, suitable for rehabilitation" will evidence much deferred maintenance with permanent damage to structural items. Conditions contributing to substandard dwelling, include but are not limited to: sagging, cracked, rotting, or leaking roofs, walls, foundations, ceilings, floors, doors and windows; deteriorated surfaces and woodwork; unreliable heating, plumbing, or electrical systems which present safety hazards or inadequate insulation. The cost of rehabilitating the unit to a standard condition should not exceed the market value of the dwelling.

"Temporary Displacement"-Temporary displacement occurs when people move out of their dwelling, business or property for a short period of time due to activities of the Small Cities Development Program. Temporary displacement most frequently occurs with housing and commercial rehabilitation projects.

"Permanent Displacement"- Permanent displacement occurs when people move out of their dwelling, business or property permanently due to activities of the Small Cities Development Program.

"Displaced Person"-Any person permanently and involuntarily displaced will be subject to the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 as amended. The term displaced persons means any person (family, individual, business, non profit organization or farm) that moves from real property as a direct result of rehabilitation, demolition, or acquisition for a Small Cities Development Program project.

RESOLUTION OF ADOPTION OF RESIDENTIAL ANTIDISPLACEMENT AND RELOCATION ASSISTANCE PLAN

BE IT RESOLVED THE CITY OF VIKING HEREBY ADOPTS THE RESIDENTIAL ANTIDISPLACEMENT AND RELOCATION ASSISTANCE PLAN FOR THE CITY OF VIKING, MINNESOTA.

I certify that the above resolution was adopted by the City Council of Viking, Minnesota on August 1, 2005.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS JUNE 28, 2005 – 5:00 P.M.

Pursuant to adjournment the Pennington County Board of Commissioners met in the Pennington County Board Room in Thief River Falls, MN, Tuesday, June 28, 2005, at 5:00 p.m. Members present: Bob Carlson, Arden "Bud" Comstock, Donald Jensen, Oliver "Skip" Swanson, and Charles Naplin. Members absent: None.

Ken Yutrzenka, Human Services Director, presented the consent agenda and recommendations from the June 21, 2005 Human Services Committee Meeting. On a motion by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Jensen, the following recommendations of the Pennington County Human Service Committee for June 21, 2005 (detailed minutes on record at Pennington County Human Services) are hereby adopted. Motion unanimously carried.

Section A

I. Approval of the minutes from the May 17, 2005 Human Service Committee meeting.

II. Approval to extend Purchase of Service Agreements scheduled to terminate June 30, 2005 until current Special Legislative session is completed.

Section B

I. Approval of the Agency's case activity as presented.

II. Approval for payment of the Agency's bills as listed.

Moved by Commissioner Comstock, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to approve the Widseth, Smith, and Nolting quote of $3000 for a survey of the Solid Waste facility. Motion unanimously carried.

County Engineer Mike Flaagan and Dale Cloose from Country Estates, both present, informed the Board that they will be attending the Smiley Township meeting on July 21, 2005 at 7:00 p.m. Mike stated that the survey will be done before the contractor works on the end roads.

Mike Flaagan requested approval of the purchase of a new network server, and he is expecting to spend approximately $6,000. He has received one quote of $5,500 for a server and a tape drive from Insight Technologies, but would like to also get a quote from the MNDOT contract provider. Moved by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Comstock, to authorize obtaining a quote from the MNDOT contract provider and the subsequent purchase of a network server. Motion unanimously carried.

Mike also discussed the cleaning of J.D. #18 on the north side of Section 19 in Goodridge Township in order to improve water flow. He stated that the spoil may need to be hauled away, so he will look for a close location to haul it to before any action is taken,

In regards to the MNDOT shutdown, Mike said that the County may still get payments through State Aid. He also mentioned that the Transportation Bill, amounting to approximately $286 billion, is currently being sent through both Houses.

Mike mentioned that the Pennington County Fair is coming soon and for the previous two years the Board has granted $4,000 in assistance. Moved by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Comstock, to authorize up to $4,000 in material and labor for the Pennington County Fair. Motion unanimously carried.

Mike then discussed the Welfare Department's parking lot and said that it is near completion, except that another approach is needed along with thirty concrete parking bumpers at an approximate cost of $33 a piece.

Engineer Flaagan then stated that Norris Thune contacted him in regards to drainage problems with the ditch along C.S.A.H. #7. Moved by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Comstock, to pay half the cost of cleaning the ditch along C.S.A.H. #7 for approximately .4 miles, conditional upon Norris Thune agreeing to pay the other half of the cost. Motion unanimously carried.

Anita Cardinal, Director of Inter-County Nursing, then discussed with the Board their need for more storage space. She proposed converting bay four of the old Highway Department building into two (2) 12' x 24' storage areas. Inter-County Nursing would use grant funds to pay for cement floors and a chain link fence, which must be used to keep records dry and secure. She spoke with Sentence-to-Serve and they have agreed to provide all labor free of charge. County Engineer Mike Flaagan said that they could use the space also and was in favor of the proposal. Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Comstock, to allow the Highway Committee to work with the County Engineer and Inter-County Nursing to develop a storage space in the old Highway Department building. Motion unanimously carried.

Joan Abercrombie of the Northwest Minnesota Multi County Housing and Redevelopment Authority, hereinafter referred to as "HRA", then met with the Board to discuss the Contract for Services with Pennington County. Joan stated that she met with the grant representative, and the housing rehab grant application will need to be rewritten at a cost of $2,700 payable to HRA. Moved by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Carlson, to approve the following Contract for Services between the HRA and Pennington County. Motion was unanimously carried.

Mike stated that not every landowner affected has signed the petition for C.D. #31, and after discussion by the Board it was decided that this petition will need more review. Mike said he will talk to the landowners who have not yet signed the petition.

Mike Flaagan then mentioned that the Department of Natural Resources (D.N.R.) contacted him in regards to the Gonvick Sportsman Club's desire to install a boat landing at Neptune Bridge. The D.N.R. said they would pay for the landing and the Gonvick Sportsman's Club would be responsible for maintaining it, so the County would assume no costs in the project. Moved by Commissioner Jensen, seconded by Commissioner Swanson, to enter into an agreement with the D.N.R. and the Gonvick Sportsman's Club for a boat landing at Neptune Bridge. Motion unanimously carried.

Mike Flaagan also discussed updates on County projects. Mark Boulevard is near completion, but still needs to be shouldered. The North Township road is to be started by Rude Construction later this week or early next week. Crack sealing is being worked on, but is coming along slower than expected. Mike hopes they will be able to finish on time and avoid penalty. C.S.A.H. #7 is currently being shouldered by Thygeson Construction. The hole by Pioneer Village has been filled in, and the City plans to touch it up soon. Mike stated that the survey for Country Estates has been started.

In regards to the Barzen Avenue project, he said that all the excavated material has been hauled out and the Class 5 material is being brought in. Mike also mentioned that Northern Paving has started working on C.S.A.H. #27.

Mike Flaagan then presented a letter from landowners in regards to County Road #73 being abused from trucks hauling material for the Barzen Avenue project. Mike said that gravel for the road has been hauled in and that the contractor must bring the road back to its original condition.

The Board then reviewed a letter from Marvin Grovum in which he states that he would like to drain his fields into Judicial Ditch #30. After some discussion the Board decided that a petition must be filed and that the request must be brought to a Joint Ditch meeting.

County Sheriff Mike Hruby discussed the Juvenile Sentence-to-Serve (S.T.S.) program and said that he believes they are short a supervisor. He stated that he would like to use $5,000 of the E.J.J. grant to hire a part-time supervisor. The position would last until December 2005 or when the money is gone, whichever comes first. Moved by Commissioner Swanson, seconded by Commissioner Comstock, to authorize the Sheriff to hire a part-time Juvenile S.T.S. Community Service Supervisor to be paid with E.J.J. grant money up to $5,000. Motion unanimously carried.

Sheriff Hruby also gave a report and discussed the board and care of prisoners.

County Auditor Ken Olson notified the Board that the Tax Appeal for Kmart has been cancelled for 2005.

Auditor Olson also gave an update on the M.C.C.C. tax package proposal. He stated that twenty counties plan to switch to a new tax system, sixteen want to stay with the current system, and the rest of the counties are undecided at this time.

The County Auditor then updated the Board on the Middle-Snake-Tamarac Rivers Watershed District resolution. The Marshall County Board met in regards to the resolution and it was decided that they will not hold a hearing in regards to the proposed violations.

Ken Olson then informed the Board that he and Deputy Auditor Kevin Erickson had met with Steve Pocharich from Minnesota Counties Insurance Trust (M.C.I.T.) in regards to the County's safety program and policies. After discussion it was decided that the County Safety Committee should be reorganized and meet again.. Mr. Pocharich said he would like to attend the first meeting of the Safety Committee to assess the County's situation.

Ken then stated that Heidi Hoks from the regional library had contacted him and stated that she would like to meet with the Board soon for her annual meeting and budget report.

The Board broke for lunch at 12:00 p.m. and reconvened at 1:30 p.m.

Sue Schwartz, of Ecumen Consulting Services, along with Kathy Wentz, Angela Malone, Carmen Larson, and Margo Peterson of Oakland Park Nursing Home, then presented a facility assessment of the Home to the Board. Sue Schwartz stated their findings indicate that the facility is structurally sound but is need of some help. Ecumen currently manages 23 nursing homes and believes they could improve the financial situation of Oakland Park if given the chance to manage it. Sue then discussed with the Board a three- year management agreement. She will provide a copy of this agreement to the Board and to the County Attorney for review. Motioned by Commissioner Carlson, seconded by Commissioner Jensen, to take up the issue at the next Oakland Park Board meeting. Motion unanimously carried.

He stated that equity adjustments were made this year to bring the salaries of some educators up to a competitive and fair level. In doing this, some educators did not receive the salary increases they felt they were entitled too. Nathan assured the Board that this was due entirely to the equity adjustments and not to poor job performance and/or ratings.

City of Viking
City Clerks Office
Viking, MN 56760
(218) 523-3161

TO ALL INTERESTED PARTIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

The purpose of this notice is to identify two separate but related actions to be taken by the City of Viking, Minnesota.

The above named local unit of government will request the Business and Community Development Division, Small Cities Development Program, Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development (DEED), to release Federal funds (see Notice of Intent to request Release of Funds, below) under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended (PL 98181) for the following project:

PROJECT TITLE:

The Viking Small Cities Project

NATURE OF PROJECT:

To engineer and construct a sanitary sewer collection and treatment system and rehabilitate substandard owner occupied residential units.

PROJECT LOCATION:

The City of Viking, Minnesota - Census Tract #9802.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

It has been determined such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and the abovenamed local unit of government has decided not to prepare an environmental impact statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91190).

The reasons not to prepare such statement are as follows:

1. There will be no long term negative impacts on the environment resulting from the project to be undertaken with Small Cities Development Program funding.

2. Activities impacting possible historical or archeological sites will be reviewed by the Minnesota Historical Society to determine if precautions or other actions are necessary.

3. Activities which could impact water resources or prime agricultural farmland have been or will be analyzed by permitting agencies to the extent required prior to undertaking the activities.

4. Construction activities may create temporary noise or dust and efforts will be made to minimize these impacts. These impacts are expected to be minor, short term, and will cease upon completion of construction activities.

5. The positive impact of the proposed activities outweigh the negatives.

An Environmental Review Record respecting this project has been made by the above named local unit of government that documents the environmental review of the project and fully sets forth the reasons why such statement is not required. The Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the City Clerks Office from 6:00 PM to 9:30 PM Monday through Friday.

No further environmental review of this project is to be conducted before the request for release of federal funds.

The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the City of Viking, Minnesota may use Block Grant funds and BCD and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will have satisfied their responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

OBJECTIONS TO STATE RELEASE OF FUNDS

DEED will accept objections to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the above certification for fifteen (15) days following either the anticipated submission date (cited above) or DEED's actual receipt of the request (whichever is later) only for any of the following reasons: (a) that the certification was not executed by the certifying officer or other officer of the grantee approved by DEED (b) that the Environmental Review Record prepared by the City of Viking, Minnesota for the project has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; (c) the City of Viking has committed funds or incurred costs not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; (d) or another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality.

Friday the 22nd, Curt and Elaine Thompson attended the benefit for Cheryl Eveland held at the Heritage Christian School in Karlstad. There was a very good turn out, and there was so much good food there. It was nice to see Pastor Earl and Irene Eveland and visited with them a while again. They look good and say they are feeling pretty good.

On Sunday, July 24th, Elaine's two cousins came up to visit all their cousins, which they hadn't seen for quite a number of years. They were Corky Bakken of Hillsboro, N. Dak. and John Bakken from Salt Lake City, Utah. They met at the Newfolden park. Those attending were Conrad Skyburg and Robert and Shirley Olson of Holt, Marvin and Rose Nelson of Thief River Falls, Donald Skyberg of Fargo, N. Dak., Curt and Elaine Thompson, Harvey Skyberg, Floyd and Adeline Nelson, all of Newfolden, MN. All had a wonderful time getting to know one another again after not seeing each other for many years. We had snacks, pop & coffee. Many pictures were taken. The get together was on short notice but everyone enjoyed it. Then they had to be back at their jobs again.

July 24th Sunday forenoon Nathan Nelson, Hanna's grandson, Betty Peterson of Middle River, she is Hanna's sister, Gwen Hjelle, Richard and Pat Moen were visitors of Hanna Moen.

Curtis and Elaine Thompson drove to Warroad Thursday, July 28th to attend memorial services for Curtis' aunt, Thelma Kammen Evenson at Zion Lutheran Church. Paster Holmberg gave a wonderful message. I haven't heard a message like that for many years. Ray Green and David Landley were the vocalists. It was such beautiful singing.

Kathy and Kammers Harstad came up from East Grand Forks with dinner for Hanna. They also picked up Gladys Stromberg and brought her for dinner. They enjoyed a tasty meal and a nice visit also.

Anita Skadsem and Gwen Hjelle visited Hanna Moen on Monday. Gerald and Diane came and cut the grass for her.

Harvey Skyberg was an afternoon visitor at Curt and Elaine Thompsons on Friday the 29th to greet Curt's birthday and bring a gift. They had apple crisp and ice cream and coffee. It was very good. Happy Birthday, Honey.

Dave Carlson took over as chairperson. Wennberg also abstained from voting.

In the past, the cost was $1,000 per day to rent both the main floor and upper concourse of the arena. "There have been requests from groups to use just one part," said City Administrator Jodie Torkelson.

City Council approved renewing an agreement with the Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA) for the operation of concession stands at REA and the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center. Wennberg abstained from voting.

Under the agreement, the city will reimburse TRFAHA at a rate of 13 percent of gross sales minus sales tax for events staffed by TRFAHA members. The agreement covers Aug. 1, 2005 to July 31, 2006.

The agreement also stipulates that "TRFAHA will be given first right of refusal to staff concessions for events that require additional staffing. These events include city-sponsored events, hockey events and sport-specific events that the sport's support group or groups decline to staff."

City Council approved a Safe & Sober grant application for Oct. 1, 2005 through Sept. 30, 2006. Safe & Sober mobilizations include overtime enforcement patrols that, among other things, emphasize impaired driving and the use of seat belts.

The council approved a conditional use permit for an office building on the corner of Eighth Street and Dewey Avenue. Marc Hanson requested the permit to rebuild a former grocery store into an office building at that intersection. Hanson had to request the permit since office buildings are permitted as a conditional use in the Central Business District (C-1).

In a related matter, the council approved a 30-foot variance to the 35-foot buffer-strip requirement for the construction of that building. The variance enables Hanson to build a parking lot at that location.

A public hearing will be held at 4:55 p.m. Aug. 9 at City Hall. The public hearing will cover a recommendation for the city to vacate the frontage road adjacent to Barnick's First Addition. Following the hearing, the council will hold its regular meeting at 5 p.m.

Orville Hanson (center), a member of the Northern State Bank Board, and Bill Slininger (right), community programs director for Rural Development in Minnesota, presented John Tofte, vice chairperson of the Valley Home Board with a check for $3.5 million. United States Department of Agriculture Rural Development recently funded a $3.5 million guaranteed loan for Valley Home to construct a 24-unit facility for individuals suffering from memory loss. Northern State Bank of Thief River Falls provided the loan.

budget report. Heidi Hoks, director of the Thief River Falls Regional Library, presented a report detailing changes to the library for the coming fiscal year. Hoks and commissioners also discussed a new formula for funding the library and the possibility of a different library site. Currently the library is funded in part by contributions from Pennington County and the city of Thief River Falls, which are adjusted annually based on library usage among Thief River Falls and Pennington County residents.

- The board approved advancement of county employee Joe Garry from step three to step four in compensation. Pennington County Engineer Mike Flaagen presented the request for Garry's compensation increase, noting that he had received other job offers and would be hard to replace due to his job performance.
- Flaagen reported that he contacted Marvin Groven regarding his request to drain part of his land into CD 30. Groven's original petition stated that he would like to drain into CD 18. Flaagen said the petition was corrected to say CD 30, but still did not specify how many acres he would be draining into the county ditch. No action was taken.
- Flaagen reported to commissioners that all affected landowners signed a petition for the cleaning of J.D. 31, a joint ditch running through portions of both Pennington and Red Lake counties. One landowner, Glen Osbjornson stated that he believes the ditch should be cleaned for an additional mile, all the way to the Clearwater river.
- Flaagen updated the board on County State Aid Highway (CSAH) 27 progress. He also noted that county-wide crack sealing is still in progress.
- The board approved an engineering quote for $9,900 from Widseth, Smith and Nolting for 2006 road work on an eight-mile portion of CSAH 6.
- The board approved a policy regarding emergency 911 signs. Flaagen stated that all emergency 911 signs are in place for rural residents. He asked the board to establish a policy where the initial sign would be funded by the county and any replacement of the sign would be the responsibility of the landowner.

The next meeting of the Pennington County Board of Commissioners will be 10 a.m. on Aug. 9.

Local business owners contemplate the impact of a future Wal-Mart store

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

This article is the first in a series of articles looking at the potential impact of the soon-to-be constructed Wal-Mart Supercenter on other Thief River Falls businesses.

A Wal-Mart Supercenter will soon loom on the horizon along Highway 59 Southeast. Just how that store will impact other local businesses is yet to be seen. However, local business owners and managers have been contemplating its impact ever since the company announced its intention to build a store here.

"I would say we view Wal-Mart as a two-edged sword," said Julie Olson, president of the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce. The edges of that sword, she said, included strong competition between Wal-Mart and other businesses, as well as Wal-Mart bringing more out-of-town shoppers to this area.

In April, a Wal-Mart representative expected that the store may be open in spring 2006 at the earliest. Construction work began in July at the site. The 155,000-square-foot store will sell clothing, food and other merchandise. It will include a tire lube express service and garden center. A Murphy Oil Corp. gas station will be located on another nearby parcel. A third parcel for another business is also located at that site.

At least two local stores may face direct competition from Wal-Mart for most, if not all, of their merchandise. One of those stores is Pamida, which will count Wal-Mart as its neighbor.

Penny Brang, Pamida manager, declined to comment on the potential impact of a Wal-Mart store on Pamida. However, she referred questions to John Vigeland, Pamida spokesman.

"We're fairly experienced in competing with them," said Vigeland. "In most cases, we see an impact, but not a long-term impact."

That impact depends on individual stores, Vigeland added. He noted the company typically sees a 5 to 10 percent drop in sales after a Wal-Mart is built in a city already served by Pamida. Generally, the Pamida stores bounce back after a period of time.

Kmart, which is located within a mile of the future Wal-Mart site, may also be affected by the store's construction. Nick Bosh, Kmart manager, referred all questions to the company's corporate office.

"We do what we do to compete; we look to set ourselves apart by our proprietary brands – brands that set up apart," said Stephen Pagnani, Kmart manager of media relations. He added that the company also tries to set itself apart with its prices.

Yet, at the same time, Pagnani said, "More shopping there can be very beneficial." He noted some people may shop at one store for one item and another store for another item.

The five most important consumer expectations

According to a University of Minnesota Extension Service workshop held in October, the following may help local businesses compete with Wal-Mart. The Extension Service notes these are the five most important consumer expectations when shopping locally:

1. Returns/satisfaction guaranteed,
2. Effective handling of customer complaints,
3. Store cleanliness,
4. Products being in stock, and
5. Knowledgeable sales associates.

Cancer Society volunteers pass the torch to others

by David Hill
Editor

At times, you just have to drop what you're doing and go.

Vivian Brekke and Marie Engen have subscribed to that philosophy throughout their service as volunteers for the American Cancer Society. When it comes to the needs of someone facing the difficult news of a cancer diagnosis, they above many others, understand how important it is to go to that person and let them talk.

Vivian and Marie announced on Thursday that they plan to resign as volunteers. Marie has resigned effectively this week. Vivian will stay on until the end of the calendar year to help train in and assist the three new volunteers she helped find to replace them. "I want this program to go forward," said Brekke.

"It has been a privilege to work with these people," said Julie Desrocher, volunteer director of the Pennington County chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Marie Engen has been a Reach to Recovery volunteer for 22 years. Vivian Brekke has been a Reach to Recovery volunteer for more than 30 years.

The American Cancer Society Reach to Recovery program has been helping breast cancer patients (female and male) cope with their breast cancer experience for more than 30 years and they feel it's time to let others take over.

The American Cancer Society offers this program because they say that when people first find out they have breast cancer, they may feel overwhelmed, vulnerable, and alone. While under this stress, many people must also learn about complex medical treatments and choose the best one.

Talking with a specially trained Reach to Recovery volunteer at this time can give a measure of comfort and an opportunity for emotional grounding and informed decision-making. Volunteers are breast cancer survivors who give patients and family members an opportunity to express feelings, talk about fears and concerns, and ask questions of someone who is knowledgeable and level-headed. Most importantly, Reach to Recovery volunteers offer understanding, support, and hope because they themselves have survived breast cancer and gone on to live normal, productive lives.

Vivian Brekke

Vivian and Marie are both cancer survivors - Vivian for 31 years, and Marie for 26 years. They understand the emotion and issues faced by breast cancer patients. But, Marie and Vivian say they never talk about themselves. It's about the patient.

During her years of volunteer service, Vivian kept careful track of all of the people she has comforted. "Over 300 people have come through the program," said Vivian.

Desrocher said that sometime ago she commented on the impressive numbers, but laughed and said Vivian quickly corrected her. "She told me those aren't numbers, they're people."

Vivian and Marie have always treated program participants as people rather than numbers, and they also strongly believe in another component of the Reach to Recovery program: complete confidentiality.

"In all the years," said Marie, "I've never even told my husband who I have been talking to."

Marie and Vivian believe the greatest comfort that they can provide is just listening, and that means keeping confidences. They say they often find that the need is so desperate that "at times," said Vivian, "you just have to drop what you're doing and go."

Marie Engen

These dedicated volunteers will be missed. At that point in the meeting when it was time to say goodbye and thank you. Desrocher said, "I don't have the words to express our gratitude."

Individuals interested in serving on the Pennington County Chapter of the American Cancer Society or learning more about its programs, should contact Julie Desrocher; or call the national number at 1-800-ACS-2345; or check out the American Cancer Society Web site at www.cancer.org.

Veral and June Mosbeck to be presented with Rural Beautification Award

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Veral and June Mosbeck, Polk Centre Township, have been awarded the Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District's Rural Beautification Award for 2005. Veral and June will be recognized during the SWCD's spring banquet in 2006.

Nominations for the Rural Beautification Award were received from township officials and the general public in Numedal, Sanders, Bray, Black River and Polk Centre townships, which made up the 2005 nomination area.

Barb Molskness, district coordinator of the Pennington SWCD, said that the Mosbeck property was chosen because of its rare and uncommon setting.

"It's such a peaceful and unique setting," Molskness said. "It's so far off the beaten path."

The secluded Mosbeck property is located in section nine of Polk Centre Township, adjacent to the Black River. The couple's house, garage and other buildings are not easily visible from any public road.

The Black River boarders the couple's yard on two sides and actually runs through the main driveway. Veral said the road is passable most of the year, except early spring when the river leaves its banks.

The remainder of the yard is bordered by a soybean field and a heavily wooded area, while the yard itself is wide open, featuring several structures that were erected in the 19th century.

Unlike previous beautification winners, the Mosbecks do not have one giant garden showcasing all the colors of the rainbow. Instead they have a large vegetable garden, an apple orchard and 18 flower beds spread out over several acres.

"We like it open," June said of the couple's many flower arrangements. "We could plant all these in one bed, but you get more exercise taking care of them this way."

Veral said that June and he perform gardening work together. Generally he is in charge of the vegetable garden, she is in charge of the flowers and together they share the responsibility of mowing and caring for three acres of grass.

The Mosbeck vegetable garden and surrounding soybean field, are located where a barn and barnyard once stood respectively. Noting the vegetable garden's size, June said, "It's kind of a big garden for two people, but when you're used to it, it's hard to cut back."

Included in the vegetable garden are crops of carrots, potatoes, rutabagas, corn, onions, different types of lettuce, beets, strawberries, water melon, musk melon, tomatoes, beans and broccoli.

Veral plants the various vegetables at different points during the year to ensure proper growth. He gave two examples of this. Rutabagas are planted no earlier than the fourth of July, so that they finish growing during the cool temperatures of the fall; while carrots are planted twice a year, to ensure optimal growing.

One unique feature of the garden is an irrigation system that pumps water from the Black River into any of the garden's north to south sloping rows.

"If we keep it up, we can water the whole thing in a couple of hours," Veral said.

A large garden like the Mosbecks, can a attract a wide variety of wildlife, so the couple spends much of its time moving fences to protect the vegetable crops from among others; rodents, rabbits, deer and raccoons. Veral noted that the corn needs a fence early on when its short to protect it from rabbits and deer and later when it seeds to protect it from raccoons, but in between it is pretty much left alone.

"It might be easier to invest in a dog," June joked, noting that dogs were their solution for many years. "But [dogs] can cause other problems."

A total of eighteen beds of various sizes, featuring a myriad of flowers and small shrubs, line the

Motorists cautioned about Highway 72 roadwork

The Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn/DOT) cautions motorists who may be using Highway 72 from Waskish north to the junction with Highway 11 in Beltrami and Lake of the Woods counties to expect delays for construction.

According to Bill Pirkl, Mn/DOT project engineer, work to replace the Waskish Bridge over the Tamarac River began July 11 and will continue until late October. Pirkl said traffic is restricted to one lane with an 11-foot width.

In addition to the bridge work, motorists will encounter a bituminous chip seal operation on Highway 72 from the junction with Highway 11 at Baudette to approximately 13 miles south. This work was expected to start Monday and is expected to last through the week. The chip seal project is a slow moving operation with loose rock and motorists are advised to slow down and drive with extreme caution.

A resurfacing project on that portion of Highway 72 from approximately 12 miles north of the Waskish bridge job to 11 miles north was also expected to start Monday. Work will begin with the replacement of four culverts with paving scheduled to start the week of Aug. 15. This project is expected to last until late September. Pirkl said traffic in this area will also be restricted to one lane with width restriction.

Mn/DOT is asking motorists traveling through this area to be extremely patient and to allow themselves more time to get to their destination.

This "roadeo" is an obstacle course designed to simulate everyday driving conditions. This includes turns, backing around corners, weaving, passenger pickup, offset street turns, diminishing clearance and emergency stops.

Classroom training this year included blood-borne pathogens and cultural diversity. These classes were taught by instructors from Century College in the Twin Cities area.

This is the fourth time in five years Tri-Valley has won this event. This is the first time Tri-Valley had two place winners. According to Tri-Valley, it is the first time the "roadeo" has had two place winners from the same transit agency.

THE Bus is the transportation division of Tri-Valley Opportunity Council Inc.

Two Tri-Valley Heartland Express Bus employees won first and second places at the Minnesota State Public Transit Bus "Roadeo" held Saturday, July 30. Roger Benitt (left), a Middle River resident and employee of the Thief River Falls office, won second place. Alan Altepeter, an employee of the Crookston office, won first place. Altepeter now has the chance to compete in the national "roadeo." (Submitted photo)

Steva participates in WaterWorks program

Thief River Falls resident Shelley Steva, a teacher at Red Lake County Central – Plummer site, was selected to attend WaterWorks!: A Drinking Water Institute for Educators. The workshop was held June 27, 28, and 29 at Detroit Lakes City Hall and the Detroit Lakes Water Services facility.

Sixteen elementary through high school science teachers from northwestern Minnesota attended this region-focused workshop on drinking water treatment and protection, which was sponsored by the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH), Minnesota section of the American Water Works Association, Science Museum of Minnesota, Hamline University, Toro Foundation and Detroit Lakes Water Services.

During the institute, teachers planned strategies to incorporate drinking water treatment and conservation into their science curricula based on the array of resources, data and information they experienced. They practiced water quality testing, sampled water-related investigations for their students, learned about the water issues facing the Detroit Lakes area, and visited the water treatment facility with Jarrod Christen, Detroit Lakes water/wastewater supervisor. A follow-up session is scheduled this fall.

Teachers who participated in WaterWorks received graduate credit from Hamline University or a stipend. Sections of the course were taught by instructors from MDH, Short Elliott Hendrickson Inc., Ultieg Engineering, Thein Well Co., Detroit Lakes Schools and the Science Museum.

Lincoln High School plans for a good start

Lincoln High School Principal Tom Hunt said he is looking forward to a very successful school year.

For public school students in Thief River Falls, school starts Sept. 1. Between now and then, there are lots of things for students to get done.

Hunt reminds incoming freshmen to attend freshmen orientation August 16 through 18. Parents should call the Lincoln High School Counseling office at 681-8672 and schedule appointments. Orientation will also include distribution of schedules and assignment of lockers.

Schedules for students grades 10 to 12 will be mailed out the week of August 22. Parents and students should check the schedules and classes and correct any errors. Hunt added that it is a good time for parents and students to sit down and set realistic academic goals. Juniors and seniors should check on SAT and ACT test dates, too.

Hunt mentioned that policies, rules and regulations will soon be mailed to parents.

Fall sports and activities will begin soon. Hunt said students should complete the activity forms before they show up for practice.

When students report to school on Sept. 1, they will find very few things that will be new - there was no major construction at the school over the summer season. Hunt said there have been a few changes regarding security, which involved some new locks and keys.

Hunt said he wants students to get off to a good start. This year, they will continue the silent reading program. The silent reading program involves setting aside 15 minutes of time each day for reading. This year, they will focus on reading for content - comprehension.

Campus Court Apartments offers affordable housing for students

Over the years, many people have worked together to make Campus Court successful in housing Northland Community and Technical College students and others in the community. Greater Minnesota Management, a non profit corporation, has managed the property the past few years. It values the leadership and collaborative efforts coming from Northwest Minnesota Multi-County HRA, the college, and the city of Thief River Falls.

Carla Torgerson recently managed the Campus Court office and has left to pursue her nursing career. Ron Konickson succeeds her as property manager. He began Aug. 1 and will work 20 hours per week, to include regular office hours Monday to Friday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Call Ron regarding leases and rent collection concerns during week day hours at 218-681-2341 or 218-689-0442.

Several years ago, hundreds of trees and shrubs were planted and staff reports that they are looking great. Also the vast lawns remain green and beautiful, all thanks to generous in-kind work. Other in-kind work includes help with adding a good security camera system.

All the locks were redone this summer, and new flooring has been added each year. Police continue to work hard to protect all the residents of Campus Court.

Farm Management Minute

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch.

Harvest the future

by Dennis Sevigny
Precision Ag and Small Business Management Instructor,
Thief River Falls

Accurate yield monitoring during harvest means you are in essence reaping two harvests. While harvesting your crop, it is important to be harvesting data which later can become valuable information.

Information is fast becoming one of our most valuable commodities in the agricultural industry. Information is one of the three key elements in the implementation of the practice of precision farming on your farm. The combination of information, technology and management, three critical elements linked with precision agriculture, will become a foundation for future decisions for many farm operations.

Rapid technological advances have spurred the implementation of precision farming practices throughout the industry. Technology now allows us to constantly measure harvested material as it passes through the harvester, assigns a location to that data and creating a map of the compiled information that allows us to visually inspect the spatial variation that exists. In this fashion, technology has set the stage for the implementation of a precision-farming plan by many farm operators.

Yield monitoring is quite possibly the best way to begin precision farming. If we utilize the current technology of Global Positioning System-referenced yield maps, we can assemble data that can be the information base for future management decisions. Now is the time to collect that data. At harvest time, as busy as it is, we must collect valid data which can become information of the future. To insure the accuracy and integrity of the information, we need to be diligent in our method of data collection. Yield monitors require geo-referencing, appropriate harvester adjustments and proper calibration to ensure the accuracy of the data that we collect, not to mention properly archiving our data for future retrieval.

The management segment of precision agriculture is constant. Management is based on a wide array of knowledge and information. Farm managers need to learn more about the methods of assembling data and how to synthesize the data into useful information. Much of this is truly ongoing and is a mix of information, technology and properly applied management practices.

Now is the time to harvest the future. As we gather this year's harvest, we can also gather data which becomes information for the future of precision farming. If we collect accurate and pertinent information on the yield of this year's crop, working with that information post-harvest will provide us with insight to the variability that exists in our fields. Once this information is established, it becomes the foundation for us to understand the differences of quality and quantity as it exists across the fields. Armed with the knowledge of this variability, we can make better management decisions about future cropping and fertilization methods. Future productivity can truly be enhanced through the implementation of sound precision farming decisions.

With the understanding that precision agriculture is a combination of information, technology and management, it follows that we need to acquire the data or information through the utilization of current technologies as a basis for the management decisions of the future. Now is truly the time to begin the harvest of the future. Obtain information from this year's harvest and begin your precision farming practices today; it may become the cornerstone for many more successful harvests in your future.

Grygla Fall Festival set for Aug. 27

Grygla's annual Fall Festival will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on August 27. Crafters and vendors are still needed for the event. For more information, call the Grygla City Clerk's Office at (218) 294-6292.

Meet the real "Rain Man"

Peek is a savant, an individual with extraordinary, almost unbelievable mental abilities. He possesses a photographic memory and has a rare, complex optical system that allows him to read two pages of a book simultaneously – the left eye reads the left page while the right eye reads the right page.

While an autistic savant can demonstrate extraordinary knowledge in two or three subjects, Peek has knowledge in 15 areas. The Center for Autism at the University of California – Los Angeles thinks Peek might be the only human being capable of that.

This event is free and open to the public, but seating is limited. Reservations are required. Call The Arc, Upper Valley at (701) 772-6191 to reserve free tickets.

Below decks, boiler rooms were among the first things flooded, so there was no steam to produce lights or electricity to start the dead engines. Third-class passengers in the lower part of the ship were overcome almost immediately while sleeping in their beds. Many died where they lay.

Second-class passengers barely had time to rouse themselves and make for doors and portholes to escape the frigid water as the ship began its death throes, rising up on one end and tipping many passengers into the cold water.

First-class passengers had a bit more time to try to make it to the lifeboats, but they, too, perished, despite the extra time. Only five or six lifeboats were launched, and only four floated free of the disaster area. Ten minutes after the accident, the liner lay on her side. In 14 minutes, she sank completely; creating a tremendous backwash that was enough to sink lifeboats that were still nearby.

Survivors told tales of unbelievable courage. Many of those who lost their lives died trying to save others. There was no time at all for rescuers to get to the scene. Two hundred thirteen bodies and the few survivors were gathered together by the rescue vessels, which included the Storstad, and taken to the little town of Rimouski, Quebec, Canada, where citizens did their best to help the living and respectfully care for the bodies of the dead, feeding and clothing survivors and building coffins. One survivor said of Rimouski that "It was the most wonderful place in the world." The people of Rimouski were true heroes.

Caskets were shipped back to Quebec and lowered to the docks to the sound of a single bugle. More than 10,000 friends, relatives and interested people watched in silence until sailors in dress white appeared, each carrying a tiny white coffin. Then many in the crowd burst into tears. One hundred thirty-four children died in the tragedy. Only four little ones survived.

An inquiry was convened in Quebec City to look into the tragedy on June 16, 1914. On July 11, the Honorable John Charles Bigham, Lord Mersey, delivered his findings. He found that Kendall, who was criticized for stopping his ship completely in fog, was not to blame, but found blame to be with Chief Officer Toftenes. And in Norway, a Norwegian inquiry board found the crew of the Storstad free of blame and stated that Kendall had violated protocol in his passing procedure.

Oh yes, the curse. Kendall of the Empress of Ireland was world-famous for his capture of a Dr. Crippin of Belgium. Crippin was wanted by Scotland Yard for the horrible murder of his wife, Cora. Crippin apparently tried to dissolve his wife's body in acid after murdering her, but when the body would not deteriorate properly, he buried her in the cellar of their London home. He then went on the run with his lover, Ethel LeNeve.

In 1910, Crippin and Ethel (who was traveling disguised as Crippin's son) boarded a ship captained by Kendall (not the Empress), planning to disappear in America. Kendall thought there was something odd about the pair, and befriended them in order to learn more about them. He contacted Scotland Yard with his suspicions and the pair was apprehended on the ship. As he was led off the ship, Crippin is said to have turned to Kendall and said, "You will suffer for this treachery, sir." Crippin was hanged for his crime November 23, 1910. The Empress of Ireland disaster took place four years later on almost the exact spot where the curse of Crippin was spoken.

Kendall, however, lived to be 91 years old and died November 29, 1965, in a London nursing home. He had survived the tragedy when he was thrown off the bridge as the ship shifted. Today the Empress of Ireland lies off the coast of Rimouski, near Father Point (Point au Pere). It lies in 130 feet of water within reach of scuba divers. Water there is 34 degrees Fahrenheit, even in summer time, and tidal currents run to five knots with limited visibility.

The Empress has been visited many times since the disaster. Those who visit the site say they feel the area is haunted. They say they can sense energy left behind from the terrible tragedy. They ask that those who have learned about the Empress today share this story of the worst maritime tragedy in Canadian history with others so that it will not be forgotten and the heroes will be remembered. And that is what I have done.

A bad case of Empty Nest Syndrome

Three weeks ago, the carpenters pounded the last nail on my new house, packed up their tool trailer and drove away – leaving me with a bad case of Empty Nest Syndrome.

Things got so quiet! No nail guns thwapped. No air compressor blasted every five minutes. No sanders filled the air with fine dust.

You look forward to the end of a big project, but when it finally comes, it is kind of a letdown. I moped around for a week.

As I walked around the vacant house, wondering what I would fill it with, my footsteps echoed. The carpet hadn't been laid yet, so the acoustics were like that of an empty high school gym. Not very homey.

Powdery dust covered every surface, horizontal and vertical. I spent two hours a day sucking dust with the shop vac – and the next day there seemed to be just as much in the very same places.

Then the carpet came. And I started setting the furniture around. And I got out the dishes and piled them in the cupboards. And I wiped off more dust. And I unpacked all of the clothes that I never wear and promptly packed them back into boxes again.

Every box is a Pandora's Box when you're moving in. Open one up and out fly the locusts of your past, stuff you've forgotten you had but, which now that you know you still have it, you can't throw because somebody gave it to you who might be crushed if they knew you threw it.

If only there was a way a person could arrange a selective accidental fire that would burn all the belongings that you can't bear to throw – I would do it in a minute.

Most boxes just went immediately to a shelf in the garage. The storage closets in the house filled up in 20 minutes. All of it is junk.

Then came the Pandora's Box of Pandora's Boxes: My old journals. I am a scribbler by avocation and have been writing down the events of my days and my profound thoughts concerning those events for the past 25 years in a stack of notebooks, which has now reached three feet in height – apparently with the idea that after my presidency is over, historians and biographers will surely want to know which dorm parties I attended while in college.

Kindling – that's what those notebooks should be. Instead, I got my nose into them and started reading about people I've forgotten and events I'd rather stayed forgotten – and pretty soon four hours went by and all I had to show for it was 40 notebooks strewn across the living room floor and a lot of dredged up bad memories muddying my mental waters.

To help cover the empty acres of carpet in the living room, a hunter friend brought over a bearskin rug made from a record-book bear he shot with his bow a few years ago. The thing is too huge for his trailer, but it fits perfectly in my living room, where its bared fangs and evil glare should scare the bejiggers out of visitors of all ages.

As for furniture, I was going to get rid of the stuff I had collected off the berms and boulevards of Grand Forks, N.D., during college and start afresh, but after the last round of bills for the house, I just couldn't stomach paying thousands of dollars more just for somewhere to sit.

So both the brown recliner from the '70s that a friend gave me out of pity and the black plastic rocker from the '60s that I stole from my grandpa are sitting right in the middle of my new living room where they will stay until I can find some no interest, no payments until 2009 deal at a furniture store.

I am told it takes years to make a new house a home. I believe it. It is going to take me a few months just to clear out the garbage!

PARENTING TIPS
When Your Toddler Hits!

As the title, "When Your Child Hits" implies, all children hit other children and will be hit. The question, then, is how should a parent handle hitting? According to some experts, aggressive urges are really a sign of positive development. In other words, your toddler is trying to stand up for himself and to protect himself and is actively pursuing what he wants. However, this does not mean that you should allow this behavior to continue. Your child's behavior must be shaped to the rules and expectations of society.

There is a big difference, however, between teaching a child to suppress his aggressive urges and teaching him to channel them. You want your child to know that his behavior is unacceptable to you. You also want him to know that while you are unhappy about his hitting, you do not disapprove of his standing up for himself. Therefore, you will need to offer your child alternatives to hitting.

Parents Magazine offers these alternatives:

- Set limits
- Expect appropriate behavior from your child
- Don't use hitting to discipline
- Be a good role model
- Don't shame your child
- When a child is hit, step in and offer protection
- Keep your message brief
- Redirect behavior

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Help your child to use words instead of blows. Even a toddler can say "Don't!" and "Mine!" Also, teach your child to ask for things rather than grab for them.

"When the Warflowers Bloomed" is the story of an American infantry company commander who liberates a Nazi concentration camp and finds a starving and brutalized woman, a Dresden musician. They fall in love, and it is their story – never told in fiction before – through the final battles of the war, the liberation of the concentration camps and the dangerous and suppressive early occupation of Germany from April to October 1945.

Vraa is a 1953 graduate of Lincoln High School, where he was active in band, dramatics, The Lincoln Log and sports. He received a bachelor's degree from Concordia College in Moorhead and his Ph.D. in counseling psychology from the University of North Dakota, where he taught for 11 years. During the last 25 years of his career, he had a private practice in Minneapolis.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q: Does much money from Social Security benefits come to this area?

A: Yes. As of December 2004, 15.2 percent of the total Minnesota population (775,460 people) and 18.0 percent of both the North Dakota (114,167 people) and South Dakota (139,053 people) populations received Social Security each month from a combination of retirement, survivor, and disability benefits. In dollars, this equaled about per month $686,494,000 for Minnesota, $93,435,00 for North Dakota and $112,608,000 for South Dakota. Specific county by county statistics for all states, as of December 2004, are located on the SSA Web site at http://www.socialsecurity.gov/policy/docs/statcomps/oasdi_sc/index.html

Did you know?: Social Security marks its 70th anniversary in August. President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the original Social Security legislation on August 14, 1935. For seven decades now, it has protected our elderly against poverty and assured young people of a more secure future. Social Security originally was envisioned as a program for retired workers. Since 1935, the program has evolved to one that now covers the families of both retired and deceased workers as well as those who can no longer work due to a disability. Social Security is the foundation of financial security for almost every American family through its valuable package of retirement, disability and survivors insurance. However, the Social Security system is facing serious future financing problems, largely related to demographics.

When the Social Security program was created in 1935, a 65-year-old American had an average life expectancy of 12 1/2 more years; today, it is 17 1/2 years and rising. However, this good news also means a strain on Social Security's finances. In just a few years, 78 million "baby boomers" will begin retiring, and in about 30 years, there will be twice as many older Americans as there are today. At the same time, the number of workers paying into Social Security per beneficiary will drop from 3.3 today to about 2 in 2031. Social Security has evolved through the decades to meet the challenges before it. It is important that we address these issues to ensure Social Security continues to provide a foundation of protection for future generations. See the SSA Web site at www.socialsecurity.gov for more information about the history of SSA and its future.

Today is deadline for "Home Stretch" home buyer workshop

Buying a home is one of the most important decisions that a person makes today. In order to prepare home buyers for this important step, the University of Minnesota Extension Service and Minnesota Housing Financing Agency will offer a "Home Stretch" Home Buyer Workshop on Thursdays, Aug. 11, 18 and 25. The workshops will be held from 7 to 9:45 p.m. in the Courthouse meeting room, Thief River Falls.

The three-session workshop is designed for the first-time home buyers of low to moderate income; for homeowners ready to finance a contract for deed; or for persons just interested in exploring the possibilities of home ownership.

Participants will gain a thorough understanding of the home buying process. They will find out – how much home they can afford, what lenders look for in a buyer, how to eliminate the barriers to home ownership, and what kinds of mortgage assistance programs are available. Various speakers from agencies or companies that work with home buyers will present the material and answer questions.

A certificate of completion will be provided to all participants who attend all three workshop sessions. Many lending programs now require completion of a home buying workshop to be eligible for their mortgage products.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per household. Call the Pennington County Extension Office at 218-683-7030 or 1-800-681-2116 to receive a registration brochure with more information. Registration deadline is Wednesday, August 10 (today).

Looming in the future...

Local business owners contemplate the impact of a future Wal-Mart store

Falls, doesn't foresee that Wal-Mart will have much impact on his store.

"We really don't think they will," said Evenson. "We've talked to other Sears stores, and it hasn't affected them. We think the first couple months, we'll see a difference because everyone will want to check the Wal-Mart out."

If he were to see any difference in sales, Evenson said, "We could see a little bit drop in vacuum cleaners, maybe your small TVs, microwaves, something like that."

Luther Johnson, manager of JC Penney, thinks the opposite is true of Wal-Mart's impact on his store. Johnson thinks a Wal-Mart will bring more people to Thief River Falls, he said.

"The only thing I wish is they'd be right next to us," Johnson added.

Since Wal-Mart Supercenters sell grocery items, Hugo's and SuperOne Foods will compete against the future store.

"They're a very large, successful chain, without a doubt, so I'm sure it will have an impact," said Gary Anderson, manager of Hugo's. "I guess it will help us be more focused on what we're doing."

"I think the Wal-Mart will have an impact on all the businesses in Thief River," said Ross Dalzell, SuperOne Foods manager.

The Wal-Mart Supercenter will also sell CDs and other electronics. Joe Kezar, owner of Kezar Music, sees little, if any, impact on his business. "They're already here," said Kezar, who noted he's already competing with Wal-Mart due to society's mobility and the distance between Thief River Falls and Wal-Mart stores in Grand Forks and Fargo, N.D.; and Bemidji.

Local restaurants may also experience increases or decreases in sales. "I'm hoping to see busier daytime business and busier Saturdays and Sundays," said Jim Amundson with Pizza Hut, which is located near the future Wal-Mart site.

Arron Hendricks, co-owner of Café Rhombus, expects an increase in business. "The restaurant industry can definitely benefit from it, too," he said about the potential impact of a Wal-Mart store.

Hendricks added, "There's just going to be a lot more economic activity."

Located where a barn and barnyard once stood are crops of carrots, potatoes, rutabagas, corn, onions, different types of lettuce, beets, strawberries, watermelon, muskmelon, tomatoes, beans and broccoli. A series of shallow canals allow for easy watering of the entire garden in less than two hours. Veral and June Mosbeck recently won the Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District's Rural Beautification Award.

Mosbecks to be presented with Rural Beautification Award

many buildings on the Mosbeck property. Impatiens, petunias, marigolds and geraniums are the most abundant.

While the Mosbeck property would typically be described as modern by most who view it, in many ways it offers a historical perspective of early settlements in the area. The property, complete with its shallow crossing of the black river, was originally settled by the Erickson family in the 1870s. The Sorvig family later owned the property, before Veral and June purchased it in 1956 for $70 an acre.

Many of the original buildings remain, including a granary, concrete cold storage/smoke house and even the original outhouse, which is blocked off.

Veral said he wanted to tear down the granary several years ago, but the family discouraged the idea. Six years ago the couple's grandchildren decorated the 120-plus-year-old building, at June's request, by painting designs of sunflowers on the west side, farm animals such as a chicken and horse on the south and wildflowers on the east.

"We're just country, aren't we Veral?" June questioned.

The cold storage/smoke house is another building on the property that is close to a century old. The structure was built in 1923, is made of concrete and its ceiling doubles as a patio overlooking the Black River. Eggs and other items that needed to stay cool, but didn't require refrigeration, were stored in the basement; while the concrete slab that is currently used as a patio, once served as the floor of a wood shed.

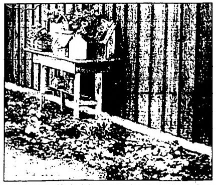
Though many of its historical reminders remain, the property has seen its share of change. Veral and June constructed a two-bedroom addition to the original house in the early 1970s.

"We needed more bedrooms to fit the family," Veral said.

They began construction on a new home in the late 1970s and original plans called for the two bedroom addition to connect to the new structure. Connecting the structures was later discouraged by the builders of the new home and the two bedrooms currently stand alone as a guest house or a place for storage. Like the property's other buildings, it too is decorated with appropriate landscaping and features the same natural beauty that is displayed with the rest of the property.

In total, the Mosbecks commit the equivalent of what could be a full-time job to maintaining their property. Working together on their chores, which include mowing three acres of grass, the couple spends an average of 22 hours a week maintaining the yard, garden and flower beds.

June Mosbeck doesn't waste any time when it comes to maintaining her many flower displays. June and her husband, Veral, have been awarded the Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District's Rural Beautification Award.



The back of the Mosbecks' garage provides plenty of shade for a flowerbed featuring impatiens. The bed is one of 18 located on the Mosbeck property. Veral and June Mosbeck have been named the Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District's Rural Beautification Award winners for 2005.

Fall sports teams start practice Monday...

Prowlers, Pioneers gearing up

Students-athletes at Lincoln High School and Northland Community and Technical College will begin fall sports practice Monday, Aug. 15.

Northland football and volleyball players report Friday, Aug. 12, for orientation and physicals, then start practice Monday.

Aug. 15 is also the first day of practice for all fall sports under Minnesota State High School League guidelines.

While most teams have two weeks of practice before opening their schedules, the Thief River Falls girls high school tennis team has just five days of workouts prior to a Saturday, Aug. 20, season-opening appearance at the Park Rapids Area Invitational. The Prowlers' 2005 home debut will be a Wednesday, Aug. 24, dual vs. Grand Rapids that will be followed the next day by the annual Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Invitational.

Thief River Falls girls swim team schedule begins with the Monday, Aug. 29, Detroit Lakes Invitational. The Prowlers will also have invitational meets at Warroad and Bemidji, along with a dual at Park Rapids, before making their first home appearance with a Tuesday, Sept. 13, double-dual vs. Roseau and Detroit Lakes.

Two Thief River Falls teams will kick off the new sports season Thursday, Aug. 30. The boys and girls cross country teams will be at the Moorhead Invitational that morning, while the Prowlers' volleyball squad has its season and home opener that night against Crookston. Thief River Falls' lone home cross country meet will be the Monday, Oct. 3, Prowler Invitational.

The Prowlers will start the football season Friday, Sept. 2, at Crookston. They will be at Hibbing in Week 2 before making a Friday, Sept. 16, home appearance vs. Detroit Lakes.

First matches for the Northland volleyball team will be played in a Saturday, Sept. 3, tournament at Buffalo, N.Y. It's a first-time venture for the Pioneers, who will arrive a day early for scrimmages before taking part in the tournament featuring National Junior College Athletic Association Division III teams from the SUNY (State University of New York) system. The trip is being financed by team members through fund-raising efforts and personal out-of-pocket expenses. Northland will be at home Wednesday, Sept. 7, against Itasca.

It will also be a Sept. 3 opener for the Northland football team. The Pioneers will be at Fergus Falls that afternoon. They will also be playing road games against Ridgewater (MCCC Kickoff Classic at St. Cloud State) and Central Lakes before making a home appearance Saturday, Sept. 24, vs. Minnesota West.

Practice for the Northland golf team will begin following the start of fall semester classes Aug. 22. The Pioneers' schedule includes the Sunday, Sept. 25, Northland Invitational at the Thief River Golf Club.

There is one new varsity head coach in Thief River Falls this fall: Rick Karboviak, who will direct the Prowlers' cross country program. He succeeds Cortney Christensen, who resigned from the position following the 2004 season, after two years with the team.

Returning to the Prowlers' sports staff will be Jeff Mumm, in his 21st year as football coach; Troy Hanestad, fourth year as girls tennis coach; Tammy Sparby, third year as volleyball coach; and Lacy Knott, third year as girls swimming coach.

Also returning to their positions are Jim Sims, Director of Student Activities for School District 564, and Deb Jacobson, Athletics Director at Northland.

The 14-15-year-olds won the Lake Agassiz League tournament played in Thief River Falls July 22-24 with wins over Win-E-Mac 11-0, Warroad 7-2, Fosston 4-3 and Kittson Central 13-6 to earn a spot in the Babe Ruth Intact state tournament. Thief River Falls lost state tournament games to Vergas 2-1 and Detroit Lakes 13-7 to finish the year 22-9. Members of the team included, front row from left, Joey Dongelinger, Nick Olson, Spencer Johnson, Cody Conners, Jordan Espeseth, Myles Keefe, Dustin Myklebust; back row, head coach Craig Peterson, Jake Collins, Joel Seim, Dan Nelson, Brad Holtman, Bryan Rambeck, Brian Hruby and assistant coach Ben Weigelt. ## Hunting, trapping seasons, regulations set for 2005

More opportunity to harvest deer, additional upland bird hunting and expansions in youth hunts were among good news items Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Commissioner Gene Merriam noted when he announced the 2005 hunting and trapping seasons.

"Hunting and trapping is enormously important to many Minnesotans and to the state's economy. The DNR is committed to conserving and managing natural resources to provide those opportunities in a sustainable manner," Merriam said. "In addition we're working to keep youth active and involved in the outdoors."

Several youth deer hunts that pair young hunters with mentors in controlled areas will be held again this fall. Youth opportunities for small game include Take-a-Kid hunting weekend (Sept. 24-25), Youth Waterfowl Day (Sept. 17) and Future Pheasant Hunters Weekend (Oct. 29-30). More details about youth hunting opportunities are available in the 2005 Hunting and Trapping Regulations Handbook.

Deer Season Changes

This fall, hunters will have more opportunity than ever before to harvest deer, thanks to regulation changes that include the opportunity to tag deer with both a firearm and archery license, an early antlerless season, zone realignments and the creation of a metro deer-hunting zone.

The new regulations, announced earlier this summer, were discussed at 15 public meetings held across the state. More than 800 comments were considered in finalizing the regulations.

"We hope to increase deer harvest in areas with high deer populations," said Lou Cornicelli, DNR big game program coordinator. "To do this, we're offering hunters more flexibility with deer licenses and more hunting opportunities."

The changes begin to take effect with the Sept. 17 opening of archery deer hunting. Firearms deer hunting begins statewide Nov. 5 and the muzzleloader season starts Nov. 26.

Upland Game

There will be additional pheasant, grouse and Hungarian partridge hunting opportunities this year as the season has been extended one additional day, through Sunday, Jan. 1. "This extension will allow families and friends to hunt during the New Year's holiday weekend and it will not harm pheasant numbers," Merriam said.

Populations of ruffed grouse remain near the low of their 10-year cycle. Many hunters were hoping this year's count would be higher, indicating an upswing in the grouse population, which tends to rise and fall in an approximate 10-year cycle. Counts have been at the low end of the scale for the past five consecutive years. At the peak, Minnesota's annual harvest often exceeds 1.2 million birds. The average annual harvest is 600,000 birds.

This will also be the second hunting season for mourning dove, the most widely dispersed and abundant upland game bird in North America. Last year, an estimated 15,000 hunters bagged 100,0000 birds.

Because Minnesota's dove hunt is regulated under federal guidelines that also govern southern states, the season will stay open for 60 days. However, doves tend to leave Minnesota when temperatures begin to drop near freezing, usually around the middle of September.

Populations of sharp-tailed grouse remain relatively low in their remaining range in northwestern and east-central Minnesota.

Waterfowl

Minnesota's breeding waterfowl populations were down 37 percent while pond numbers were up 22 percent in the May annual breeding duck survey. Duck numbers are very close to the state's long-term average since surveys began in 1968. However a look at the last 10 years shows that duck abundance is down 24 percent from the 10-year average, with duck numbers at the lowest since the drought of the late 1980s.

Continental duck counts are down 1 percent, according to preliminary estimates. Fall hunting success in Minnesota will depend on water conditions to the west and north of the state and on weather during the season. In addition, the DNR continues to work with other agencies and organizations to improve the quality of fall migration habitat and to provide more areas for waterfowl to feed and rest during migration. The goal of this effort is to restore to its historic level Minnesota's share of the Mississippi Flyway duck harvest.

Giant Canada geese that breed locally in Minnesota remain abundant and, along with migrant geese, provide Minnesota waterfowl hunters with excellent goose hunting opportunities. More Canada geese are taken in Minnesota than in any other state in the United States.

Liberal September goose hunting regulations will continue in many areas of the state in order to harvest as many local geese as possible before the migrant population begins arriving.

Moose

Moose populations in northwestern Minnesota are still very low and the season is still closed in that area. However, the northeast Minnesota moose population remains stable and 284 moose licenses were offered this year, up from 246 licenses in 2004, when state licensed hunters killed 127 bulls and 24 cows, for a party success rate of 62 percent.

Elk

A limited season with five permits will be held. The deadline for applications has passed.

New Regulations

Merriam advised Minnesota hunters to be aware of several new law and regulation changes in effect this fall. They include:

- Feathers, head and feet must remain intact until wild turkey are registered. Once registered, fully feathered head, wing or foot must remain attached during transport.
- Those registering fisher, otter, bobcat and pine marten must be at least five years old.
- Starting March 1, 2007, trappers born after Dec. 31, 1989 must have a trapper education certificate or a previous trapping license.
- Raccoons may be pursued and treed in the closed season without a permit.
- .30 caliber M-1 carbines are now legal for big game hunting.

Minnesota will have 60-day duck season

Minnesota waterfowl hunters will have a 60-day duck season and four-duck daily bag limit, including one hen mallard, the Department of Natural Resources announced this week.

The duck harvest in the Mississippi Flyway dropped by about 1 million birds last year from 2003. Minnesota's harvest declined 23 percent while Missouri declined 30 percent, Illinois was down 32 percent and Louisiana was down 39 percent.

Minnesota's breeding duck population was the lowest since the drought years of the 1980s, according to annual aerial survey data. Mallards, down 37 percent from 2004, and blue-winged teal, down 45 percent, comprise about two-thirds of the state's duck population.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which allows states to set up to a six-bird daily limit, lowered the scaup limit from three to two this year for all flyways in response to continued decline in the continental scaup breeding population. Better nesting success for Eastern Prairie Population Canada geese enabled the DNR to add 15 days to the West-Central Goose Zone, extending the season through Thanksgiving. Ten days were added to the statewide goose season.

Duck Season

Waterfowl seasons will open Saturday, Oct. 1, at 9 a.m. and continue through Nov. 29. The four duck bag may include no more than one hen mallard, one black duck, one pintail, two wood ducks, two redheads and two scaup. One canvasback will be allowed from Oct. 8 through Nov. 6. Possession limits are twice the daily bag limits.

Except for opening day, when shooting hours will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., shooting hours will be from one-half hour before sunrise to 4 p.m. daily through Saturday, Oct. 8, and from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset beginning Sunday, Oct. 9, through the close of the season.

Youth Waterfowl Day

Youth Waterfowl Hunting Day will be Saturday, Sept. 17. Hunters age 15 and under may take regular season bag limits including one canvasback when accompanied by a non-hunting adult (age 18 and older, no license required). Canada geese, mergansers, coots and moorhens may be taken from one-half hour before sunrise to 4 p.m.

Five geese may be taken, except in the Metro, Southeast and Northwest goose zones and Carlos Avery Wildlife Management Area and Swan Lake area, where the bag limit is one.

There are no license requirements, except hunters age 13 to 15 must have a firearms safety certificate in their possession.

Goose Seasons

Minnesota's regular goose season will open in conjunction with the duck season Saturday, Oct. 1, except for Canada goose seasons in the West-Central Goose Zone, which will open on Thursday, Oct. 20. The daily bag limit will be one goose in the Northwest, West-Central and West zones. Two geese may be taken in the remainder of the state, including the Metro and Southeast zones. Possession limits are double the daily bag limits.

The early Canada goose season will open statewide on Saturday, Sept. 3. The September season is designed to harvest as many Minnesota-breeding geese as possible.

A $4 permit, valid for both early and late season goose hunting, is required.

The restriction prohibiting hunting within 100 yards of surface water remains in effect in the Northwest, Southeast, and Metro goose zones, the Carlos Avery Wildlife Management Area and an area surrounding Swan Lake in Nicollet County.

The regular Canada goose season will be 40 days in the Northwest and West goose zones, from Oct. 1 through to Nov. 9. The daily bag limit will be one Canada goose in these zones.

In the West-Central Zone, the 40 day regular Canada goose season will be Oct. 20 to Nov. 28. The daily bag limit will be one Canada goose.

The remainder of Minnesota, including the Metro and Southeast zones, will have a 70 day Canada goose season from Oct. 1 to Dec. 9, with a bag limit of two Canada geese daily.

December Canada goose seasons will be offered statewide except in the West-Central Goose Zone. Late season hunters must have a $4 permit, which is valid for both early and late special goose seasons. The late season will be open Dec. 10 to Dec. 19, except in the Southeast Goose Zone, where the season will be open Dec. 15 to Dec. 24.

Bag limits for Canada geese during the late season will be five per day, except in the Southeast Goose Zone, where the limit will be two.

The season for light geese (snow, blue and Ross' geese), white-fronted geese, and brant will be Oct. 1 to Dec. 24. The daily limit will be 20 light geese, one white fronted goose and one brant.

GREENBUSH RACE PARK

from Bob Hultgren

Northern Late Models roared into the Greenbush Race Park Saturday night for the Budweiser Late Model Special. Eighteen NLRA cars were on hand on a beautiful night for racing action.

In the Late Model feature, Cody Skytland (Edmore, N.D.) jumped out to lead early from the pole. Manitoba racer Kevin Sexton would take the lead six laps in, and then hold off the pack for the win.

In the regular classes of racing action, Dan Wiskow (Roseau) started on the pole and led all the way for his seventh feature win of the season in the Mini-Sprints. Wiskow worked through lap traffic to keep in front of the second place car of Dennis Rantanen (Thief River Falls). Rantanen started seventh, but by Lap 4 had moved his car into second place. However, he was never able to close on Wiskow. Robbi Peterson (Middle River) made his first visit to the Race Park this year and finished a solid third.

In the NOPA Street final, Jamen Foss (Greenbush) got a great start from outside the second row, took the lead on the opening lap and led all the way for the win. While Foss checked out from the rest of the field and Tony Groenhoff (Salol) settled in for a strong second place run, the big battle was for third, where for much of the race, Steffan Snare, Doug Groenhoff, Jeremy Gust and Jim Geringer were locked in a close battle. When the checkered flag dropped, Snare (Hallock), the track points leader, was third.

Saturday night's races brought one of the most competitive fields of Super Stocks to the track this season. Dustin Strand (Bemidji) would lead all the way in a caution-free feature.

In the 4-Cylinder Stock class, Tabitha Wasylyk jumped out to an early lead, until car problems forced her from the track on Lap 7. Kurt Smith (Greenbush) took the point and led the rest of the way for his second consecutive feature win.

Next up for the Greenbush Race Park is the Wissota Super Stock Special Saturday, Aug. 13. The Wissota Modifieds, NOPA Pure Stocks, NOPA Streets, NOPA 4-Cylinder Stocks and Mini-Sprints will join the Super Stocks on the program. Hot Laps are at 7 p.m.

The Race Park is located one-half mile north of Greenbush on County Road 7.

The big day in town last week was the celebration of lovely Bertha Turnwall's 100th birthday! Hundreds of friends and relatives attended and also many of Bertha's students from the schools she had taught in during her tenure of school teaching. At least one of her first grade students was there-Betsy Thompson, who always mentioned the fact. The delicious luncheon was catered by the Englunds, ft all attending and to top it off, several of us were given a long stemmed rose to remember the occasion. Happy Birthday, Bertha.

Judy Kleinvachter, Kaye Turnwall and Lois Kleinvachter were Sunday supper guests of Jeremy and Tracy Folland. They enjoyed visiting and dining with Roberta Turnwall and Charles Newman from Colorado. The Colorado folks left on Monday by way of the Black Hills, S.Dak.

Visitors at Judy's home this week were June Kasprowicz, Wayne, Pat and Rebecca Larson, Marie Steffen, Lanna and Paulina Berggren, Charles Newman, Roberta Turnwall, Beau and Ben, Kaye Turnwall, Tracy Folland and Jim Fredricks. Though the summer weather hit some high numbers last week, it's more fun to visit in summer than have to get through the snow and cold in winter.

Doris Send walked to Elsie Lefrooth's house and visited in the afternoon. Elsie is having her entrance fixed today. The cement will help so she won't be falling on the ice that builds up by her door.

Bethany Janssen visited at Paul and Shirley Anderson's on Tuesday until Friday. Dale and Dodie Bernard, Brandy and Nicole of Ashland, Mont. were guests at Eva Bernard's and Paul and Shirley's last week. Tuesday evening, Shirley and Kristopher Anderson and Bethany Janssen were supper guests at Eva Bernard's.

Friday, Paul, Shirley and Kristopher Anderson, Kenrick Anderson and a friend Julia, Bethany Janssen, Eva Bernard, and the Dale Bernard family all enjoyed a picnic at Wayne Bernard's in Shelly. Owen, Diane and Laura Hagen and Dillon Sax of Grygla also attended.

New Breakthrough Technology in Cataract Eye Surgery

Cataract surgery has become one of the most successfully performed surgical procedures in modern medicine. Now there is a new technique for cataract surgery that makes the experience easier and more comfortable for the patient.

The Clear Cornea technique makes an incision 1/8th of an inch long. The opening is so small, that in most cases, no eye patches or sutures are required.

When making this tiny incision, your doctor uses a sharp diamond blade that causes very little trauma to the eye and allows clearer vision more rapidly than with older techniques. Patients can return to normal activities with minimum interruption in their daily routine.

If you or someone you love has signs of cataracts such as blurred vision or glare, call or visit your local eye care provider and learn more about this new procedure.

News Items

"Louis Roy has been engaged to teach the Wylie school the coming year.

"There will be an eclipse of the sun on August 30, but you have to get up at sunrise to see it.

"The moving picture show in the hall last Monday was rather better than the average and drew a fair sized audience.

"Both sides claim to be confident of victory in the telegraphers' strike. In the meantime, the public will get poor service.

"James Brady of Red Lake Falls and A. A. Glenn of Crookston are at work this week fixing the north bridge. The timbers that the bridge rested upon were in very bad shape and are being removed and new ones put in. They expect to have the bridge ready for travel some time today.

"W. A. Gould of the Crookston Lumber company was here on Thursday. Mr. Gould had just returned from Red lake and states that the lake is higher than it has been for years and that the meadows on this side are covered with several feet of water. He was fully three miles from the river in a gasoline launch."

Lepperts Will Move

"The RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE learns that Leppert Brothers, the popular hardware merchants at Wylie, will move their stock to one of the new towns on the Great Northern's new extension in North Dakota in the near future and that Romsos Brothers, general merchants, are contemplating a like move. Both of these firms have been very successful since going to Wylie, but now that the railroad company has abandoned that line, they feel that they can do better elsewhere. They have been very popular with the people of their community, who will regret to learn of their decision to leave."

Girl's Parents Reside at Alexandria and Were Greatly Surprised

"Charles Lux, the merry-go-round owner who is at present located in this city with his outfit, figures as the principal of a romance at Alexandria in which Miss Ethel Edler of that place eloped from her home in his company and was married to him at Ada where the Lux riding gallery was engaged amusing the little folks last week. The ALEXANDRIA POST NEWS give the following account of the elopement:

"'Last Wednesday evening Ethel Edler left home to attend a meeting of the German Lutheran church. She did not return home that evening and the first intimation that her parents had of her whereabouts was Thursday. Her father, Charles Edler, received a telegram from Ada, Minnesota, stating that she had been married to Charles Lux and was happy.

"'The girl is but little more than sixteen years of age and looks younger than that. Lux has been coming to Alexandria for several years with a merry-go-round. His last appearance here was this summer. The girl's parents had no idea that the girl had a fancy for the fellow and were very much shocked over the affair. When the telegram was received Thursday it stated that a letter would follow. When the letter came, it stated that the girl and her husband would return if they could be assured that there would be no trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Edler had determined to make the best of a bad business and Lux and his wife returned Sunday morning, acknowledged their wrong doing and received the parental blessing. They returned that evening to Ada, where Lux is operating his merry-go-round. This will perhaps be a lesson to other parents who permit their daughters to spend too many evenings at the merry-go-rounds and other traveling amusements.'"

Bids for the construction of the new building will be received by Clerk Mabey up to the 16th of August at 7:30 o'clock p.m."

No Water Yet

"The matter of securing a water supply for the city water works system is one that is just now bothering the members of the city council. Thus far a well has been drilled down over 100 feet and no great amount of water has been discovered. How much further the well will have to be drilled is an unknown question. It is costing the city $6 per foot to have the well drilled."

Let's start out the school year right

For many students, school starts on Sept. 1 this year.

As Sept. 1 approaches, we will no doubt be bombarded by advertisements and other notices reminding us about the start of school. My mother greeted the start of the school year with great enthusiasm. With four boys in the family, it wasn't a mystery as to why she was so happy. Regardless of whether you perceive these announcements as an occasion for a joyous celebration or an opportunity to pout and throw a temper tantrum, the announcements should remind parents to renew their commitment to their child's education.

Among the 40 Development Assets identified by The Search Institute as building blocks of healthy development for children, a commitment to learning and support are seen as very important. Commitment to learning and support of education are separate, but are not necessarily exclusive. Without parental support, for example, students may not be able to demonstrate or exhibit the internal commitment to learning that will lead to success in and out of school.

Many school staff have noted in the past that it is disappointing when parents aren't involved in their child's education. To staff, children are at a distinct disadvantage if a parent doesn't show up for parent-teacher conferences, doesn't attend games, shows, and other activities. They say that without saying a word or doing a thing, a parent's non-involvement signals to a student that education isn't important. Is that the message you want to send?

It's August now, and there's less than a month left before the start of a new school year, so it's time for parents and students to start thinking about what they can do now that will help them succeed.

Top 10 Ways to Be Prepared for the Start of the School Year

During interviews, administrators came up with the following Top 10 ways to be prepared for the school year:

1. Know your bus number and bus stop. A good way for parents to help their young student, is by making name tags with students' bus number and bus stop on it and pin it to shirts or backpacks. This is often a very frightening experience for young students.
2. Attend open houses. This is an opportunity to visit the school and take the fear and anxiety of starting at a new school out of the equation. It's also an opportunity to meet the principal and student's teacher. High school freshmen should attend orientation.
3. Begin adjusting the sleep patterns of young students. Begin cutting back on how late students stay up at night so that they are rested and prepared for a new day.
4. Talk about routines and experiences. Talk about classes and schedules. Sharing personal stories about your experiences may take the fear out of a new experience and start of school.
5. Read to your child. Have your son or daughter read or be read to. According to the United States Department of Education, "In today's schools, too many children struggle with learning to read. As many teachers and parents will attest, reading failure has exacted a tremendous long-term consequence for children's developing self-confidence and motivation to learn, as well as for their later school performance."
6. Purchase school supplies. Teachers and administrators know from their experience with young children that though it's a minor thing, to a young child there is nothing more devastating than not having all the supplies they need.
7. Inform the school of any change of address or telephone number. Parents of new students should contact the district and register for school.
8. Become involved in school activities. Attend parent-teacher conferences, athletic events, academic events, and music performances. Join parent-teacher organizations. Volunteer your time. By the way, fall sports start on Aug. 15 in School District 564, it's time to complete all the proper paperwork that will allow students to participate in these programs.
9. Talk with your student about your expectations, and his or her goals. Attainable goals help children develop self-confidence, and a positive attitude toward education. Parents should also talk about how students act in school. Attitude, respect and responsibility are very important qualities that not only help students learn, but are useful outside of school, too.

For high school students, now is also a very good time to start thinking about the future - talk about career goals, class schedules and post-secondary school options.

10. Start out right. Make sure your child starts out each day with a complete breakfast, and comes to school ready to learn. Update immunizations and other records, too. (For college students, give high school staff some lead time to prepare transcripts and immunization records.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our land isn't safe from government taking it

To the Editor:

With little publicity, a huge issue is raging in northern Minnesota concerning the government's ability to take land away from private citizens. So far the government is winning. Yes, this is real.

The question is: Can government condemn land from a farmer and then turn around and use the land to start farming themselves? The impact may be more devastating than the Kelo vs. City of New London U.S. Supreme Court case because now the question is – can government take property from private owners and then go into farming or other business in competition with private enterprise?

The Middle-Snake-Tamarac Rivers Watershed District (MSTRWD) is condemning approximately 2,600 acres of land for the Agassiz Valley Project. The over $6 million project is supposedly for flood control – but only about 800 acres will be used directly for flood control – the balance is for wildlife enhancement and 640 acres, according to their plans, will be used for farming.

Remarkably, the MSTRWD boldly proclaims in their documents: "A portion of the project area is planned to be used to generate income either through traditional agricultural production and/or for native prairie seed production." They list 640 acres to be used as cropland with the incredible note: "The exact amount of cropland versus prairie is not known at this point..." indicating they could be farming even more land.

Since 75 percent of funding for this project is from Minnesota bonding funds, one hopes that the state Legislature does not support government taking of private property to engage in farming. Sen. LeRoy Stumpf, Rep. Bernie Lieder, and Rep. Maxine Penas have some explaining to do.

Apparently the Marshall County (Minnesota) Board of Commissioners who appoint six of seven of the MSTRWD board members (Polk County appoints the seventh), has sided in favor of government's right to condemn farmland for farming.

When presented with a resolution earlier this year that disapproved of "taking or condemning land for the purpose of raising agricultural crops or for other general farm practices by that agency or watershed district," the Marshall County commissioners refused to act on it. Further, the commissioners put back on the MSTRWD manager board – two members in this last year who strongly favor the Agassiz project – and favor using litigation to complete the project. (The vote on a recent reappointment of a MSTRWD Board member was Commissioners Bring, Boen, and Carlson in favor and Commissioners Larson and Vonasek opposed.)

Thus far, the MSTRWD has been successful in court. If they prevail, my question is – will any of our farms be safe from government taking? Do we live in pristine northern Minnesota or do we live in an old part of Russia?

Respectfully,
Elden John Elseth
Warren

ACLU - MN applauds ruling that protects inmate rights

The American Civil Liberties Union of Minnesota (ACLU-MN) applauded the recent Minnesota Supreme Court ruling in Carillo v. Fabian that inmates have a right to fair disciplinary hearings that require a finding "by a preponderance of the evidence" that an inmate violated disciplinary rules before imposing sanctions that extend the inmate's supervised release date.

"The current MN-DOC disciplinary procedures only provide superficial due process," said ACLU-MN Legal Counsel Teresa Nelson. "The court's ruling today will provide a meaningful way to determine whether an inmate is guilty of violating prison rules."

The case was a habeas corpus petition filed by Legal Assistance to Minnesota Prisoners on behalf of Carillo, challenging the imposition of discipline that extended his supervised release date. The ACLU-MN filed an amicus curiae brief with the Minnesota Supreme Court in the case arguing that the Minnesota Department of Corrections (DOC) inmate discipline process violates their right to due process because the standard for determining whether they have violated prison rules is too low. The current policy allows discipline, which can lengthen the time that the inmate is incarcerated, if there is "some evidence on the record" that points to guilt. Thus, an inmate could face discipline for prison rule violations even if the weight of the evidence points to his or her innocence.

The DOC argued that inmates do not have a protected liberty interest in their supervised release date and they did not have a due process right to more rigorous procedures to determine whether the inmate is guilty of violating prison rules. The Minnesota Supreme Court disagreed and held that inmates have a constitutionally protected liberty interest in their supervised release date. The court concluded that the "some evidence" standard of proof is inappropriate and that discipline must be based on a "preponderance of the evidence." The court noted the inadequacy and potential unfairness of allowing discipline to be imposed based merely on a determination that there is "some evidence" that points to guilt.

Kennedy: Helping rid our communities of meth

We must continue to work hard to make sure law enforcement and communities have the tools they need to fight this war against methamphetamine

by Mark Kennedy
U.S. Congressman

Our communities face many challenges, from keeping our kids safe in public, to the war on terrorism. But few have such immediate consequences as we face from methamphetamine. For years, meth's threat was underestimated. But it's now clear: meth threatens lives, safety and health, at great cost to all of us. It's going to take all of us working together to make sure we address the meth crisis. Right now, not enough resources are dedicated to local law enforcement making sure that our communities are free of methamphetamine and drugs.

A recent survey conducted by the University of Minnesota concluded that meth was involved in as many as 81 percent of child protection cases in the state. Further, 35 to 45 percent of meth lab seizures in the state were in residences where children live. This means that far too many children are being exposed to the toxic chemicals used in the extremely dangerous meth manufacturing process, as well as the toxic drug culture that tears our communities apart.

Also, when the National Association of Counties recently surveyed 500 sheriff's departments, they found that more than half the nation's sheriffs consider meth the most serious problem facing their departments and the families they protect and serve. It's a problem that affects all of us, and we must find a solution.

Consider the story of a young girl named Megan from a beautiful town in Minnesota. Megan got started on meth when she was in the seventh grade, at the age of 13. She liked it so much that in her words, she knew she would use it again and again. But when she couldn't afford her addiction, she, like too many other addicts, was exploited into prostitution to pay for the meth she craved, every second of the day. After hitting rock bottom at the age of 18, Megan is managing to pull her life back together now, after the five years meth stole from her.

And she has too much company in her treatment and addiction programs: about one in five of those treated for methamphetamine use in Minnesota are 17 years old or younger. It's necessary for Congress to act. We must help our law enforcement receive the tools they need to fight this crisis, and communities what they need to clean up its aftermath.

That's why I've introduced the Clean, Learn, Abolish, Neutralize and Undermine Production (CLEAN-UP) of Methamphetamines Act, which works to solve problems caused by production, use and abuse of methamphetamines by cleaning up farms and parks devastated by pollution, providing assistance to schools and clinics, and giving local law enforcement greater resources to fight the spread of meth and meth labs, through the "Hot Spots" program.

In addition to my legislation, there have been many efforts this year to provide the necessary tools to law enforcement and our communities. I was pleased to host Congressman Mark Souder (R-IN), chairman of the House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy and Human Resources, for a field hearing in June in Minnesota, to give the community the chance to voice their concerns, and learn about what steps we can all take to solve this problem.

At this hearing, called, "Fighting Methamphetamine in America's Heartland: Assessing Federal, State and Local Efforts," citizens, members of local law enforcement, and members of the Minnesota congressional delegation were all able to discuss openly the relationship between all parties, and figure out how we can all help each other to rid our communities of this poison that aims to harm our children.

I offered an amendment to provide much-needed funding for the Byrne Grant program early this summer. The Edward-Byrne-Justice Assistance Grant program, which is a critical source of funding for more than 800 anti-drug task forces in practically every state, was zeroed out in the Bush administration's budget. It was wrong for the administration to cut this program, which is why I supported fixing that mistake, and getting those critical dollars back into law enforcement.

I'm disappointed that this amendment failed, but I remain committed to shifting anti-drug funding to those programs that need it most, and will spend it most wisely. Who will be there to protect our children from those making and pushing meth if this program goes unfunded?

There is good news. Just last week, I was successful in passing two bipartisan amendments through the House of Representatives that aim to address the even larger problem of cracking down on countries who export the materials to create meth into the United States. In Minnesota, and many other states dealing with the meth problem, local law enforcement spends roughly 80 percent of its time fighting small meth labs that produce only approximately 20 percent of the meth on our streets. However, they lack the tools and resources to go after the source of the other 80 percent of the meth, international super labs.

To be able to fight these super labs, I authored an amendment that asked the State Department to report the five largest exporters and importers of pseudoephedrine, and make sure that these countries are fully cooperating with U.S. law enforcement to prevent its misuse and diversion. Those countries that do not cooperate fully with the U.S. government stand to lose their foreign assistance as a consequence. This puts meth on the same footing as drugs like heroin and cocaine. Already, the State Department is asking us to wait, but this drug crisis is far too damaging for us to wait for the State Department to get its act together. I will continue to aggressively push federal agencies to do all they can to solve this problem.

We must continue to work hard on the federal level, to make sure that our local law enforcement and communities have the tools and resources they need to fight this war against methamphetamine, and keep our kids safe. We must send a signal to the pushers of this dangerous drug that they are not welcome in our communities.
